My Little Wesley
25 Dec. 1898

Says Berkie to Nixon
Dear Uncle I'm fixing ^{some fun}
A problem to ~~set~~ ^{you} you think ~~still~~ About Silver & gold
All traded & sold
At the ratio of sixteen to one.

I've taken an ounce
To have you pronounce
How many gold dollars ^{twill make}
Of ~~grains~~ ^{eighty} twenty-five
And ~~half~~ ^{as you} ~~twice~~
Each dollar of gold will take.

Says Nixon to Berkie
My boy you are jerky
Just tell me of silver the same
Four twelve & a half ($4\frac{1}{2}$)
Even if I laugh
A dollar of silver will frame

And how much of each
I wish you to teach
Will balance us both on the scale
Four hundred & three Will balance up me
And sixty will tell your tale.

Feb.

Mon. 10.

Went to town to see Mr. Crosby in regard to the purchase of the Bon Agua Springs property. Could not determine what we wished to know and so adjourned the conference till tomorrow. Came home and worked till night.

Tu. 11.

Went again to city and closed deal for Bon Agua Springs.

Wed. 12.

Worked at my wood.

Th. 13.

The same. In afternoon kept house while Annie and Cornel went to hear Moody preach at the tabernacle. — yesterday.

Fri. 14.

Worked all day at some repairs. At night took Waterwood to the Tabernacle to hear Moody preach.

Sat. 15.

Looking after patients and working a little in shop. It is quite cold today.

Sun. 16.

Read. Cornel came so he had to stay from Sunday school. The first he has missed in a long time.

Mon. 17.

Cold and rainy. Spent the day at reading and writing.

Tu. 18.

The same.

Wed. 19.

Repairing.

Th. 20.

Cold and windy. Worked in Mr. Hitt's yard.

Fri. 21.

Warmer. Worked at wood and read. Today Waterwood spoke a fine little piece on Washington which I composed for him last night. He had prepared a piece but found out of school that two others had committed the same piece.

Sat. 22.

As we had no easy piece at hand I took up a scratch-book and at a single effort struck off the following which here appears without correction.

Washington.

A gracious child with manners mild
He was his father's pride
Who taught him well the truth to tell Whatever might betide.

A gallant youth who told the truth
And earned the greatest name
He prized the right more than the right
And virtue more than fame.

As scarce grown man he led the van
On Braddock's fatal field
Thus early life with care was ripe
But honor was his shield.

At middle life he led the strife
To free his native land
No thought of self or power or self
But of his gallant band.

In tent nor field he did not yield
But kept his trust in God
Who heard his prayer and kept him there Until the British fled.

His children there - his countrymen -
Called him to save their land
He sheathed his sword and trusted God
Who blessed his faithful band.

Feb.

And now his name and world-wide fame
Are sung from sun to sun
His praises run from sire to son
All love our Washington.

He committed this before bedtime and recited it today.

Sat. 22.

Beautiful day walked to the city and back and worked till night though suffering extremely. In my anxiety to complete some work I labored too hard and suffer intensely.

Sun. 23.

Warmer and cloudy. Reading and writing all day. Mr. Bennett and Mr. Rutledge both called today.

Mon. 24.

Suffering with a severe cold and somewhat hoarse. Spent the day looking after patients and working in yard.

Tu. 25.

The same.

Wed. 26.

The same.

Th. 27.

Went to the city in the forenoon. In afternoon worked about little Grace's grave. At night went to hear Wm. C. Woodruff in The Gilded Fool. He is probably the finest comedian on the continent.

Fri. 28.

My hoarseness is much worse. Rained all day. Looked after patients which made me worse.

Sat. 29.

Much worse. Throat quite sore. Walked and worked incessantly most of day. Think most of my patients are not suffering as much as I. Gaterwood is quite sick with measles.

1896.

having come home from school yesterday broken out. I had expected to go to Bon Aqua in Hickman Co. but was forced to postpone the trip.

Mar.

Sun. 1.

Cloudy and windy. Unable to speak aloud. I stay indoors and read and write.

Mon. 2.

Worked at the stone arches which I am constructing at little Grace's grave to bear flowers.

Tu. 3.

The same.

Wed. 4.

Busy with patients and writing.

Th. 5.

Rainy. Read, wrote, looked after patients and worked a little in yard.

Fri. 6.

Very rainy. Had intended to go to Bon Aqua but weather was too inclement. Spent the day in looking after patients.

Sat. 7.

Beautiful day. Worked a little about the grounds, planting some roses at Grace's grave and visiting a few patients.

Sun. 8.

A bright day. Spent most of day at reading. The grass is green and already long enough to furnish good pasture. The shoots on the roses are from one to two inches long.

Mon. 9.

A genial sunny day. Took the 7:15 train for Bon Aqua 40 miles distant. Took Counsel along to give him a ride and a day in the country. He watched the landscape attentively through the car window all the way down but said little. He was feeling badly, was hoarse and did not enjoy his trip.

as if well. We had our lunch with us and at Bon Aqua were met by Andy Broos. and driven down to the springs.
Here we spent a good part of the day examining the property and planning improvements and improvements. As soon as the noon dinner was over with great relish except Counsel seated on the bridge that spanned the sparkling stream. We visited Mrs.
Wolf - an elderly lady who occupies one of the cottages and learned a good deal about the mismanagement and abuse of the property. Near sunset we drove to the station and were soon on our way homeward. I spread my overcoat in the seat to make a pillow for Counsel who slept nearly all the way to Nashville. We reached home about 10:30 P.M.

Tu. 10.

Busy with patients both at home and in neighborhood. Counsel was taken with measles today which accounts for his indisposition of yesterday.

Wed. 11.

Measles broke out with measles today while Hattie shows the characteristic cough and restlessness. Our hands are full.

Th. 12.

The same.

Fri. 13.

The same. Hattie is covered with the eruption. Our north parlor is a hospital, in which may be heard a medley of coughs, groans, distress demands, as for water, stories, &c, &c.

Sat. 14.

The day is a grand one. Counsel is getting 6 1896.

Mar.

A little better. Wesley and Nettie much worse. To add to the difficulties of the situation the mother is back. I have a number of other patients with measles, diphtheria, etc.

Sun. 5.

Rainy. Spent the dull, gloomy day nursing the children.

Mon. 16.

My time is divided between the patients in doors and out of doors.

Tue. 17.

The same. Connel got up today.

Wed. 18.

The same. Wesley got up today.

Th. 19.

Very cold wind with mingled snow and rain. I spent the day in as usual among my patients and in nursing the children, telling them stories, reading a little and sometimes playing with the children. Connel is back and has made them suffer. Mr. A. S. Rutledge called this evening and asked for an extension of time on his note.

Fri. 20

We are still busy with the measles at home and abroad. Connel took his examination today for entering school and was assigned to same grade as Watson (4th B.)

Sat. 21

Nettie is city and back and then worked at my work. Nettie is better.

Sun. 22

At home and about among patients

Mon. 23

Very rainy. I read and taught the children.
Connel started to school for the first time.

Mar.

- Tu. 24. I am busy about the yard and wood pile.
- Wed. 25. The same.
- Th. 26. Very warm. The same.
- Fri. 27. Working with Mr. Nelson at setting trees and clearing up around the house.
- Sat. 28. I go on clearing up and working about the yard.
- Sun. 29. Very warm. Reading and writing letters.
- Mon. 30. Hauled stone to build a rockery in front of garden in the forenoon. In the afternoon worked about the yard.
- Tu. 31. It rained all day. Read and visited patients.
- Wed. 3. Took the morning train with Wesley to Box Agha where we were to meet Mr. Bennett and Mr. Overby and confer in regard to building a small hotel. We all lunched together and after spending the day took the evening train and reached home about 9:30 P.M. Wesley enjoyed the trip very much though he slept all the way home. The work is progressing slowly, enjoying the day out among these high hills and picturesque streams.
- Sat. 4. I am busy reading, writing & small jobs.

Sun. 5.

A golden day which I spent in reading and recreation with the children. While reading by the fountain b.t. Chamber the crowd moved till the Shanks came to order, we left to his sisters, Mrs. Shanksfield, at 11 A.M. I then left on my way to the court on his sister's case. I promptly refused to give any previous reference which he attempted to require, by some vigorous argument coupled with positive refusal I convinced him of the uselessness of his attempt to impose a servile drudgery on me while he exalted Prof. Briggs and minimized my long faithful service. It was a late hour to propose a conference on the Briggs and his case. I then changed the hour. Both parties left at 10 P.M. George summarizing my opinion found upon three years of observation. Prof. Briggs in a hour later publicly ridiculed my conclusion asserting she was not seriously sick and strange to say this hasty decision of his infatuated the friends with a flood of tears. They fought that they had called him last night with the announcement that she was dying. They now seem to be sorry that they were so late last night. A confident and assistant self-sufficiency has suddenly enveloped the crowd who were so lately distressed last night. The crowd began to laugh uproariously at what he considers my mistake. I simply say this opinion is not valuable to me. I will wait and see if these two worthy persons do not change their opinion and their laugh.

Mon. 6 Saw nothing in the court.

Tu. 7.

Thurs.

Wed. 8

Went to the city and worked about the yard.

Th. 9.

While placing some shells on little Grace's grave I heard a step on the walk and looking up saw my old college comrade Dr. O. W. Ward of Duncan Falls, O. I spent the remainder of the day with him showing him about the city.

Fri. 10

Spent the day with Dr. Ward going to the Centennial grounds and capital in the forenoon and in the afternoon driving to the old Resbank nursery and to the Watson house and in the evening entertaining him at home.

Sat. 11

Though feeling badly I went with Dr. Ward to the Reservoir, Ft. Wayne, the old Confederate cemetery and homes. He left me at 3 o'clock for Chatham, N. C.

Sun. 12.

Spent the day in reading, writing, and looking after patients. Mr. & Mrs. Todd spent the afternoon. There are pleasant Yankees boarding with Mrs. Stanfield who have taken some bitterness in us partly from the fact that we too are considered Yankees. Their home is in Mexico.

Mon. 13.

At 10 P.M. last night I fell asleep wondering how I could construct some new and novel kind of arch work with which I had left over from my large double arch. At midnight I awoke with the new novel yet very simple design complete.

Feel badly but divide the day between patients and reading and writing and work at the fountain.

Sept. 1.

In the morning we hitched up Annie and Annie and I drove to the Centennial grounds and stayed by car. Was out through the city at 10:30 A.M. She behaved very nicely. This was Annie's first ride and she was a little nervous part of the time as she can become familiar with riding and of the buff whenever she does not walk line along. On returning I found the children waiting for their promised ride. As the three boys were clambering into the buggy little Hattie whom Maude had proposed taking at home asserted her right vigorously insisting there was a place in there for Hattie and that this did want to ride. So all were piled in together and for the first time in a long while stopping for an hour at Mrs. Templeton's to see some patients. The afternoon was perfect and pleasant with breeze and balme the remainder of it was spent about the pretty yard around the fountain and later about the babbling stream which further led with my pleasure or splashed and waded with my little enjoyment. Still later Annie and I went to the garden to see the flowers which have with the help of the sun by the fountain side. All the day enjoyable day, but all and I trust all are grateful and thankful. The yard is filled with the song of birds which have already begun the pleasant chirp of spring. Already the little American sparrow is building in the honey suckle by the fountain the trellis of which furnishes a suitable seat. The cockeries are growing white and ^{very} more beautiful. Through the green branches they present a beautiful contrast with the surrounding. Newly come they are in the garden and to us a great joy and ^{very} much enjoyed.

 May it be a place of beauty and an enjoyment, of serene of profound thankfulness of food and perfect gifts of memory its convenience pleasant house it has sacrificed with a permanent loss for each other and for the greatest as we have planned and progressed in this work of innocent + tender association + labor. All these plants & of trees stones and strangely and sweetly associated with hours of tenderest devotion, purest love and deepest gratitude. May God bless it, its become, its history, its past, its present and its future our own good and his glory. With the rock in place of the old one and the simplest and tenderest ties. Directly in front of the library between two pretty little rustic arches already adorned with budding roses lies the little green mound beneath which sleeps our little Anne, dear in every memory, a veritable bud of promise whose coming and whose short stay was crowded as her departure was crowned with a purer and deeper love; a profounder thoughtfulness and an opening usefulness scarcely felt before.

 This little mound is surrounded by the kindest of all. About the middle of the front of the yard I have constructed a large double arch 8 or 9 ft. high, the arches crossing at right angles to each other. They are built by a shell. They are built of jagged stone and represent in their various aspects the Roman and the Gothic styles of architecture combining by their union across them combining strength, beauty, harmony, symmetry and the representation of the central emblem of modern faith and progress. This is very striking and beautiful to me and is much admired by others. I have thought sometimes that it might prove a place where we could go to think and speak and act kindly gently and tenderly. May Heaven bless it by keep its memories pure and sacred and from this labor and thought of mine evolve something useful, sweet and edifying when I am not. The other little piece of rock-work which I will mention and briefly describe is to me very pretty and of course dearer to me than it would be to those who do not understand or enter into the history of its design. It consists of three rustic pillars gradually ascending each other in height

Apr.

at the top of the page where they are mounted by a painted stone upon the top of which is a shell. To me it represents the strength, the fragile and permanent associated with the mathematical philosophy of the triangle. It also suggests the wonderful beauties of the trinity which seem to me always associated with the mathematical nature of the triangle and the various degrees of the perfect in geometric form. As to its strength, its suggestive sentiment and its strange history it will always be dear to me and I hope my dearest earthly friend will always associate with it the pleasant memories which cluster about it in my mind and long regard it as an emblem of a brightest, best and blessed hope. May it bring comfort to be more than a consolation to our patient wife my dear children and all who know me that when they gather about it and recall its history, its memories and its humble authors.

Sun. 1

A pleasant day spent in reading and walking among the trees and grounds. How much we have to be thankful for. Father, increase our gratitude, our faith, our usefulness and our hope.

Mon. 20. Went to the city in the forenoon. Worked in the yard in the afternoon.

Tu. 21. Working with my plants and trees.

Wed. 22. Went to the city to see Capt. Darley in regard to pass our N+C to Bon Aqua. Could not find him. While waiting

Apr. went to Federal court room in custom house and listened to the trial of one case. Came home and worked till night.

Th. 22. Went again to see Capt. Danley formed him and procured a 100 min. ticket. Returned and helped clean house in afternoon and made frequent visits to some patients.

Fri. 24. Worked at helping clean house and going to see patients.

Sat. 25. The same. I am very, very tired tonight.

Sun. 26. Still visiting patients and reading.

Mon. 27. Wet and rainy in the morning which prevented me from going to Bon Aqua as I desired. I spent the day in writing and being interrupted. It is pleasant and breezy since the rain and everything is putting at its greenest and best. The locust trees are robed in white, the roses are in bloom and honeysuckles are beginning to burst forth.

Tu. 28. At work till breakfast after which took 7:15 train for Bon Aqua where I spent the day helping to plan and push the work. Took 5:30 P.M. train for home and Wesley fell asleep directly and slept all the way home.

Wed. 29. Reading and working in yard.

Th. 30. The same.

May.
Fri. 1. Same as the former. In the afternoon

May took a drive.

Sat. 2. Working among my vines and reading and writing letters.

Sun. 3. Reading and enduring unnecessary interruptions by undesirable callers.

Mon 4. Went to the city with Mr. Burch to look at some bedroom sets which we intended purchasing for cottages at Bon Aqua. They were gone. After making some purchases I went to the Nicholas House to locate a well. Came home and spent the afternoon among the delightful pages of Ben Hur.

Tu. 5. Wrote letters and read during the forenoon. In the afternoon Annie and I drove out the Dickinson place crossing the Bird Creek pike and on over to White's Creek pike which we followed to Moman's Cross - thence by way of the High Bridge and St. Catharine back to the city and home. We found the children at play in the yard and ready for their ride. I took them for a short drive with which they were delighted. When I returned at sunset I unloaded four happy little beasts who were as joyful as passengers who have crossed an ocean.

Wed. 6. Got up early to go to Bon Aqua. Worley had just risen and asserted that he must go along. I tried to dissuade him but he put up a vociferous protest and persisted in dragging himself until permitted to accompany me and I then for the trip. The day was warm.

and the boat had been practically spoiled. except that I will if we get more wood-ticks on no than previously. Wesley insisting that he had more than four.

Th. 7.

Nothing new today and nothing new. While writing in my summer house about 4 P.M. Dr. Ward again appeared on the walk. He was making another excursion trip south but called to leave me examining him again. He seems very anxious about himself and his cause. We spent the evening pleasantly together. What a weight of sadness seems to press on his face.

Fri. 8.

Spent the day with Dr. Ward in pleasant conversation about the past and present. He is contemplating a sale and removal South. He left at 2 o'clock for Columbia intending to go on to Panama.

Sat. 9.

Spent the day with Ben and my companions. Our yard is like a fairy garden. It is thickly carpeted with soft green grass and clover punctured all over with an abundance of purple white clover blossoms with an abundance of purple. The air is thick with the perfume of these flowers and other plants. Here and there a white peak showing like little mountain peaks surrounded by green forests. The honey suckle clusters thickly over the water sent down by is a blaze of glory in gold and pink and white. Its long sprays drooping gracefully down over the cascades are closely studded with clusters of flowers which send the air with their fragrance. The little American sparrows rise in and out with food for her young nestled there. The roses hang in thick clusters about the summer-house and throughout the yard in many places and of many colors. The vines are creeping over the summer-house.

Sun 10

Spent the day among my books and flowers. Read a good deal in Bible and Ben Hur.

Mon

11 Off to Bon Aqua where I spent the day. I came home feeling badly.

Tu.

12 Went to city to meet Mrs. Overly and see about some furniture for Springs. I am feeling worse with fever.

Wed.

13 Intense aching. I try to read and have to give it up.

Th.

14 Chill followed by fever and aching. Read what I can to dull the pain.

Fr.

15 A little better. I devour Ben Hur all day.

Sat

16 Finished Ben Hur and help the little boy get the grass from yard. We wheel it to barn I barn their horse. Just got it in before a good rain fell.

Sun. 17

Writing in summer house which is covered with roses. They hang in festoons over the openings and inside and outside over the walls and one cannot enter the den without pushing aside the green spray all covered with dewy roses and buds in all stages of development. Among them is mingled the purple Clematis and the fragrant honey suckle in white and gold. In bustle bud also a Macarandella rose with delicate glossy foliage.

- May. spreads its slender jagged shoots hither and thither in rich profusion. The scene is so attractive that many stop to admire it.
- The whole day was home by callers till 1:30 P.M. when Mr and Mrs Todd came and took dinner with us and remained till 6 P.M. We enjoyed their visit and they seemed highly pleased.
- Mon. 18 Off again to Pon Aqua. What a hard day. Things go on so slowly and so badly. I shall be glad when it is all over. Got back at 9:30 very much fatigued.
- Tue. 19 Very sore and sick. I read and wrote and worked a little in P.M. In the A.M. I went with Mr Gundlach & Miss to try to locate a well for Mr Apple. It rained hard after our return.
- Wed. 20 Worked a little in P.M. but lay down a good part of A.M. More rain.
- Thu. 21 A little rain. I worked what I could.
- Fri. 22 Read and worked among my plants.
- Sat. 23. Cut thistles and read.
- Sun. 24. I tried to get an opportunity for a little outing, but the entire day was broken up by visitors who annoyed me sorely. However I read 8 or 10 chapters in the Bible & a little desultory reading.
- Mon. 25. A pleasant day. I read and wrote and work about the yard.
- Tu. 26. Went to Pon Aqua again & got home at 9:30 P.M. The hotel is nearly completed and will look quite pretty but imperfect. We had a heavy rain there of short duration but found on returning that it had been rather harder and accompanied with high wind at Nashville. However the air was cool and clear and sweet and everything had a pleasant look about our house though the storm had blown down a few limbs and broken a pretty tree on N. 2nd St.

Wed. 27. I cleared up some of the brush that had been blown down yesterday. An orioles nest with the hint to which it was fastened had been blown down throwing the little ones out in the grass. Annie had tied it up with a string to a limb overhead. I tied it up higher but it was still within easy reach and this seemed to fill the motherbird with gladness. She perched over head and gave vent to her feelings in a burst of joyous song. She flew back & forth about them there and seems perfectly satisfied. While sitting in the summerhouse waiting, a letter my former student and friend Dr. C. H. Harris, of Smith, P. arrived. Of course we were mutually glad to see each other. After dinner I took him in the buggy and drove to Vanderbilt University where we walked about the grounds, thence on to the Centerial grounds and back along Church St. to High Street to Broadway & then back by way of bridge through Russel St. a part of the old city, then through the country a piece beyond the city, then back to Gallatin Pike and through by the Driver place house.

I spent the day with Dr. Harris. In the forenoon we talked while Annie went to city. In the P.M.
we walked out into the country stopping at Joys and Lichys granthouses.

Fri. 29.

Spent the forenoon at home with Dr.
Harris. In the afternoon we went by car to the reservoir and walked by Ft.
Nagley to the Confederate cemetery. Took car home and spent remainder of day talking of the past and prospects of the future. I went with him at night to depot where he took train for home. It is 3 yrs since I saw him and I find him much changed. He is aging rapidly. Though only 29 he looks ten years older. His brow is already furrowed his temple sunken his cheek thin and now pained but he has a disappointed look in his face which contrasts sadly with his older time joyousness and vivacity.
Time is not very kind to him. He seems to have changed in fact as well as in face and form. He had no apparent love for scenery, or song or sentiment. Even his professional affairs only seemed to interest him in a coarse commercial way. I showed him my flowers, shrubs, building etc. Even my pretty fountain appeared only to strike him as stone and water. His mind seemed slower and heavier like one under the lethal influence of a drug or depressed by a constitutional malady. I tried to interest him in pretty scenes or in elevated sentiment or scientific discussion all to no purpose.
I came home meditating on the changes time had wrought and wondering if he was sincere in saying I looked better than when we

- May passed. He seemed to only desire to make money. May Heaven bless and keep him and make his labors useful and pleasant.
- Sat 30 At work among my flowers and vines till 4:30 P.M. when I took the children for a drive and on returning I drove to No. 7 Second St. to see Mrs. Guthrie.
- Sun 31 Very heavy rain. I read most of day. At night another heavy rain.
- June
Mon 1 The city is all dressed in decorations for the celebration of the 100 anniversary of the admission of Tennessee into the Union. The sky is all grey and "the thunder drum of heaven" is filling the vault with storm-mutterings. Rain-rain-rain. I stayed at home with Hattie while the children went with Annie to see the parade. They return about 4 P.M. filled with joy. I am quite as happy. Have seen so many parades they do not impress me much.
- Tu 2 Read in A.M. In P.M. took the three boys and went with Mr. Candall to see the sham battle on Shelby's Eastern. We got back at dark very weary. A crowd variously estimated from 5000 to 10000 swarmed all over the bottom and hills on both sides of river. There were 12 companies of cavalry & 1400 infantry. The effort was said to be a great success. At times the din was terrific. The smoke was everywhere, and to a host of pomps & fragrant, were very impressive.
- Wed 3 My home. Went to city for Mrs. Boush to make arrangements for her trip to Bon Aqua. I am so weary I can

Th. 4 Work in yard, read and go to several repairs on my house on Liberty St. I am very lame and very sad.

Fr. 5 The same, Quite warm. Every thing seems to go wrong.

Sat. 6 Same. All arrangements are aggravated.
Financial matters are looking very badly. I do not see how to avoid going in debt unless I can call a halt on expenses quickly. As I never lived in debt I can not bear the idea and hope Heaven will as often before at the right time help me out.
I am reading a good deal in Bible now and am fonder of it all the time. It is the universal theme for me to read 5 or 6 chapters daily. Now often I find passages that seem to apply to my own affairs most fittingly.

Sun. 7 Reading some. Many callers keep me annoyed.

Mon 8 Suffering a good deal,

Tu 9 Suffering and aching intensely. Have dysentery.

Wed 10 So sick I can scarcely get about the house. Still I do not give up wholly as I have a feeling I shall not long survive a confinement to bed.
Still I do not want much of this kind of life. My temperature is 104 F.

Th. 11 Much better but still suffering acutely. Mr. Cook, comes today to settle with me. I find I have put in much more than either of the others and that, while mine is all cash they are making a good profit on what they put

- June Delayed settlement till 1st prox. It already looks as if this would follow the examples of all the rest of partnership ventures - the others prosper at my expense.
- Fri. 12. Better. I get up early and mow a part of yard. Read and do light work rest of day.
- Sat. 13 Same. Quite cool. I am improving and feeling thankful.
- Sun 14 Callers all day long. Read some. Cool.
- Mon. 15 Cool and rainy. I read and write letters.
- Tue. 16 The same.
- Wed. 17 The same. Clearing in P.M. and warmer. I write in summer house while Annie makes a call on Mrs. Todd who soon leaves for her home in Maine. The boys are at the well with my large rubber alphabet printing signs. Little Nellie is with me - very few moments she has a paroxysm of coughing. She has whooping-cough.
- Th. 18 Still cool and cloudy with some rain. Went to city in A.M.

Still trying to work a little among my trees and vines. They came with her mother. While sitting under one of my trees by the gate a man and his wife walked up to inquire about the lot on the N.W. corner of Cleveland and Meridian. I told him it was not for sale but that I would sell them the one on the S.W. corner. We looked at it but as it was too small I suggested his buying another lot beside it from Rev. McRider and seeing both. They agreed to call tomorrow.

I found the place full of guests and all seemed to enjoy themselves & were much gratified to meet Rev. J. H. Bell of Lexington, Tenn. who had taken occasion in a former session to approve the moral management of the watering place. He assured me of his earnest support & said he had told others at Bon Aqua to pray for it. That another year if we carried it on in the same way he would tell it for us. As I had taken the part stand for this method of management and carried my points with some difficulty it was very gratifying to hear my course approved from this source. I enjoyed the day and felt better than on starting. We came home in a bright pleasant cool moonlight.

Th. 20. A bright day. I was deeply pained and disappointed this morning to find our warbling bird dead. I had become deeply attached to it and it seemed to recognize me at a distance always calling out in wild song and hopping and fluttering to meet me and like the robin I brought on like any

But now he is lying stiff and stiff in his cage. We all miss him sorely. His coming to us was so strange. Gatewood took a little paper box and labeled it "Our Bob, The Singer." In this he placed the dead mouse and buried it beside our little Grace. With tears of sincere grief. I cannot see an insect without thinking of him and the pleasure it gave both.  the quarters of Father & Mother in the back utterly exhausted and lay upon the ground in the shade of the house for an hour or so. The boys got the Garrison seemed to be slightly improved and his importance as a host which considering the excellence of his work and his generosity was very pardon-which the boys joined till sunset. They then proceeded to do up the night work after which we all went up

This was followed by the arrival of mamma & Katie after which we all retired as usual though much later.

Fri. 11.

As the forenoon took a drive in the afternoon looked after patients and such. I forgot to mention yesterday the receipt of the following telegram. Duncan's Falls, O. Sept 10 '96.
Dr. H. C. Gatenwood, Nashville, Tenn.

The Dr. died this morning with typhoid fever. Funeral Sat. at 10:30.

Mrs. O. W. Ward.

The startling announcement of the death of my college mate and friend impressed me deeply and sadly. He had visited me twice this summer & I had expected to see him again possibly this autumn. I almost fancy I hear his receding footsteps as he walked away on his last visit. We sat in the garden house and talked of our past lives of our college days and of our plans for the future. He seemed to enjoy recalling the past with the dearest zest. He seemed so sad, as you know I had seen him. He was deeply concerned about his physical condition and appeared most desirous of having my opinion as to its progress. I advised him to give up his professional work. I had always contemplated him as my survivor in years and labor. I can scarcely realize the fact that he is gone. With health so badly broken I have been amazed at God's goodness in prolonging my life while others with more vigor and promise were taken away. It is wonderful past finding out. I look back and think of the many pleasant hours we spent together in the school room, the classroom and the walks of professional life as well as our rambles about New York and Brooklyn and our quiet walks in the country. These pleasant memories are cut short by the reflection that my comrade and friend is gone forever. I had thought I should meet him again and I wish in a brighter land under skies where brilliant works exult in splendor where all is peace and sweetness and love I hope to clasp his hand in the recognition of a pleasant past and a better future.

Sat. 12.

Very warm and oppressive. At the concert exhibition of the boys I consented to their hatching up and driving me to the city in the afternoon. Just before starting a fine shower fell which laid the dust completely and cooled the atmosphere. As we approached the city center the clouds were very muddy from heavy rain. Purchased some white clover seed and drove home to find some patients from a distance waiting. I waited upon them & then the shades of evening having fallen over the yard we completed the watering of the plants thus closing the week's labor in which I accomplished more than usual & strange. I mean to have done it better. My corn and hay fodder are all stored for the winter and everything is in a fine condition about the place except painting my house and a few smaller jobs in tree-planting, &c.

Sun. 13.

Spent the forenoon in reading & dictating while Annie wrote. It has been very warm but the kind breezes are beginning to ruffle the leaves & swift with refreshing touch the language of a passing or of a fresh but do not approximate. The breeze of autumn is on us. The day grows misty under foot. A few clouds flit lazily around the sky. Somehow the hazy autumnal images of my college days are recalled and almost surely brings the memories of my college days. I see again the spreading elms of old Hawthorne the dancing waters of Monk Brook the granite hills of New Hampshire the lecture room the professors - the kind-hearted students - all scattered - many dead. I see busy New York, its blue bay the Hudson, the great ships, Central Park, busy Broadway and all the accompaniments of metropolitan life. There here one with his gun doubtless they are still coming in important

A glorious golden day which I spent with my patients and books. In the evening went to the city to see the great Bryan parade. The evening was typical for the purpose and the parade was tremendous. About 6000 working men followed the carriage of Mr. Bryan from the depot to the City market and this throng was dissimular when contrasted with the crowds which poured over the streets from side to side like sand dunes in a bed. I secured a good position with others on the elevated steps of the stone building on the corner of Church & Vine from which I could see without disturbance the immense throng as it poured like a great sea of lava after the carriage drawn by four white horses which contained their hero. The air was filled with the din of brass, yells, tin horns, the boom of cannons, the flare of rockets and fire works a perfect bedlam of enthusiasm.
 Mr. Bryan rode in an open carriage which was carried off the ground by his enthusiastic admirers. He smiled pleasantly upon all, bowing occasionally to some thousands here & there.
 After the throng had gone by I took a walk

Oct

water to the fountain. A crowd of forty or fifty people surged about the speakers stand. Sixteen trained voices sang Mr. Perry's favorite campaign song "Home, Sweet Home" after which he was introduced by Senator Bate and although this was his 13th speech today his voice rose loud and clear above the din of wheels, street cars, conversation &c at the distance of 100 yds. Being quite lame I left the crowd soon after he began to speak and took a car for home.
 Passing the Public Square at which was assembled another large crowd waiting for him to come. He addressed this crowd and another at Putnam's park by 12:30 P.M. making 13 speeches today after which he was entertained briefly at the Nicholson and soon after left by train for Indiana where he is to speak tomorrow. His audience is phenomenal. His speeches are polished, graceful, scholarly, original and varied. There is a richness of presentation, a variety and richness of expression, an honest earnestness an energy of action and expression which is highly entertaining. Combined with this is a classic face, pale brow, piercing luminous eyes an intense demeanor with a pleasing grace and sparkling vivacity. In many ways he is a remarkable man - a great American - sincere and entirely devoted to his cause. This is highly refreshing to contemplate when contrasted with the miserable psychopathic treachery of his chief competitor.

9. Went after patients and in the forenoon in the afternoon Anne and I drove to Mr. Curtis's beyond the high bridge of which we watched the mare I climbed a high hill to locate a well after which we drove home having a very pleasant trip. At night after the story was told to the little ones, I went to the Vendome to see Louis James's Spartacus. It is an exceedingly dramatic and tragic production very difficult to perform yet Mr. James has required in it the reputation of equalling the few great masters who would attempt it. It is exceedingly difficult to sustain such intense and elevated tragic passion commingled with the sagacity and nobility of the general judicious management of the officer the generous magnanimity and forgiving weakness, the kindness of heart, the noble indignation, the tender affection and the patriotic pride all ingeniously commingled and so cleverly displayed in this masterful drama. The more I have thought about it since the more the ability and fitness of Mr. James for this piece have become apparent. I much doubt if he has an equal in Spartacus. It is well in this connection to remember that but few have attempted it, prominent among whom were Mac Culloch and Edwin Forrest. Walter of Chicago for ten years a supporter of Edwin Forrest. For several years

Th. 22. | Drove in the forenoon, read in the afternoon while Annie went to the Masonic theater to hear Walker Whiteside in Eugene Aram. At night I went to hear him in Hamlet. The play lasted till midnight giving me an excellent chance to walk home but the evening was very pleasant and I did not mind the walk. While my opinion on the acting performance is very crude I must accord Mr. W. a passing line for my future reference.

Taken altogether his production of Hamlet was very creditable. In some parts excellent. It is refined and delicate in some parts almost to effeminacy. He produces the mad scene with a peculiar address and modulation which is quite consistent with a careful study of the play. While there was scarcely that height of stormy passion exhibited in the hot indignation which would excite one to "drink hot blood" it must be remembered that the entire play was conducted on smooth and level lines with the evident intention of faithfully portraying every part instead of the merely dramatic. The mild, sad, romantic and almost severely refined as well as sadly decorated prince was fully represented. Mr. Whiteside has a very fine voice which he uses with excellent effect in the heavier parts and this vocal strength and richness supports a strength and vigor and robustness of such degree so that it quite overcomes the impression of slightness and delicacy so prominent in his person. Viewing his attempt to impersonate the difficult role of a man whose in which are prominently displayed the humors of methodical calculation careful retrospection, grief, love, craft indignation, conscientious desire and narrowing perspective from a scientific standpoint the magnitude of the task becomes apparent. His doubt as to whether the ghost were really his friend is made to play a prominent part in making his resolution richer. After the conference however with the dread visitor he leaps with mad resolution to a conclusion and determination of revenge. Subsequently however he wavers in this resolution and the varied conflicts between grief, revenge and mere policy are very clearly delineated. Throughout the play Mr. W-exhibits great gracefulness of movement and action, excellent proficiency in recitation and a careful survey of the play as a whole. His delivery is rather rapid even in those parts in which he is supposed to be solemnly soliloquizing. There is an intelligent and pleasurable presentation of many of the subordinate parts in the play which are often quite overlooked but which stamp Mr. W- as an accurate and painstaking player. One could almost wish that wider differences were shown in the mad prince before and after he had put his "antic notions" on and began his difficult dissembling. However it must be borne in mind that the difficulties of this play have baffled nearly all great players - that much difference of opinion exists among the scholars who have studied it that many eminent and painstaking students have decided that the prince of Denmark

Oct.

was a palpable creation and absolutely real while others have only been able to rank him as the prince of dissemblers. In the rare case it is seen that under differences need be manifested. I am always prone to look upon this character from a modest standpoint and to regard the brilliant young man as easily swayed as passing with refined but storm-tossed passion a wandering purpose to avenge the death of his idolized father while his noble nature shrank from the sanguinary consummation and his elevated love of justice and fairness restrained the willing hand and wrought such fierce conflict between passion and judgment as to bring his noble actions dangerously near the too ordinary standards of humanity. Mr. H. has portrayed these points with a delicacy and grace exceedingly remarkable. Altogether he was very effective, scholarly and refined. He is probably the best representative of Humboldt we have known since Edwin Forster.

Fr. 23. A sky of steel which gently dropped a soft mist at intervals throughout the day. The temperature was pleasant and the weeping poplars made the dry grass lift up its green head. It is my fifty-first birthday. I have again abundant cause for thankfulness that God has exempted me from my life which has so often seemed to me almost utterly worthless. Though I have suffered much the past year and particularly this autumn and thought I have been more emaciated than I was a year ago I can not otherwise discover such marked loss in health and strength or any sufferings during the year would seem to imply. Though I have suffered much I have deeply enjoyed a domestic tranquillity and quietness which grow dearer as the days go by. We have all enjoyed ourselves together at the fireside, at the table in our walks and talks, our drives and plays and various other enjoyments. Our time has rippled by during the year like a sweet, clear stream with green and fleecy banks and babbling waters. For the most part we have been very happy. Even the loss of our little one seemed to bear dear fruits of contentment and hope. Already we have gathered about the little stone arches at the grave and plucked scores of white roses planted only a few months ago. How prophetic this seems. How sweet that innocent memory. How clearly it has drawn us all together. Thank God, our little Grace had her mission and filled it grandly. I wonder how soon others will come to pluck white flowers and think of me. And yet this brings refreshing of sadness. I have felt something of a brighter hope in the future a serene contentment in the present. It has been my earnest, daily and almost hourly prayer to be useful. Sometimes I see bright little spots of usefulness which for a moment illumine my purposes and hopes. Something of a strange quiet conviction occasionally steals upon me that I am more useful than I may think or understand and this feeling makes me better satisfied. I have wondered too in what way I could be useful and while contemplating my wasted strength as compared with my vigorous and vigorous past I could scarcely see how much of real good could come out of my impaired condition. My greatest pleasure is in contemplating something pure, or good or beautiful in which we can all share of thus his pleasant memories and his genial influences on live better and nobler than mine. Perhaps I have grown fonder of contemplation than ever before. My fancy too is as vivid and frequently indulges it in pleasant flights among the possibilities of science from the plain and palpable to the vague and indefinite and almost infinite. Sometimes I almost imagine the silent but sentient universe of the leaves that rustle in the breeze, of the flowers that spread the language of their presence so plainly on our ^{dull} senses - of the music of falling shadows - of light - of spirit wings - of an infinite number of sweet influences where divine truth has made us better and whose sweet and perfect music we are only too comprehend when unfettered from the grossness of flesh. Then let us all enjoy this together. It will be a divine inspiration, possibly a divine language where to join wings we are scarcely prepared to grasp. I know not if my mission will last till another anniversary, but God knows and in his morning hands I rest and strive and comfort with the kind influences of a pleasant home and the prayers of those who cluster about me at evening. May God bless and keep us all and make us nobler, better and purer.

Oct. Children and lastly heard their evening prayer. told their story during which little Hettie fell asleep on the floor with ^{her} feet, resting on the round of a chair after ^{which} I put them all to bed and then lay down before the fire and gratified the little dog who teased me for a play while I waited for Annie to come home from an evening call. After this we read and wrote till a late hour when retired.

Mon. 26. Heard lessons in the forenoon. The children overlooking the time for starting were late and finding the gate closed returned to Watmore who at the head of his class it was a severe lesson to him. In the afternoon drove to city.

- Wed 2 Same but warmer.
- Th 3 Warm and pleasant. In P.M. went to hear Fred Wade in Lear. It was a very careful and scholarly production and was staged in a most perfect and accurate manner. I enjoyed it very much but do not think Mr W. equals his Richard III. He is always accurate, diligent and scholarly but while great in Lear he is still greater in Richard III.
- Fri 4 Reading and looking after patients.
- Sat 5 Same in A.M. In P.M. took Annie and Hetta for drive and returned at the three o'clock drive. At night told them an improved story about "Billy Lick" one of their mother's boys and his son of "Granny's shore" for Little Eddie May a country orphan boy. It was very popular.

- Dec 1 one line unbuckled causing her to turn around and walk into wire fence & break the shafts and harness. Fortunately she stopped for all to get out and no one was hurt.
- Tu 8 Rainy nearly all day very hard.
- Wed 9 Cleared up. Annie went to Mr Sharps funeral and I kept house. Read and wrote letters. In P.M. went to see some patients.
- Th 10 A perfect spring like day. I am almost speechless. Read all day.
- Fri 11 A golden sultry day. Went to city in A.M. walking both way and stopping at Hackworth shop to get work done for buggy. In P.M. read "Big Waffington" & looked after my workmen.
- Sat 12 Another glorious day. I worked some about yard and read.
- Sun 13 An ideal spring morning. Children all off to Sunday school. I read.
- Mon 14 Cool. Looked after patients - fixed shafts of buggy and read.
- Tu 15 Rainy. Read and worked about home.
- Wed 16 Worked and looked after patients and walked to town. In evening drove the boys W. & L. to city.
- Th 17 To city with Mr Loundall to get a second hand barouche. It is a well worn affair but will do to take all the family out for a drive. Rained at night and grew colder.

Fri. 18. Worked, walked and read.

Sat. 19. Went to the city and made some Christmas preparations. In the forenoon looked after patients.

Sun. 20. Looked after patients and walked while Mr. Bennett took the mare and drove to the country.

Mon. 21. Looked after my patients, read and drove to city.

Tu. 22. The same.

Wed. 23. Visited patients in the forenoon. In the afternoon took the whole family in the barouche and drove to the city to make some purchases and let the children see the show windows and Christmas displays. Our little "Lee" was stolen today.

Th. 24. Visited patients and helped make preparations for Christmas. As night the boys went to the Finner while Annie and I worked at their Christmas tree. When after they were in bed we finished it before the North parlor fire. It was placed upon a table and though simply decorated it was very pretty.

Fri. 25. A very pretty day but cold. The children enjoyed their Xmas very much and we all enjoyed our Xmas dinner together. Cornelius and I drove to the city which procured

Dec and limited appearance.

Sat. 26. Ideal weather. Looked after patients and read.

Sun. 27. Golden weather though cool. Spent the forenoon with my patients and with the children. In the afternoon Annie & I walked about three miles.

Mon. 28. Went to city in A.M. In P.M. did some rustic work and went with the boys to get material from the hedges for rustic work.

Tue. 29. Still golden. Morning walked and looked after patients.

Wed. 30. The same. Sometimes during each day I try to draw some of the heroes and figures in the evening stories. The interest of the children in these black-board pictures is intense, and the saying of such characters are perfect scores of times throughout the day with great mimicry. They never tire of their evening stories and invariably insist on their prolongation. All drove to Guilford grounds.

- Sat. 7. The same.
- Sun. 8. Looked after patients & worked in shop.
- Mon. 9. Drove to city in the forenoon. In afternoon examined trees and visited patients.
- Tue. 10. Reading and writing.
- Wed. 11. Looked after patients and did some rustic work.
- Thu. 12. Drove to the city with Hattie and Wesley. It was a beautiful frosty morning ^{and} we all enjoyed the ride very much. Even Ellen Anne seemed to enjoy it. As usual I indulged my weakness as I passed the bookstore by buying some cheap books. It is easier for me to spend money for books than for bread. The next afternoon I am reminded of seeing a five mile walk - a barefoot boy of six years to borrow books from the township library. Yet a thousand pleasant memories cling about the handshakes of those days.

Jan.

Then I sat down at a piece of printed paper wrote fast, as in the ~~past~~ without drawing it down to read it. Now many little boys have scores of volumes any one of which would have been a treasure to me. Surely God is kinder in the years yet to go. Our lives grow more pleasant and our lives like one delightful dream or sparkling spring brook glides sweetly among the green and living monuments of a gracious Lord.

At night I told the children a long story (How Bertie made Junius cry) while Annie visited some of her friends up street. During the recital little Nettie as oft before took a chair-cushion for a pillow, the carpet for a bed and lay down at my feet to listen to the story while she fell asleep. After their sleep I put them all to bed, saying "Go to bed, my dear ones, in the ~~bedrooms~~ of the room. I began reading Campbell's translation of the New Testament while I waited for Annie to return. She was detained and I read the first, second and third Epistles of Peter, the ~~revelation~~ of John - 22 chapters in all - 52 pages in an other book of large size and was beginning another book when she returned. We did not sleep for some time after.

Wed. 13. Dull, persistent rain. Reading & writing nearly all day.

Th. 14. Worked as usual. I am some times but stronger than for months.

Fr. 15. Shortly after midnight called off to J. C. Grahams and got back at sunrise. Then read and worked hard till noon. In P.M.
Annie and I drove to City. At night I went to represent to me that Mr. Keene in Richard III. He is the best of the school of actors such as Booth, Ford, McCarty, &c. According to his presentation of the character Richard was almost infinitely wicked, coarse, rough and shocking. As an actor Keene deserves among the first. His elocution is not far from that of Ward in the same play. He lacks the subtle, delicate and insinuating cunning so ably portrayed by Ward. The sinuous, serpentine gliding restlessness of Ward are also lacking. He exhibits greater boldness and though a coarser, a more consummate and accomplished villain than Ward. There is a finished, full and perfect scornful at every point which seems to lack the idea of progressive badness. Richard seems to be utterly, unchangeably firmly bad to start with. This precludes the idea of a progressive and intelligent badness with the active intellectual effort necessarily implied and which is so ably yet strikingly portrayed by Ward.

 Mr. Keene represents Richard as a consummate scoundrel, as perfect and formidable in the beginning as in the end. As an actor here as in Richard III. he probably has no rising superior. His forte is to act Richard and this he does with a zest, energy and fury which leaves only one impression that of the transcendent coarse and perfect character of the accomplished villain from the beginning. Although Mr. Keene gives a fine picture of Shakespeare's greatest historical character I could not help remarking the absence of the subtle, the only

Jan.

and keenly intellectual methods of Ward. In the sleeping scene before "Richard is himself again" he fails to give the expression of a deep and troubled, even tumultuous tempest of conscience so well portrayed by Wattle. Keene's representation in this scene is more like that of the raving of a maniac threatened of his purpose. Ward's that of a gigantic intellect devoted to the most malignant purpose, whole tortured with an unsparring conscience and torn by supreme fear. In the final sword scene between Richard and Richmond Keene does not equal Ward in graphic and terrible delineation of what is certainly the most tremendous combat ever played by Richard on the theater of life.

There was more of vigor, more of relentless and cruel fury in Ward than in Keene.

Throughout all Ward never relaxed his limping gait while toward the close Keene's crooked knee became straight. Keene seems to wear this play as an essential and respectable old garment with whose every thread, wrinkle and form he has become perfectly familiar. Ward seems to play it as an intellectual effort in which he is intensely absorbed and had no time for conscious external observation. Briefly both are great giants in this play each representing Richard from a different standpoint and each interpreting his conception of the character with unsurpassed vigor. Ward is the more scholarly and probably possesses greater historical accuracy. Keene is more skilful in the climactic action and brutality of character of the most unblushing malignity of man.

Fri. 22. A very beautiful day. I spent the forenoon at work about the yard and at reading and in the afternoon worked on a rustic peak which I am making from an old beam nearly 100 yrs. old.

Sat. 23. After the morning visit we all drove to town where I spent several hours attending to the mixed up tax matters and procuring books for the new boys who have just been promoted to the 5th P. grade. In the afternoon I was much exhausted and suffering severely. The boys have made an excellent record during this quarter. Gatewells average in 74 while Cornell's 87. The former not only led his class but every class in his floor consisting of over 100 pupils. The latter has made a splendid record when we take into account that he has not been one year in school & lacked help constantly with the school regulations and requirements prescribed by the

Sat. 13. I am suffering terribly with aching and pain throughout. At night I was exhausted and ready to lie down before the fire when Mr. Beckett came in and call me to his house where I was compelled to work very hard all night. It was an exceedingly trying night.

Sun. 14. Almost used up in voice and strength.
Left Mr. B's at about 11 o'clock in the A.M. but returning there as there during remainder of day and visiting several other patients consumed the time and my strength. I spent a terrible night.

Mon. 15.

I am very weary, but my heart is lighter than it often is when I have felt better, hence I hope to rest & sleep tonight. I have slept poorly for several nights and as I should enjoy a good sleep. Still I have been much worried my sleep does not seem to refresh me much and my suffering is greatly augmented which in turn prevents my sleep.

7. A typical lovely spring day but to me one of pain and distress. I could not even find a little to drive away the pain about my heart while a terrible aching pervaded my entire body. Toward evening I gradually wore away leaving me in severe pain of myself. Still I could not determine the feeling that I had somehow wasted a day. I could not see. Letters from our former neighborhood received today indicate that hell has run rampant there. Surely we did well to exchange our site of turmoil for a pleasant home here. I spent two hours lying on the old rustic couch (made from a tree trunk nearly 100 yrs. old) in front of the fountain listening to its merry music and watching the birds among the green leaves.

She was a steadfast friend, firm and pronounced as well as she lived the flower of her people.

Sat. 15 Pleasant All after Exposition-but myself I work faithfully writing and writing with mine and flower and writing. It is a day fit for the gods. All nature teems. The grass is like a golden lawn. Flowers the million. The air heavy with perfume. Chantrelers crowing in every direction. Birds singing and nesting. Bees muzzling the leaves. The lilac's feet at fountain overflowing. I can't say where and so green. No dust. A sky of cerulean hue. God given when Love and bliss triumphed. Every thing dear and sweet and everything growing dear and sweeter. May the dear good God give us hearts fitted to enjoy his goodness and love. It is one relief P.M. I will go and eat a lunch alone. How much I like to think the family are all enjoying the day also. Wesley wanted to stay with me but I persuaded him to go as I felt he would enjoy himself more out there. Oh if my health would only get good and God would vouchsafe me a useful and happy afternoon of life. He has always cared for me and mine in a striking manner and whenever I felt sad He soon brightened my way as with smile of gladness. Again & again let me thank Him. It was pleasant when the family got home. They were happy too but I thought they were as happy from return as from the trip.

Coal and windy. I read a good deal and spent some time with my patients. At evening we had a wood fire made from tough pieces of cuts from the old barn. As it rained and blew I told the evening story, all all went happily, to bed leaving Annie and me by the fire. She was tired and sleepy and I read while she slept on the lounge till 11 P.M.

Mon 17 Some warmer. Went to city to see some parties about selling some peas and then went on to the Centennial grounds where I stayed till 4:30 P.M. Then came home weary and pained and found nearly everything had gone wrong during day. I was of course sad at heart and retired early.

Spent most of forenoon with one of my hands and when the two older boys returned from school I took them and a basket of luncheon and joined the rest of the family at the Centennial they having preceded us. We spent the remainder of day here but I felt so badly I did not enjoy the trip very much.
- Wed. 2. Pursuing my usual routine at home.
- Th. 3. The same.
- Fri. 4. Cloudy with a little bit of rain. The wind this morning is from the Northland, is fresh and invigorating. I pursue my regular trend of duties.
- Sat. 5. Took Annie and Nettie and went to the Centennial leaving the three boys to keep house. We had a pleasant day and got back to find all right at home. We all enjoyed our day and our supper especially the boys who by mistake overlooked the bread and only had three slices - one each. We closed the evening work and I sat with my wife and discussed the merits of the pictures we saw in the parthenon.
- Sun. 6. Reading and visiting patients.
- Mon. 7. Drizzling slightly. Went to the Centennial. Spent a very painful day. Glad to get home.
- Tu. 8. Busy at work and with patients.
- Wed. 9. Hot. Saturday and I stayed at home.

while rest went to Centennial. We got our dinner and I ran about all day to see patients and wait on visitors. It was a dull uninteresting day. Mail brought a letter from Dr. Lyne stating he and Hugh Kenney would be here tomorrow. Well. I do not feel that either are very friendly to me but are to my benefit. So I will not hugely enjoy their visit.

Th. 10 Hot and dry. I continue to look after my patients and await the coming of the Stockport magnates. Night came on serene and beautiful. The moonlight made the surroundings look like a veritable fairyland. Our visitors have not arrived and we worship and enjoy alone.

Fr. 11 This is still better day at the Centennial. President McKinley and a few governors with staff. the U.S. soldiers & we are to parade. The weather is fair this morning with a good breeze. Nettie is not well. I will keep her and let the rest go. Off at 9 A.M. but Hello & I. 11:45 The cannons are booming. & I have been sitting under the big elm when for a time I swung her "high into the tree". Now she lies asleep by the swing. I am glad the rest are now enjoying themselves and think I am able to contribute slightly to their happiness. We spend the day together and at eve close & the boys return and we all lunch in summer house by light of Wicks Chinese lantern.

June.

Sat. 12 Our visitors having arrived last night we sat up late talking. In the morning I went after my patients and later I went to Centennial and spent the day with Mr Gornley and Mr Lyne. We came back at 5 P.M. and sat in yard and talked till midnight.

Sun. 13 Hot. 94° F. We all sit in shade and talk.

Mon. 14 The visitors go to the Centennial and I to see my patients.
At sunset they return and after supper leave for Ohio. Again we are alone in our home free to worship or work or play at will.

Tue. 15 Went out for a while to the Centennial but was not well and did not enjoy the trip. Very lame but worked some on return.

Wed. 16 Read and worked about home and with my patients.

Th. 17 Went to Centennial with Annie and Hattie.
Had a pleasant day and came home in a pleasant frame of mind.

Fri. 18 All day at home with my patients and my plants and my books.

Sat. 19 Annie and Wiley & I go to Centennial again. We spend the day pleasantly and lunch in the Agriculture building, near the stand where an old yeoman sells milk and cider which we buy to wet our repast. We enjoyed the trip very much especially to the Parthenon.

Sun. 20 At home as usual. Hot and dry.

Mon. 21 I am spending my time between my patients, my books and my plants. We have had showers which mitigate the heat.

Tu. 22 The same.

Wed. 23 Went to Centennial but did not feel well and came home early.

Th. 24 Very sick all day. I lay in hammock suffering & scarcely able to live.

Fri. 25 The pain not so intense as on yesterday but still sick. Ate a little and in P.M. made two trips to see patients.

Sat. 26 Annie and Correll went to Centennial and I went with Walter Cundall to Capitol to see a man about boring a well at the New Penitentiary. I came home at 1 P.M. and G. got our lunch ready and we ate in the kitchen. He then cleared up the dishes and swept the walks while I wrote. He is a lively little boy to work. At night Annie and Correll played at Centennial till concert and fireworks were over.

Sun. 27 Hot. Walked a good deal among patients.

Mon. 28 A little rain in morning. Went out with Walter Cundall to site of new penitentiary. Home at 3:30 P.M. and very weary and hungry.

Tu. 29 Busy with my patients. Not well. Hot.

Wed. 30 Hot and dry. A little professional work - some reading. Hot winds - awful.

July

- Th. 1 Went to city and looked after my patients.
- Fr. 2 Hot. Read and visited patient and operated on case of talipes ^(varo-) equinus.
- Sat. 3 Went with Walter Cundall to the Jackson house and then by car to Centennial where the boys had already preceded me. I only stayed till 3 P.M. when I left them in charge of Mr Pennock and came back.
- Sun. 4 Hot. Almost no patients and looks like rain in eve.
- Mon 5 Drove with all the boys to town to get fire crackers and candy for a Fourth of July celebration which they held in front yard with Prof. Webb's children. Late in day.
- Tu 6 Up all night last night, and so feel much exhausted. Was up all night in confinement case at Roth Traubers on Josephine St. Had a hard busy day. It is very hot.
- Wed 7 Hot. Read and visited patients most of day. In P.M. had a fine rain.
- Th. 8 Same.
- Fr. 9 Cooler. Still looking after my patients.
- Sat. 10 Hettie and I stay at home while Annie and boys go to Centennial to attend childrens concert by Mrs Innes. I go to see patients and Hettie stays alone contented till I come. I wrote four letters in summer house and she took them to mail box at corner of Mendocino and Arriington Sts while I got our dinner ready.

Sun. 11

Cooler. I go to see some patients and adjust cast on child's foot. Later read and write letter to Joe Boyer.

Mon. 12

Cool. Took Neddy and Hattie to Centennial. Both grew hungry at 10 A.M. and it was pleasing and amusing to see the two who would only eat sparingly at home & that after solicitation ~~the~~ ^{the} remaining part of the little lunch we had taken along and eating it as we walked through the building. We lunched early in shade near the nursery and then we walked about till 3 P.M. and came home.

Tu. 13

Another good rain. Reading and writing.

Wed. 14

Took entire family to Centennial & spent entire day. It was a cool and pleasant day. The children enjoyed the trip very much. I went with Annie to Parthenon and studied the pictures. The children came and went at will. We lunched near the nursery and the children used the swings while they ate. All were very happy. It was a pleasant day to all and such a day as I hope God may often send. We all were happy and free from care and all were thankful God bless the day. A way among flowers and fine pictures by the lake. Hope to go again soon and take all to enjoy in common the pleasant scene and the pleasant things found there.

Th. 15

A gray sky and a little rain all through the day at times. I read and write. Think God-Allan well.

82 July.

Fri. 16. Looked after patients and worked among my trees.

Sat. 17. Annie and I went to Antennial. The day was very pleasant and breezy. We spent most of the day in Partimon with the pictures. Reached home after sunset and found the boys had done the evening work and were delivering the milk. They were glad to see us back. They had got their own dinner and had a picnic in the summer house. Ample evidences of their repast were visible, but the dear children were happy and we were happy and soon all gathered in our wonted place on the upper veranda where I told the usual story after which they were soon wrapped in pleasant sleep.

Sun. 18. Looking after patients and reading.

Tu. 20. The same.

Wed. 21. The same.

Th. 22. Attended some patients and worked about yard till 2 P.M. Then went to Antennial.

Fri. 23. Working with trees and reading.

Sat. 24. Felt badly in morning but concluded to take the two youngest to the Antennial. We went and though the day was replete with incidents of an amusing nature there seemed to be so many conflicting desires that we all failed to give satisfaction to each other. The two roads and swimming were in the

- Tu. 18. Lake amused the children very much. I suffered a good deal all day and we each desired to start home early.
- Sun. 25 Sick all day but spent most of day with patients and another fine rain in evening.
- Mon. 26. A rainy morning. Still sick but managed to look after patients and do a little work.
- Tu. 27. The same.
- Wed. 28. Read and looked after patients in the forenoon. In afternoon I took the children to the Centennial where we spent the remainder of the day and were joined by Annie at nightfall. The children enjoyed the mimic taking of Ft. Sumter and fire-works very much.
- Th. 29. Spent the day in reading and visiting patients.
- Fri. 30. The same.
- Sat. 31. Worked in the forenoon. In the afternoon took children to the Centennial where they enjoyed the concert and parade. At night Annie came bringing Cora with her and we all stayed till the great Spectacular musical concert "War and Peace" was nearly over and then came home. The crowd was huge and dense and made so much noise that the music was only heard with difficulty. It was the last appearance of F. N. Lane with his great

- Su 14 band and the enthusiasm with which he was greeted plainly expressed the deep regard in which he is held. He has impressed himself deeply and pleasantly on the popular heart as well as imparted a decided impetus to the cause of music. It was near midnight when we reached home.

- Fr. 6. Same in forenoon. In afternoon drove to city. Mr. Hetherington and I "took the big buggy" and at 2.00 o'clock. He brought back some melons, peaches and candy and we in light had a feast on the rustic seat by the fountain.
- Sat. 7. A little work, some writing, reading and walking.
- Sun. 8. The day was spent as usual in conversation with the family and visitors. In the evening took a walk.
- Mon. 9. Looking after my patients reading and writing letters.
- Tu. 10. Same in forenoon. In afternoon received telegram from John H. Bennett at Cincinnati asking me to telegraph him $100.00. Addressed to the city but returned without sending it and mailed him a check in the evening mail.

- Wed. 11. Went to Centennial. Came home at dark exhausted.
- Th. 12. Spent the day in bed I could accomplish much.
- Fri. 13. The same. John McDermott came in afternoon and stayed one hour.
- Sat. 14. Sent children to Centennial and later went there with John McDermott and, remained until after the evening exercises reaching home near midnight.
- Sun. 15. Very warm. Attended some patients and read.
- Mon. 16. In consequence of letters and telegrams received from his mother and brothers I spent a good part of day trying to find John McDermott who came in a while to our house borrowed $2.⁰⁰ from Annie and went away.
- Tu. 17. Spent the day at home with patients and books.
- Wed. 18. Spent the forenoon with Hugh Gourley who had come down with Frank McDermott to look after John. In afternoon looked after patients.
- Th. 19. In the forenoon went to city. Spent the afternoon at home with Frank McDermott.
- Fri. 20. Suffered all day. Took Nettie and Wesley with a pack of lunch and went to Centennial. Got home at dark.

- Aug. 20. As usual that life was not sweet. Went to see some patients and at last stretched my weary self upon my couch too much exhausted to sleep.
- Sat. 21. Spent the day with my patients and books.
- Sun. 22. The same.
- Mon. 23. The same.
- Tu. 24. The same.
- We. 25. The same.
- Th. 26. Went to the Centennial, from there to Belle Meade by car to attend the ceremonies of moving the monument to the horse Engineer after which witnessed a deer drive in the park and took train for city reaching home at sunset, thanking God that this experience was past.
- Fri. 27. At home with my books and patients.
- Sat. 28. The same. In the morning before breakfast we finished putting away the blades which the children had gathered for cow feed in the winter.
- Sun. 29. Very hot and dry the leaves scorching up on the plants and trees. But little breeze and that hot and disagreeable. Spent the day in reading and entertaining callers.
- Mon. 30. Still clear and dry. I look after patients and

- Tu. 31. The same. The children are heading the corn - six rows per day being their allotment.
- Sep t.
Wed. 1. The same. In the P.M. the boys walked to city for some groceries. They enjoy these walks and beg for them.
- Th. 2. Day spent with patients and books.
- Fri. 3. The same till since o'clock then tied up corn blades till night. It was very hot and I was soon drenched with sweat. The work was very hard for me but I delighted in getting it done and felt thankful I could do it.
- Sat. 4. Boys walked to the Antennial where I joined them later by car. We spent the day and evening there staying till after the fireworks. I was less exhausted from this long trip than from any I have made there. In the morning saw near we rode on the little steam boat Blue Fern around the lake.
- Sun. 5. Waited on patients who came and read many pages of Nicholas Nicolby.
- Mon. 6. Still engaged with patients, but spent most of day working hard at tying up and hoeing corn blades.
- Tu. 7. Day was spent with books and patients. In the evening went to Antennial to attend Victor Herbert's last concert. The Auditorium was packed. One encore followed another until the exercises were greatly prolonged. When at last he appeared with his violin-cello the audience went wild. When seated our intense silence resembled as if each member of that great audience feared to breathe a note from the magic master. His performance was indescribable. The soft sweet-strains seemed still lingering after he had ceased to move the bow. Then a roar of mighty applause like the roar of a blast-furnace drowned every other sound within and without. Again, again and yet again the wizard of melody charmed the crowded hall. It was with extreme reluctance that they gave him up and for many minutes after he had disappeared with his instru-

Sept.

 into a mighty roar of wild delight when he reappeared to direct the final number.
 As they stood and rendered "Ould Lang Syne" the audience were swayed as if by a mighty impulse. At the conclusion hundreds swept about the stage to congratulate the great leader who with his pleasant associates had held them in the thrall of a refined and lofty eloquence, the eloquence of harmony - of sweetest strain for the short space of a few weeks, too short to that frenzied throng of music lovers.
 Yes, Victor Herbert and his band and Victor Herbert and his cello will long be remembered by the people of Nashville. He is said to be the finest player on this instrument in the world. His rendition of "Love's Lullaby" was the sweetest performance I ever heard upon an instrument. He can make that instrument subservient to the expression of every thing sweet and pure. Though itched

- Sept. no tears, it wept. Though it spoke not it expressed a language sublime beyond words. I enjoyed the evening very much though I left home with reluctance and attended it only at the solicitation of my wife, who could not go but would have appreciated it far beyond my best conception of it.
- Wed. 8. I return to my duties, my books and my patients.
- Th. 9. The boys walked to Antennial in the morning. Annie and I drove out to look for a girl and upon returning I was engaged with patients till 11 A.M. Then Kettie and I took car to Antennial. We all returned near sunset.
- Fri. 10. Engaged with my patients.
- Sat. 11. This is Nashville day. I did not feel well enough to go nor care to be mixed up in the great crowd. So I read my papers wrote some letters and rested in my own shade. It is very hot and dry.
- Sun. 12. Spent the day with my books & papers.
- Mon. 13. Took Wesley and Kettie and went to City. Got back at noon. In afternoon read & helped make wine.
- Tu. 14. Read and looked after patients.
- We d. 15. The same.
- Th. 16. The same.

- Fri. 17 Wrote letters and carried and whaled in some bundles of folder tops.
- Sat. 18 Took children to Centennial. The boys walked. Nettie and I went by car. It was "Mother Goose Day" and Saturnus and Wesley each had a part. I sent them to some of the shows on Varsity Fair and they managed to get scattered and caused me a great deal of trouble to find them. This delayed our eating dinner till three o'clock and greatly marred our pleasure. We stayed till after the evening fireworks and got home at nine o'clock and found Mr. L. D. Power and wife waiting for treatment. I was very much exhausted and retired at 10:30. I later had a severe chill followed by a night of feverish unrest.
- Sun. 19 Colder with North wind. Spent the day at home. I feel better though very lame.
- Mon. 20 Read and worked a little all day. Same.
- Tue. 21 Went to city in morning with Mr. Power. Worked some and read.
- Wed. 22 Read and in P.M. went to city with Annie Elliott.
- Th. 23 Went to Centennial.
- Fri. 24 Spent day at reading Millennial Dawn by Russell. It is very interesting and gives me a new light on many Scripture subjects.
- Sat. 25 The same except that I helped boys at fixing stalls. We are all happy.

Sun 26 Reading at home all day. Cornell complains of throat this eve and has a high fever.

Mon 27 Cornell claims to be well and is off to school. Later he is home and drowsy and dull. The dear boy takes a long sleep after which he rises cool and seems much better and says he is well. I write and read all day.

Tu. 28 Beautiful day. I attend Centennial down. At the Parthenon Mr. Glendinning told me the bas relief, Moratti's "Head of Christ" was sold to a N.Y. man. I felt greatly disappointed. I had hoped to get it for Annie. We had first studied it together and later separately and both admired it very much. I had privately written its author a week ago offering $100. for it. The price asked was $150, and considered very low by artists. I came home and on my way I often thought about this sweet gem and hoped God had placed it where its influence would be best. On arriving at home I found a letter from St. Moratti accepting my offer. I was much pleased. I found Cornell down sick Temp. 104°F with Aphthoria. After some delay I got Antitoxin and injected his side. Sent him to bed and took up my vigil with him and my book Mellanial Dawn. Read, wrote and waited on the dear boy till dawn.

Wed 29 Spent the day at waiting on Cornell & reading. He seems a little better but has a bad looking throat. He wants a good many stories. At night I snuggled beside him on lounge and waited on him. He restles but slept some.

Fr. 1 The same. The brilliant day weather continues.

Sat. 2 The same. At 3 P.M. I went to Centennial and stayed to hear the spectacular and concert by Bonfanti's band. Home at 11 P.M.

Sun. 3 Reading and resting.

Mon. 4 Went to city in A.M. and got the city officer to come and fumigate the room my sick boy occupied. He is playing about yard. Dear God I thank thee.

Tu. 5 Went to Centennial with Gatorwood. Got home at 11 P.M.

Wed. 6 Read and walked. Dry and brilliant. Dust everywhere. Am reading the Millennium Dawn with a good deal of interest.

Th. 7 The same. Sent the boys to city to see Buffalo Bill's show parade. They were too late. Came back disappointed and Gatorwood complained of a headache and fever with slight soreness of throat. On investigation I found it was a case of diphtheria. I put him in room his brother had occupied and took up my vigil. He rested fairly. I read, watched, nursed and visited a patient and so the long night of unrest and anxiety was passed.

Fr. 8 The children had had great hope on going to Centennial today to see the parade and hear W. J. Bryan speak.

The day was golden. I could have gone but did not feel well and was unwilling to leave my sick boy. I could only spend a very anxious day. The other children too would have been sorely disappointed if left behind. My boy seems better this P.M. In A.M. I went to City got antitoxine and used it hypodermically. I am suffering and weak but think God my boy is better and we are all together.
Father let us long live and ever be together.

Sat 9 Wrote letters, read, beguiled my sick boy with stories and walked with the two well boys and their little sister

Sun. 10 The same.

Mon. 11 Looked after patients and went to Centennial with Correl. We came home soon after dark. He admired the piccol had bought from Moretti "The Head of Christ" and said he would rather have it than any in building.

Tu. 12 Busy with patients all day. In our Annie who had been doing phenomenal work all day was taken sick & in 2 hrs was relieved and rewarded by the birth of a little daughter. As before she bravely bore her travail and desired no other help than mine. By midnight we were both asleep beside the sweetly sleeping infant. May God keep and bless it and consecrate it to His service.

Wed. 13 At work with my wood and patients

Th. 14 The same

Fri. 15 Took Hettie and the three boys to city and had their photos taken in a group. Returning spent the rest of day in attending the sick and splitting wood. Was very tired when night came.

Sat. 16 Took the three boys to the Centennial and stayed till after the fire works at night. The boys all admired the "Head of Christ" and each one expressed his preference for it above every thing they saw. Only Conrad knows it is mine. I sent them into the show "Scene among the Alps" They were much pleased with it. They did not admire the brutal football game.

Sun. 17 Spent the day at reading and writing letters.

Mon. 18 Worked at my wood and read.
It is quite warm.

Tu. 19 Went to Centennial and listened to addresses in Auditorium before the Congress of Religions. The addresses were scholarly, liberal and in tone and spirit charitable. In the P.M. addresses were made in the assembly room of the Knoxville Building. M.B.A.

Oct. Mills electrified the audience by a beautiful sweet and charitable address.

Wed 20 Attended the Centennial and after the addresses at the Liberal Congress of Religion I spent the time at the Art Hall and at the Commerce Building examining the paintings. I received a letter today from Caroline A. Lord, Cin. O. accepting my offer of $100. for her picture Hungry & Cold which has been exhibited in the Salon of the Champ Elysees, Paris & the National Academy, N. Y. While really unable to buy this piece it was one both Annie and I admired and it tells such a sweet lesson that I felt tempted to add it to our little collection hoping its influence would be benign and that in the end these relics of a long series of happy days spent together at the Centennial and at home may be prized and kept and their influence hallowed among the children.

Th. 21 The same. A dense crowd it being Director General's Day. Stayed at night with the boys to let them see the splendid fire works. We came home in a jam.

Fr. 22 Still attending Centennial & the Liberal Congress.

Sat 23 The same.

Sun 24 At home. Reading, and attended the sick.

25

Went to the city in the morning on business. I happened to find a man in a stairway selling shells. I have always admired pretty shells and thought I might be able to afford it. The beauty of the shells and their cheapness induced me to buy a basket full and return home where I spent the remainder of the day at work.

Tue.

26

The glorious weather still continued. I took Nettie and went to the Centennial returning at sunset. The crowds are increasing and all seem sad to think of its closing so soon.

Wed.

27

Went back to Centennial alone. The weather is ideal. Only a few leaves have fallen as yet. Everything seems changed - a breeze fills the air wherever one may go and voices of the speakers ring out with new energy. It is a very pleasant sight to see hundreds scattered about under the trees eating their lunches. The buildings are thronged and many are beginning their purchases of souvenirs.

Th.

28

The same. This is Maj. J. M. Thomas's day. The school were suspended and nearly every business house was closed. The boys started early and walked out to the grounds where I joined them a little later. Though it sprinkled a little once the day was very pleasant. The grounds were thronged the buildings and walks could only be traversed with difficulty. The procession was so long that it could not all be handled in the grounds without disbanding. It was over seven miles long and consisted of hundreds of floats, strange devices, curious banniers, floral displays, industrial exhibitions interspersed with bands, military organizations, civil demonstrations, school children, business men, houses, cavalry, police, even pet coon and many other peculiar features. Over ninety thousand people passed through the gates. A great many more attractions had been provided. Among others a sham battle at close of day. To avoid the tremendous jam on the cars I brought the boys back about three o'clock. They left reluctantly.

Fri 27. Went with the boys to the Centennial. The crowd was large but very small compared with yesterday. We took our dinner together under the shade of the trees as before. After dinner the children went to different places on the grounds as they wished but spent more time in the Pantheon than elsewhere. They were much impressed with the idea that they were soon to be deprived of the pleasure of visiting their hall of beauty and art. First among the things they admired was "Mott's Head of Christ" and next the picture "Henry and Gold" about which I had given a story of "Count Monty" (Miguel) and little Cordelia who fitted into the circumstances of the story. The painting was the work of Cordelia A. Lord of Cincinnati who in a letter told me it was been hung in the Salon of the Champs Elysees, Paris and in the National Art Academy, New York. As I had become the possessor of both these pieces it was pleasant to find such a concurrence of favor and approval. It had also interested Annie who had admired it at first sight. I had some hesitancy in making these purchases and it was only after a great deal of contemplation that I did so. I have always had a great fondness for beautiful and masterful pieces of art and feel very fortunate in having secured these two. The speed of each is very striking. If I could afford it I should purchase some more of half a dozen pretty pieces which are offered at a comparatively low figure. I should like to own one landscape but must forego that pleasure now. At sunset we took the crowded car and reached home with a few more pretty shells which I had purchased during the day. We spent a pleasant evening and after the boys had heard their story and retired I sat and read far into the night while Annie cared for little Helen. Surely we are blest.

Sat.

30. The beautiful weather continues. The day was a repetition of yesterday, the boys walking out and coming back with me on the car at dusk. It is the last day of the Centennial. A great crowd was in attendance of many were the people to be heard at its closing. Though long ago commenced it seemed to have come for some. Even the little boys seemed to feel sad as we walked toward the gates. Time will tell how much good this exposition has accomplished and how much evil it has entailed. To us it has been instructive and elevating and will leave many pleasant memories for years to come. The grounds are now a blaze of flowers of every hue. As we left the music from Belstad's band in the Auditorium was swelling grandly out over the throng that crowded the road to the gate. Tonight it will play for the last time here and many who have listened to its sweet notes will recall it as a pleasant memory. The old dripping, dropping, rolling wheel" was slowly, almost mournfully turning as we passed by. The fountain was throwing its misty spray high in air for the last time. Merged with the pleasant medley of voices as I came through the gates were the lingering notes of the band and the patter of the fountain. We took the car and soon arrived at home where we spent another pleasant evening.

Oct.

Sun.

31. Spent the day with my books and patients and with the children. It was cold and gloomy with rain in the afternoon. It seemed as if the golden weather and the Centennial went hand in hand. They parted in sunshine which was followed by cold and gloom.

Nov.

Mon.

1. Rainy and gloomy. The Centennial being open to visitors during the next few days I undoubtedly go out but remained at home on account of the disagreeable weather. It rained all day.

74

2. Still raining. I went out to Centennial. It was a scene of desolation pitiable to witness. Packing boxes with packing, goods, trash and ~~any~~ kinds of debris filled the palace of order and beauty. The pretty walks were cut to pieces with many heavy vehicles and horses and the drivers ploughed through the mud in every direction. The floors were filthy with grime and refuse and a heavy offensive odor pervaded all the buildings save the Parliament. It was closed but I got in by the assistance of Director General Lewis and spent an hour there among these beauties of a thousand trains of beauty. The hall was almost silent except for the hum of the few guards and two boys and one of the show girls who remained to guard this temple of beauty. Their presence seemed almost like sacrilege. I did not wish to remain long and soon went over to the Commerce Building where I purchased a few souvenirs and returned home.

Wed.

3. Bright weather again and I go back to the Centennial grounds and spend part of the day amid the stultification of buildings and the packing of goods. Everything is being despoiled. Even the flowers are being dug up and shipped away. I purchased a few more souvenirs and returned early.

Th.

4. Went to the city in the forenoon and after transacting some business took the car and went to Exposition grounds. Purchased a pair of antique bronze candlesticks and returned early. Again it threatens rain.

- Fri. 5. Rainy and disagreeable. Spent the day at reading and visiting patients.
- Sat. 6. Bright and warm. Took Ketter and the three boys and drove to the Antinorinal for the purpose of bringing back my two art pieces. The head of Christ marvellous bar relief by Menttind the painting Henry and bold. When the latter was taken down from the high position on the wall it proved to be much larger than it looked and would not go into the carriage. Its narrowest measure was only about six inches less than the distance between the wheels and it was nearly six feet high. I was compelled to leave it but brought home the smaller piece. As I was coming out of the Parthenon Mr. Glendinning informed me of the receipt of a telegram from Henry Jones, Louisville, Ky. directing them to turn over his two pieces to me in accordance with my proposition. I at once concluded to return with a wagon for the three paintings. After purchasing a few souvenirs in the commerce building we drove home with our treasures.

Wed. 10. Bright and sunny. Early and I took Mr. John's little wagon and drove to the Centennial grounds where we packed the pictures with quilts and drew horse against noon. The afternoon was spent in hanging pictures and waiting on patients. Henny and Ed was after some difficulty hung in the Northwestern corner of the North parlor. "The Autumn Afternoon" was hung over the hall door in the South parlor. Night found me almost exhausted with work and worry.

Th. 11. In the morning hung "South Fork Creek" in North parlor over the folding doors. These two oil paintings are great beauties. I picked them out after frequent comparisons with the works of other artists. The remainder of the day was spent with patients and in assisting my hired hands. At dark I was called to visit Mr. T. J. Brown 118 North High St.

Fri. 12. Visited patients, wrote letters, and went to nursery at Linchuys.

Sat. 13. The morning was bright and warm and I took the entire family and drove to Taylor & Wye's art gallery where the four older children sat for their pictures. I tried to interest them in a make believe attempt to bore the artist's ear with a knife blade while he took the snap-shot. The proof will show how I succeeded. From there we drove to the Centennial grounds where we spent two hours looking at the spoliation of the former beauty which had attracted us so often. We then drove home, little Helen sleeping all the way. After dinner I drove to see a Mrs. King.

 At night went to New-Masonic Theater to hear Modjeska in Lady Macbeth. She was un-ably supported. Her daughter as Blanche was to my mind the better actor. If Modjeska were not a courtesan it would be harder to set the audience in a row.
 She acts well, is very graceful recites clearly and is without any pretensions.
 Yet in Lady Macbeth one would expect to see a more vigorous and aggressive character than is shown in Modjeska.
 One who can plan and put murder so far must needs need be of a bold and enterprising nature. Modjeska is more insinuating and artful and less stern than I would expect to see in a female who proposed to use the dagger herself and could so lightly regard the deed of murder.

Wed. 22 Two inches of snow. I read in A.M. In P.M. while Annie goes to city I take care of baby Helen and the boys coast on the hill. Little Helen is very sweet and good and gives me little trouble.

Th. 23 Snow. I took a hatchet and went to the hill beyond the old fort and got a cedar tree for a Christmas tree. Carried it home and mounted it while dinner was preparing. After dinner took the boys to the city. I have never seen it so mounted. It was very difficult.

Fri. 24 to get along the sidewalks. We traveled about until it was growing dusky when I sent the boys home and proceeded to purchase a few things for their Xmas. Returning spent the evening with the children.

Sat. 24 Spent the day at home at reading and making little preparations for Xmas. In the evening the three boys went to the ball game and the Forman church while little Helen remained with the active exercises of the day went early to bed leaving us free to prepare the Christmas tree. We placed it in the North parlor and worked with all our might to get it done before the children came home. They were late coming and after completing it we sat down to read and talk and await their arrival. They soon came and were almost delirious with joy. The mother gladdly of

This honor was strongly refuted by his two older brothers. They walked about the tree and cheered and capered like wits until they were urged to retire. Even at that late time they must have their "Willow story" before they would go. I wonder when the dear boys will be willing to renounce these stories. Their interest in them deepens as the days go by. They are never willing to accept a substitute either read or told.

- Sat. 15. In the morning went to see some patients then went to the city with Lynch Bennett and walked down to find Mr. Bennett's office to see him on some business. Mrs. Robinson and Augustus D. were also here. When the former had almost talked my arm off with dull empty repetition I slipped out to the stable and began clearing out the stalls a job I always disliked but now extremely welcome because it afforded me relief from this abominable hum-drum monotonous.
- Sun. 16. Spent most of day in visiting patients. Then in the afternoon we all went for a little walk I carrying Helen. She was anxious for the trip but absolutely ^{opposed} to the veil which was drawn over her face. She fought this obstruction during the round trip. When we got home she took her bottle of milk greedily then a big romp after which she went off into her usual snoring slumber while the boys gathered about with little Nettie to hear a Wilton story about Jarrins and his dog Faithful after which I sat by the fire cracked hazelnuts and read the paper while Annie wrote. We enjoy our quiet evenings immensely because we are seldom disturbed. Though last night I had a call out to see a Mrs. Wagoner who had accidentally taken poison.

- Tu. 18. Visited patients in the forenoon. In the afternoon went to city as witness in the case of Augusta Lunn vs. J. K. Sharpe. The case was postponed. After some errands were completed I walked home.
- Wed. 19. Rained all forenoon with incessant fury. Visited some patients and at noon being subpoenaed arose in the case of Miss Dunn vs. J. K. Sharpe. Went to the city and testified. I only remained a few minutes afterward but long enough to hear some very hardly evidence done to the truth by Mrs. Harvey A. Sharpe and Mr. Lunn Stauffer. This evidence seemed to be purposeful, premeditated and not lacking in vicious animus. On reaching home I got my dinner at sunset. It was still raining. I took a car and went to visit Mrs. Mary Bang on Russell just above the Warner school. I returned at 8 P.M. and found the children were still waiting for their evening stews which I gave after which they knelt around my knees and we all joined in thankful worship. Then they retired while Annie and I sat and talked by the bright fire till 11 P.M. while the storm still raged without.

Wed. 6 Still cold and frosty. I read and wrote a little. Am not feeling well. Went to bed.

Th 7 Took Nelsy and walked to city to auction at C. J. Wheelock's store. He stayed till 5 P.M. and bought a number of books. Walked home again very hungry and weary, but could not eat well.

Fr. 8 Took Annie, Hettie Helen and Nelsy over to city. The auction began late and it was an hour or two later than I expected to start back. My Annie and Helen were tired and did enjoy the bringing back of my nice lot of books. I also bought a very large cherry book case for $12⁰⁰ as she had expressed a desire for another small one, sold yesterday. It's size displeased her somewhat and I spent an hour trying to sell it again. It was perhaps a hinder on my part to get it without her seeing it but that was chief of the question. I am sorry she disliked it as she usually likes the things I get. Will try again tomorrow to sell it. Many want it but can't get it into their homes. Got home and after dinner looked up our books and she seemed better satisfied with them, but so well pleased as with the small or single purchases. I often made of books. I had so much trouble getting even poor books when a boy I scarcely could let such chances escape.

9 To Capt. Galt and Cornet and drove to Capt. Whetters. Tried for an hour to sell my big catalog failed. Bought some new books and then at starting a lot of books were sold at 35c nearly all school books which I bought with only one motive - that of helping some one who might want books of an educational kind.
I brought all I could put in my bag with me leaving a few. These seemed to be positively displeasing to Annie. I hope she may one day see deeper into my heart. I was considerably in this case but as it cannot prove mortal I will trust at last get it fixed right. She has had so many good and pretty books she does not seem to regard a fiction or cheap one. I will move them from her sight soon as I can and perhaps have the most of the future book buying to her as I cannot afford to be so much disappointed. Sat down and wrote a letter to my sister offering her the book at cost. I hope to get them off without great loss.
I have loved books so fondly that I am really disappointed to find her annoyed at this purchase.
Sometime I will dispose of them with little loss but I hope great profit to some book hungry student.

Acting, weary and disappointed I worked on till evening and told the usual bedtime story and after the children retired I sat and read a while and then tried to listen to the strange thunder storm that resembled the explosion sounds of artillery more than any
I ever heard. It was very singular & striking.

Sun. 10 Easter Sunday - Cloudy windy & disagreeable
I feel rather than a bad cold. My heart is still sad in a way I can scarcely account for. It is not usual for me to care much what any one thinks about my acts if I feel they were prompted by proper motives. The children are off to Sunday school and I am alone in my library. What will the morning bring?

Mon. 11 Annie seemed desirous of keeping the case &
I abandoned my intention of going to city before breakfast to sell it at auction room and notify the transfer company accordingly before they started to bring it. I took a saw and cut out the bar over the door of library and removed the transom. It arrived at 10 P.M. and the men carried it in readily and set it up.
We cleaned it up and it looked so bright and pretty, we were all pleased. I put back the transom and the change will not be noticed. Worked most of day at my books.

Tu. 12 Polished up the book cases and helped Anne arrange the books in them. It took nearly all day to make the change. It was however a labor of love which we both enjoyed. Strange our minds and hearts were together in all our little plans and as we look back on them they grow dearer and almost sacred.
It will always be a green spot in life to look back on and its memory will be freighted with sweetness.

Fr. 15 Arranging and packing sideboards. He put in some other book and made the lot more desirable. Very weary but happy. Gave the boy a whole play and a long story at night. In P.M. Annie went to city and got some rugs for library. She and Hettie went and I kept Helen while the boy played ball in the south yard. We put Helen in the buggy and she sat and laughed at the scampering boys as if she understood the play. Annie is more infatuated with the library than ever and shows unusual taste in adorning it. I am glad she likes it for it is to me a sanctuary when I go to look at the books and think what fools are there. I hope the family will all love it while I remain and afterwards for its fascinating memories of me and the hours we all spent there.

Sat. 16 Still at my books. Took Edward and Helen for a short drive to city in A.M. In P.M. visited patient and read and played ball with the boys.

May looked after some patients in the forenoon in the afternoon drove with Annie and the little girls to city. Came back exhausted.

Sat. 14. I resolve to make a strong effort to throw off my depression. I took a shovel and spade and up a bed for flowers and weeds and I planted them. Then I kept little Helen in the parlor-house while I wrote some lines on 'The Love of the Flower.' for Annie. We had worked together so much with flowers and the thing was as pleasant to me, besides embodying some novel ideas. I thought this would be a pleasant remembrance of my days at Fennel in bloom. Much as I enjoyed the work of embodying these thoughts between the playful diversions with little Helen I found myself utterly worn out when dark came. During this time Annie and the children were clearing houses. However after the children had retired Annie and I sat and talked till near midnight. The air was laden with the fragrance of flowers and a cool breeze wafted through the screen of leaves while which undulated like the waves of a great ocean thickly studded with fragrant blossoms of white and gold. For the sake of preservation in a convenient form I give below a copy of the lines above referred to.

The Love of the Flower.

Dedicated to my wife, May 1911

What does he plant who plants a flower?
 He plants a love in every home.
 He plants a hope in every breast.
 That gladdens toil and eases rest.
 He plants a promise and a seed
 To grow a blessing. In the deed
 He scatters blessings all around
 In perfumed air and shadowy ground.
 From sun to sun, in shine or shower,
 He praises God who plants a flower.

What does he plant who plants a flower?
 He plants the promise of the bower.
 With song of bird and chirp of young -
 The song of love, by lovers sung.
 The breezy rustle of the leaves
 That dust-rings round our homestead are Plays pattering music with the shower
 Or silent concert with the hour
 Of sunshine; still in shine or shower
 He praises God who plants a flower.

What does he plant who plants a flower?
 He plants with Love a heavenly power
 To lift the heart. Its own sweet soul Speaks oft to his. With love's control
 Its petal'd finger points above.
 A breath divine - a perfumed love
 Fresh blown from God - a breath of Heaven
 The soul of Life divinely given
 To live for love instead of power
 He praises God who plants a flower.

What does he plant who plants a flower?
 He plants its love which hour by hour

Come sweetly back to bless his own
 And make his heart its sacred home
 Where human love and love divine
 May find for each a common shrine.
 He plants a blessing on all life.
 He plants its love - a sacred wife
 With mission sweet and silent power
 He praises God who plants a flower.

Sun. 13. I was feeling what a task it was to move. A tremendous aching pervaded my entire frame. I spent most of the day in lying about and waiting so depressed and pained that even the pain had dropped off the mind would get me relief anywhere. As the night drew on I grew worse and the night proved one of the longest to me I ever experienced. I was so weak I dreaded to move yet the pain was such that I could not long remain in one position.

Mon. 14. At last the long night dragged away but day only brought me a slight relief. I spent the day in lying upon the lounge or walking about the house or trying to play with little Helen. I grew some surer toward night and spent an hour in the library with Annie and Helen.

Tu. 15. Am still stronger and working in yard. My heart is full of thankfulness for my returning strength.

Wed. 16. The same

Th. 17. The same. Cooler and a northern breeze speaks of days long ago.

Fr. 18. Showers. Still improving.

Sat. 19. Read and helped at house cleaning. I took down and put up all the pictures. Visited some patients in A.M.

Sun 22

Visited patients and read. I am not so well today but the cool weather and showers are very pleasant and refreshing.

Mon. 23

Went to city in A.M. All P.M. I hung screen doors.

Tu 24

No letters - no news. Dull & warm.

Did some work about the yard and finished hanging the screen doors. After this I went to the summer-house and began some verses for Annie on "The Dear Old Yard." I do not presume that they will be entitled to any literary merit nor am I anxious that they should be classed among pretentious efforts. I shall rather attempt to embody in simple rhyme some of the dearest sentiments of my heart which I believe are held in common with my wife and though perhaps unconsciously by the children.

While the subject is attractive it will present many difficulties. The vastness of its associations, its many peculiar features with which we are particularly identified and which would not be alternative in the same degree to others together with the varied phrases one would wish to impress, the necessity of condensing in order to embody much with brevity; these and many other difficulties more formidable than apparent rise up to meet me. As I have no reputation to suffer and no ambition to secure popular favor I shall have a corresponding liberty which upon necessity I might push to the limit. I have long thought of writing something upon this subject only for my wife and children.

but had never formulated ~~any~~ any particular thought. Perhaps however my critics will be restricted to a narrow circle. Whatever may be the result - it should be regarded merely as a sentimental contribution to the cause of devotion.

- Th. 26. At 8 A.M. I had just finished another issue of "The Dear Old Year" when a telephone message from Mr. Bennett at Franklin called me to join him and go to see Mr. W. A. Denham at Coveland, Tenn. I took the 9 A.M. train, reached Columbia at 10:30^{am} and we drove in a buggy 7 mi. to Coveland where we took dinner with Mr. Denham. Then we went to look at some oak timber belonging to Mr. Denton. We climbed over hills through dense thickets of bush and bramble and vine and saw some very fine oaks, from three to four ft. thick. Returning to Mr. Denham's we drove about $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. to look at some timber on the farm of Mr. Fergus. We spent an hour in a 15 A. grove of the finest oak I ever saw. Their mighty trunks loomed high overhead and their great spreading tops allowed the sun only occasional glances at the ground beneath. It seemed so quiet and secluded and reminded me of walking in some great temple whose pillars were formed of the trunks of these majestic monarchs. It was a lovely and worshipful place and I often wished the family were with me to enjoy this grandeur and quiet splendor. I could spend many hours in pleasant meditation in this great temple of time. Great vines clung about the massive trunks in loving embrace. The quietude which reigned here was as restless as remarkable.

"There was no whine of grasshopper

Nor song of any bird.

And the beating of my own heart.

Was all the song I heard."

At four o'clock we left Mr. Deane at the gate leading into the woods and got into the buggy and drove back to Columbia where taking the train I reached home at nightfall having had a breezy and pleasant trip, and what was best of all an evening in the woods.

Fri. 27. Reading and writing and playing with Helen.

Sat. 28. The same in the forenoon. In the afternoon drove the family to the city.

Sun. 29. The day was broken up by callers, between whom did some writing and reading. Also finished copying my out of the "Dear Old Yard." Perhaps I could improve its arrangement, expression and force and I may at some time see fit to modify it materially. One thing however is certain most of its sentiment will remain and I only wish I possessed sufficient capability to properly express the ideas it contains in a manner commensurate with their beauty and importance. For the purpose of preservation a copy of the lines is herewith inscribed.

The Dear Old Yard. at Fountainsbleau.
For Annie.

Among the dear places enshrined by the grass,
And sacred to right and to sound
Is the dear old yard with its bright green sward,
With the children playing around.

There's something divine in its shade and shine
That all of the song-birds know;
With never a fear, from year to year,
They build in the same old bough.

When the morning sun has only begun
To scatter his shafts above,
They come to play in the fountain's spray
And sing their song of Love.

When the sunbeams ray in its fiercest play
Is painting bright rainbows, then
There angels of air are caroling there
The song of the covenant given.

Throughout all the days these notes of sweet praise Swell up to the Father above,
And mingled with these in the voice of the breeze
A thousand sweet accents of Love,

Say our dear old yard with its bright-green sward
And our children playing around
Is a boon from Heaven, divinely given,
A happy and sacred ground.

There we share our joys with our girls and boys
And fling our cares away
At the rustic seat, where, at twilight sweet
We often bend to pray.

There's the grave of dear Grace whose sweet sunny face
 Will welcome us home in the moon.
 The children were right in choosing the site. —
 Thank God that the dear one was here.

How lifework was done where ours began.
 Her mission was sweet as the flowers
 We planted above her to tell how we loved her.
 Her memory grows dear with the hours.

How often we've missed her — the dear little sister,
 Whose mission was bright as the sun;
 But we never do grieve because she did leave
 When her mission had only begun.

White arches of stone with roses o'ergrown
 We placed with our own hands there,
 As emblem of love no splendor could prove.
 No granite nor marble could share.

There's another dear spot although it is not
 As sacred. The summer-house — true
 It is novel and plain and sits in the rain
 And sometimes the sun shines through

The roses I planted; but I never wanted
 To shut out these old friends of mine.
 So, I took the old lattice which I could have grate
 And built for the rose and the vine.

Here I read and write and often at night —
 I watch the moon steal through
 And kiss the flowers. In these sweet hours
 I often think of you.

Here I sit some-times and make a few rhymes
 But then I always lack words
 And often I long to sing the sweet song
 That pours from the throats of the birds.

How sweetly it comes, how oft it rejoices
 My heart with all nature aflame.
 I think it's more wise - perhaps more precise Than human - I am sure not the same.

'Tis a melody it's true - yes, it always is true,
 And not like the songs of our words,
 But pure, sweet and free as the breeze in the tree,
 And straight from the hearts of the birds.

One's hammock swings now from the boulder ledge
 Over Helen who sleeps just below.
 Twin emblems of love! His kindness they prove Whose eye watches over them now.

There's the old elm-tree where Waterwood and Lee
 And Wesley and Nettie play round While Annie and I with Helen close by
 On the old log seat are found.

Here the old rope swing - 'tis the schoolboys' wing,
 Fixed high to limit our head
 Sweeps far back & forth from the South to the North
 But still by the tree over-spread.

There the old, old trees, kissed by the breeze
 Of years long past - What tales they tell.
 There's the place to play at ball and croquet -
 Near the door is the dear old well.

There's the fountain's spatter - its dreamy patter -
Its twinkling moonlit spray -
Its tinkling drops fall o'er the rocks
And dance in the pool away.

The old brick house square, with its space to spare,
 In rooms and verandas wide,
 Kept safe from the shine by many a vine
 That climbs and blooms by its side.

The wisteria weaves high up to the eaves
 And spreads out its branches wide
 Till it firmly entwines the honey-suckle vines
 In loving but innocent pride.

Now, this vine-clad shrine holds treasures of mine
 Quite priceless - my wife, girls and boys,
 A few works of art and many of heart,
 My books and my innocent joys.

The rose and the vine round the windows entwined
 Beside the door two roses more
 In colors so bright - one red and one white -
 Are always blooming, o'er and o'er.

There the jasmine, too, I planted for you,
 Sweeps round your window wide.
 Its snowy flowers perfume the house
 It is pure as a stainless bride.

And the library too where so often with you
 I sit from the world apart,
 Gained of books, or flowers, or sweet happy hours
 With children, with nature or art.

There are other dear places but memory traces
 More kindly than pencil or pen;
 There's our sweet shady walks, our long evening talks
 And other dear things that are ken.

Time never effaces what memory traces
 Of its one made dear to the heart;
 We look back to bless it, and sweetly caress it
 And from it we never depart.

God grant us this blessing, each time heart expressing
 Its thanks for Thy infinite Love;
 Make sacred our duty and love for Thy beauty Resounding below and above.

O, bless this dear place, the gift of Thy Grace -
 Keep sacred to sight and to sound
 Our dear, dear old yard with its bright green sward,
 Keep our children playing around.

May.

Mon. 30. Boxed trees to prevent their destruction by the cattle.

Tu. 31. Worked at trees and went to city.

June.

Wed. 1. Read, boxed trees and looked after patients. This is the last day of school. The boys came home early with their reports. Halsewood as usual leading his class. His average in scholarship was 89. Cornell came next in the class with 83. They are both promoted to the 7th B. Grade. Their record is quite good considering their youthfulness, Cornell being the youngest in the grade and Halsewood younger than any other. They have worked pretty hard on their lessons and have established quite a reputation as students in the school. Of course we all feel a common pride in their achievements.

Th. 2. Worked and read and took care of Helen.

Fri. 3. Annoyed with company but getting away we all went to the city and passed through the trying ordeal of buying a suit of clothes. I came home miserable and depressed and was called to meet Dr. Lipton in consultation on the case of Mrs. Cunniff. He took the precaution to inform me what I should find. I failed to find what he directed me to discover and got away as soon as possible.

Sat. 4. Worked about the yard and took care of Helen. The evening was delightful. The moon full the air sweet and fragrant. Some annoying company, took a party, &c. but nothing serious.

Sun.

5. Reading and playing with the children who insist on a liberal quota of stories.

Mon

6. Drove the family to town to get some things for our trip North. It was a trying day. Warm and filled with emotions. As I draw nearer to the time of starting I am more and more filled with a deep & ineradicable dislike to the trip. Anything with my family and all well is preferable to a visit among heartless ingrates.

Tue.

7. About home writing, arranging for my trying trip and trying to keep the boys happy at play and stories. God bless them all. How dear my wife and children are to me beside the rest of the world. Even little Helen seems to cling closer to me as the time approaches for my departure.

Wed

8. Still preparing for my disagreeable trip. Would to God it were over. I have little hope of any good from it. I must be brave in facing it and remember that God has often surprised me & always kept me.

Th.

9. Drove to the city in the forenoon with Annie to get some things for my trip. Came back and spent the day at making preparations and visiting with callers. Some times I played with little Helen who clung to me more closely than usual. How bright and happy she seemed when I played with her. I would to God this trying trip were off and I were back again at play with my little child on the grass or with the children - at their games or at our old past-times with my patient wife. I can only hope that God will make it more favorable than I now dream it can be. I go to it with extreme reluctance but yet I reflect that God has always been with me and kept me afloat with this faith I can at least be stoically brave.

10. Off on barouche to depot where I left all but Oatwood - who accompanied me and took train at 7:35 at Link's depot - en route for Brookport Ct. Reached Somerville at 12:30 left Oatwood at the depot and walked to the corner journal building where I found Mr. Harvey Joiner the landscape painter in his studio which was kept in great disorder. I had but two hours which I employed in studying his work and methods. He seemed not to be familiar with the work of very many of the popular artists of the present day. In fact I was disappointed in not finding him more conversant with the literature and general history of art. He seems devoted to his work though nervous in my and impetuous in his motions. Seems to have a passion for marine work. A brief study of some of these pieces was sufficient to convince me that this passion was an infatuation rather than the outgrowth of a love of the sea with which he seemed scarcely acquainted. Having no proper means it would scarcely be possible for him to reach high excellence in this field.

His best place is in the woods, especially among the beeches. It is among the green and gold tints that his greatest excellence lies. One thing I particularly noticed and now recall with much pleasure was the fact that sunshine appeared in nearly all his pictures - sometimes only a little splash but always violent and pleasant. He is very rapid in his work which considering that his first ten years in painting were devoted to portrait work is rather remarkable. He flings his colors on with careless ease and dreamy abstraction. He was desirous that I should criticize his work which I did frankly, telling him he had no business with the ocean while he knew so much of the woods. Two of his pieces impressed me quite favorably, "Autumn" and "The Beech Woods" - the former very luminous with something like the latter radiant with the freshness and tangle of an early summer beechwood. The combination of figures on the landscape had little attraction for him. He seems to paint in certain moods and to be scarcely aware of the importance of auxiliary effects. His figures in landscape are painted with the same careless rapidity and for the time he seems to consider his figures as an inanimate part of his subject. They are dashed in with vagueness and usually occupy a place in the distant background. Taken all in all I conclude he would not be a great painter in a competitive field while in his easy reach stands an excellent opportunity of earning a fine reputation.

an artist whose touch in landscape, in sunshine in atmospheric effect already ranks above that of many noted artists. He has a strange fondness for small pieces. It is to be regretted that he seems incapable of uniting fine striking and combined effects. He lacks spirituality and subtlety as much as he excels in simplicity and individuality. Altogether it was a pleasant two hours and I hastened back to my impatient boy just in time to catch the morning train for Cincinnati at 2:30 PM. It began to rain hard as we pulled out of the depot and we sat and ate our dinner and watched its furious patten. It poured all afternoon. The air is pleasant, the streams all muddy. Gatwood says he is homesick and wishes the rest along. He stays a good deal. We make close connections at Cincinnati and are off for Columbus. Storm rages a good part of way to Dayton. Reach Columbus at 10:30 and put up at the Davidson House. Got a top story room with three windows. It was cool but noisy.

Sat. 11. Up at dull dawn. Had slept some and felt slightly refreshed. It was cloudy and threatened rain. For two hours the streets were comparatively empty. We walked to the State House - I bought a newspaper and sat on the steps and read for an hour. while Gatwood watched the numerous squirrels which played around our feet and over the lawn in fearless gists. We walked back to hotel, got our breakfast and then took car to 446 South High where we stopped to see Brad Harris who went with us to his house. Here we spent the day

Gatwood going in the afternoon with Maud to Oletangy park while I stayed at the stone with Brag. I feel very much fatigued

Sun.

12. The night was so hot I slept but little. At 4.15 G. and I stole out quietly and walked to the State House. I am so very weary and wish so earnestly this trip was done and may we were back in the "dear old yard with the bright green sward." After breakfast G. and I went to the P. S. H. grounds and visited the spring of Lake. The grounds are extensive and the buildings fine. Time will make this a sweet place. Back at dinner and then went with Maud and Brad to Minerva park, where Gatwood enjoyed a ride on the Rola costa. Back at 6 P.M. After supper talked to Maud and later to bed where I slept more than for two nights previously.

Mon.

13. Up at sun up and stole out leaving Gatwood and the rest asleep. Went to the State House purchased a paper and read for an hour. Came to find Brad in bed. After breakfast sat until 9 A.M. and talked to Maud about their business, their prospects etc. She seemed much disappointed and spoke of our visit as a bright spot. She was very sad at saying goodbye. Reached Union depot in a heavy rain. Off at 11.25 for Jonesville. Rain and sunshine everywhere of every thing green. Streams all muddy except fine. (at J. at 1.05 P.M. I saw Mr. Plamondon a near neighbor of my sister and sent word by him to Jas. Byeman to help my oldest sister there till came down. She was going to Cambridge. At the Cornsleville at 4.30 P.M. Met several old acquaintances. All seemed glad to see me. Went to the Dam road office & renewed paper. Thence to Worley's where I spent the night. His wife was delighted at our coming and insisted on my sitting till 11 P.M. After which I slept little.

14. Up early and off for a long walk. After breakfast went to Tom Barnes's store where we had a long chat, after which we went to his house and he sang while his daughter Annie played for us. The entertainment was very pleasant. I went then to the court house & back to Worley's. Thence to train & off to Stockport where I met an many old acquaintances. Miss Walker who invited me up. We stayed all night & everything went pleasantly.

Went to Hugh Sperry's son who called to Henry Hooks to sew up a coat for his little boy. Dr. W. L. Lyne also present acted very politely. Everyone was delighted to see me in the case and the Mr. seemed very jealous. Then to A. P. Wray for dinner. Then H. Sperry took me over river across past the old Geo. McNaigh farm and up to Mt. Abiet where I visited the old graveyard and the grave I had planted. The ground is badly overgrown with sprouts, weeds and briars. The graveyard had recently been cleaned up. Some of the trees I had hired planted years ago in front of the church were very pretty.

From there we drove up the old ridge stopping for a few minutes at Jas. Bateson's old home. No one there but Mary and Polly. Saw the two neighbors of the olden time. Thence to Jas. McSearns where we took supper. After supper went over and took a short survey of the old home. It was wonderfully changed. Scarcely the same in anything. Even the old waterfall had changed. Many of the old trees had disappeared. I had hoped to take Bateson and in answer to his desires but it is so changed that unless an excellent opportunity presents itself later I shall forego that purpose. From here we went to visit H. Davis and on by the ridge to the river just above Stockport. It was late when we got back and though the trip was pleasant and the weather fine the changed conditions of most I saw left in my heart a feeling of sadness. We found the old school-house with a new one has been erected a little piece beyond where I saw told my picture framed from the roof of the old log school-house I knew in my infancy hangs upon the wall. As we drive along I observe that the few remaining patches of timber which were there six years ago are nearly all destroyed. The fences have gone down and the briars up. It makes me sad to think of these changes. Were they all for the better it would be some comfort. I slept better after my long ramble.

Up and bathed and took long walk before breakfast. The trees I planted 20 yrs ago are very large and fine. There were a good many of them and they are now the most attractive thing about the town. After breakfast did some gynecological work and went with Hugh Corns to Big Boston. Called at O.A. Bucks but Mrs B. kept in the back ground and I did not go in. We went direct from there to Mrs. Blackmers and were very kindly received. Also stopped at Mrs McHugh's and was treated in same old manner. After dinner at Hugh's I went to Dr. Daugherty where I spent three hours with some patients. He talked over the old times and incidents some of which were trying, some amusing and some sad. Then spent a short time at drug house

- June and then to Hugh Cornaby for supper after which I spent the evening at Miss Walker's and slept in the same room.
- Fri. 17. Worked about the town in the forenoon, visiting many of my former patients. In afternoon went up river with Hugh Cornaby to see Mrs. Joseph Henry. In the evening met Dr. Pebles in consultation. He is a pompous, shallow, generalist.
- Sat. 18. Quite busy in the morning with patients and then Waterwood and I drove to Mrs. Mellors where we took dinner with Mrs. Mellor and Annie. We went with Percy to the field to see Bird. She did not look much older and had a very pretty yearling colt by her side. Its name is "Friend" - a name I had sent on at their request. I recalled many terrible rides and drives with this faithful mare. I was very glad to see her so well situated. After dinner talked till 1 P.M. and bidding Goodby to all returned to Stockport where I worked at splints for club feet I am to operate on next week. I finished these in time to take the 4 P.M. train for Waterford and walked out to Sarah's where we stayed over night.
- Sun. 19. Quite cool. I am home. Spent the day with Jas. Byrnes and wife and at noon Alisha came and I tried to enlist him in conversation but could not. He soon went away. Poor fellow! he looks sad. God make his heart lighter. As the P.M. wore away I often June. wondered if I would ever be back to this place. God keep me and my friends. The evening is quite cool and the night as bright and starry.

Mon 20.

Very cool in the morning but grew rapidly warmer. Topped to my sister's till 9:30 A.M. then left for depot. Took train at 9:55. I soon reached Lowell. Rode to the country with Dr. Harris and spent the evening with him.

Tu.

21. Rainy. At 6:52 Off for Stockport. As we came up the river I looked over in Mellor's field and saw Bird, dear old faithful Bird, for the last time. She was grazing. Goodbye old friend. God bless and keep you. I soon reached Stockport and went to work on the operation on Mabel Courley for talipes equinus varus. The doctors, T. J. and G. L. Lyne assisting. This case has been operated upon over four years ago, when the chances were much more favorable. The right foot was particularly bad and required extensive cutting. I did a good operation and put the foot up in plaster casts with a strong lateral splint springing from the plantar splint at the base of the metatarsal bone of the great toe. Spent the remainder of the day visiting friends about the town, waiting on patients and driving into the country with Dr. Lyne as far as A. Brokaw's where I waited his return. Poor sad woman. The malignant trouble of fifteen years ago has now involved her entire limb. She asked me to treat it but I avoided the subject and soon the rumble of wheels told me of Dr. Lyne's return and bidding her a cheerful goodbye. I hastily joined him and we rode back together. I am more and more astounded at his mercenary nature.

Wed. 22. Kept very busy at work in town until 2 P.M. O. Brookman came early and after much solicitation I consented to treat his wife and prescribed for her though convinced this would only require me to make at least another hard trip to Ohio. At 2 P.M. Saturday I took team and drove to Jas. Hardin's. Drove as far as J. H. McLaughlin on the way to John Mc Swords but visiting him here we called for half an hour and turned back. Spent an hour today with Mrs. Mc Dermott discussing the peculation of her son. Took dinner at A. P. Cope's and left a quarter by my plate.

Th. 23. Unprofitably busy all day. In forenoon drove with Hugh Cornely to O. Brookman's and thence to Roxbury to Chadwick's and up ridge to Jas. H. Waller's and on to Starkport at noon. Dinner at Cornely's and supper at Cope's. Evening at Daugherty's.

Fri. 24. About the town all day seeing and treating patients.

Sat. 25. The same.

Sun. 26. Cloudy and hot in forenoon. Hugh and I went to Abe Brookman's. In the afternoon Hatinwood and I drove to Pennsville and visited Robt James. Returning went over and dressed Mabel's foot. Mr. and Mrs. Wood whom I treated years ago hearing I was here called to see me and expressed great friendliness and gratitude. The operation seems to be doing very well. Many people have solicited me today to return. In a short conversation Mrs. Gurney divulged much of the unpleasant relations of her domestic affairs which I had long suspected. It is gloomy enough. Late in evening I took Gatewood and Etha for a row on the river. Called at Ang's and had a long talk with Stella. Retired early to be ready for the start in the morning.

Mon. 27. Off at 7:55 a.m. for Putnam where I left Gatewood to accompany the baggage to the depot in Janesville while I called to see Mrs. Swaney. After 30 mins I took street car and joined him. Then went to see T. J. McDermott in regard to his brother's embezzlement of money belonging to me. He promised to write me about the matter by end of week. At 11:55 took Penn. Handls for Cincinnati. It is showery and warm. Crops are very fine. Everything looks prosperous and homes look sweet and clean. I was never more impressed with the agricultural greatness of Ohio. Its varied capacities for producing seem almost unlimited. The streams were nearly all muddy from the recent rains and the drooping willows were dipping their heads. Reached Cincinnati at 6 P.M. walked a long way to buy a cut rate ticket which cost me $5.00. Got back to depot at 7 o'clock and found Gatewood in the lunch basket the contents of which he had almost devoured. I ate the little remaining and then he and I took a long stroll in the city waiting fountain square going to a salvation army meeting passing through the arcade and returning we took 11 P. M. train for Nashville.

It was a pretty restful night.

Th. 28. Quite cool and very wet but not raining. I long to reach home. The train was very long and heavy carrying troops and reached Nashville at 9:30 A. M. one hour late. We got off at College St. station took the street car and reached home half an hour before Annie who had driven to Union depot for us. I spent the day in resting reading and talking over our trip. Found everything in good shape notwithstanding a storm had broken a number of trees and damaged the roof which Annie had got repaired.

Wed. 29. Working on patients, reading and writing letters.

Th. 30. The same.

July
Fri. 1. The same. Spent some time in caring for little Helen who is convalescent with boils.

Sat. 2. Reading writing and working with the cases.

Sun. 3. Went in the morning to see Mrs. Condit, came back and played with Helen while Annie wrote.

Mon 4. Showery. The children unite with H. M. & A. Condit and carry out a long program in the S. yard at evening consisting of speeches fire works marching and singing patriotic airs. Their mother and Miss & Susan were auditors.

Tue.

5 Took 7:45 train for Columbia where I got a horse at Hudson's stable and drove to Hill Station. Took dinner with Mr Denham and we then drove to see some timber about 2 miles away. Chigors very bad. Otherwise enjoyed the trip very much as the recent rains made the roads free from dust and I had a good horse. The trip was not very successful in regard to its object. I could not purchase Knap's timber at any reasonable price. I drove to C. took train & was soon enjoying a breezy rapid trip homeward. I sat and looked out on the glinting light as it glanced from the leaves of the trees and the blades of corn while a sweet breeze fanned my cheek and charmed. Fed for the splendid Keesung. I drank in from every hand. When I started up Church St home the soft sunset sunlight still tinged the stupor of the city. I was not happy. Nothing had seriously ruffled the enjoyment of the day. As I rode along I often thought how much I should enjoy a world so sweet & fairylike as the flying hours with its mixture of green and gold of light & shade. Sweet thoughts would glide into my mind. One was the music which must be felt and had no sound or art in it. Another was the very strange discrimination made by the musical world in regard to the classification of sound. I have wondered if the boy who went to school in the varied sounds of nature did not learn more music than those who had spent the same time on the productions of Sigt Handel, Beethoven or Mozart. It would be a justification for me to receive some a definition of music which to me would be but the soul of sound. I have long felt this and thought the attempts of the musician to confine his efforts within the narrow limits of a series of human rules which would probably constitute a fair definition of art was narrow, selfish, presumptuous and barbarous. Why should the notes of a peed however artistically made be considered more musical than the whistles of a bird among the leaves, live and conscious and perfect from the hand of their maker. Why should we find more music in the notes of Jenny Lind than in those of the bird which sang over her head so sweetly that it seemed her tribute of respect and admiration? Why should we find more music or better in the trained concert than in the infant's croon. Is sound than in "silence which is vocal if we listen well?" The contemplation of this must confirm my previous conclusions that the musician was the representation of art, while music was that subtle something which allied to the spirit of that which was sweet in sound. These fine productions probably stand to real music as a shadow to a substance. I often think it quite possible that all the polished things we see are merely representatives of real things beyond. Perhaps object becomes adapted to our comprehension.

Full of this line of thought I hurried home to hear the voices of the household and enjoy the sweetest sound of all my little Helen's croon which I determined to take as a subject for a few lines of rhyme. Possibly they may some day interest "Jus Helen". Possibly they may benefit some one and so my time will not be wasted. I am often led to feel I ought to write something in this way.

- Wed 6 Fixed new shoes for little Oddie Parmer mending and placing new zinc insoles to add to stiffness and maintain shape. The Christian Endeavor Convention begins today and Gatemond and Cornell are in the chorus and are kept quite busy attending the exercises.
- Th. 7 Wrote three verses of "Helen's croon" and took care of her while Minnie and the rest attended Convention.
- Fr. 8 Same in A.M. Finished "Helen's croon" & took care of her. We had a fine time. She crooned and fidgeted and played around my chair or out on the grass as I sat in summer-house. At last she plead in her little way to be taken up and I sang her asleep and put her on a folded quilt under the shade of a tree while I wrote and watched and thanked God. How sweetly she slept and when she waked she began the same sweet croon.
- In the P.M. the boys and Annie persuaded me to go with them out to the Centennial meeting at Centennial grounds. We drove out. It was cool and delightfully breezy. Gen
O. O. Howard, Gen. Evans of Atlanta and Gen. Geo. T. Morgan N.Y. spoke. During the speaking Helen began her playful joyous croon which soon grew so loud we had to take her out as all attempts to quiet her were resisted by her into approval and she was correspondingly encouraged.
- Near time to close the boys went to the "Terminal Station" and stayed an hour contrary to orders. Gatemond being to blame for this I on returning sat him down with a great tin bucket over his head and repeated "Helen's occasionally call out "Terminal Station". He was disgusted.

I think he will not forget his trip to the Terminal Station.

Sat 9 I stayed at home and kept Helen while the rest attended the closing exercises of the C.E. Convention.

Sun 10 Working and reading. In P.M. we all went for a long walk.

Mon 11 Stayed with Helen while the rest attended the closing of C.E. Convention. We had many plays and songs and I got to fix some about the flowers but Helen usually considered me her personal property and demanded my attention. The rest were late in returning and I took a bucket and milked enough to feed H.
and then put her asleep.

Tu. 12 Good breeze and very bright a typical September day in O. Worked and cared for Helen and looked after patients.
Got letters from patients in O. saying how much I had helped them.

We. 13 Showery all day. Worked and looked after patients.

Th. 14 Split some wood and cared for little Helen and did some reading.

Fri. 15 Still showery. Worked some with my trees, read some and spent some time with callers. The recent showers have made all things look green again and in sharp contrast with the appearance a month ago. I will insert on the next page the lines I have written in "Little Helen's Room". Perhaps they may interest her some day. I like the subject - the thoughts.

Helen's Croon.

I have heard all kinds of music,
 All the strains of war and love,
 From the booming of the cannon,
 To the cooing of the dove;
 From the thunder of the tempest,
 To the whisper of the breeze,
 But the low laugh of our baby
 Is far sweeter than all these.
 It is a gift from Heaven
 And to me a priceless boon;
 High above all other music
 Is our little Helen's croon.

I have listened to the song-birds
 When their matins filled the grove,
 Like a tangle built of beauty
 With an atmosphere of love.
 I have lingered at their repasts
 When they lightly said "goodnight"
 With their hearts attuned to worship.
 I have heard with pure delight
 Their varied songs; all these were sweet,
 But methinks their sweetest tunes,
 Lacked something of the sweetness
 Found in little Helen's croon.

I have listened to the fountains
 As they thundered to the sea.
 I have stood upon the mountains
 When their huge wild and free
 Sang the heart notes of freedom.
 I have wandered by the sea

When liquid laughter kissed the sounds
 And echoed back to me
 The music of its gladness;
 But methinks their sweetest time
 Had naught for me, on land or sea
 As sweet as Helen's crown.

I have often felt a music
 That no mortal ever hears;
 The language of the human heart,
 Too pure for human ears.
 There is music in a love-look,
 In a smiling smile or tear;
 In the bursting of a rose-bud,
 On the twinkling of the sphere;
 In the golden glow of sunshine,
 On the silent glance of moon,
 And I feel a holy sweetness
 In our little Helen's crown.

Give us universal music
 And assign to each his part;
 A sacred sea of melody
 For every ear and heart.
 God bless the song and singer,
 And consecrate each heart
 To a holy, happy mission,
 Far beyond the reach of art.
 God bless all kinds of music,
 From the top of bairn's chorus
 To the perfect angel chorals;
 God bless our Helen's crown.

162 July

- Sat. 16. The same.
- Sun. 17. Wrote letters and read Halestead's History of Cuba.
- Mon. 18. Showery. Little Helen is not well^{and} I divide my time between her and my books.
- Tu. 19. The same.
- Wed. 20. The same.
- Th. 21. Mr. Ernest Curtis called for me with his buggy and we drove to Mr. Binkley's in Cheatham County. We went up Paradise Ridge where the fruit trees were literally breaking under their loads. We took dinner at Mr. Binkley's and then drove to see another Binkley where we spent an hour and then came back by another road through orchards breaking with reaches of apples. He drove me to the car line in North Nashville at 7:00 P.M. I took car and reached home about 8:30. Though our horse was a poor driver and part of the road was quite rough and wretched the trip had some pleasant incidents.
- Fri. 22. Divided my time between Helen, my books and correspondents.
- Sat. 23. The same. Near sunset we drove with little Helen to the city. It had just rained and the air was cool^{and} breezy. She enjoyed the trip and seemed to be better on returning.
- Sun. 24. Went to see some patients and returning spent most of day with Helen^d and my books. From 11 A.M. to 12 a heavy rain fell. A good old-fashioned soaking rain. It thoroughly soaked the gambling contingent who had gathered as usual in the grove to play cards. They were driven home looking like drowned rats.

- Mon. 25. Showery. Spent the forenoon with books and papers and little Helen. In the afternoon Gatewood and Helen^d and Annie^d went to the city. I went to Mr. Tafels, the instrument-maker and got a few things to take with me on my proposed trip to Ohio. It rained briskly while there, after which the evening was pleasant and brilliant with sunshine.
- Tue. 26. Still showery and I spent the day as usual with my books and papers and patients.
- Wed. 27. The same.
- Th. 28. Worked at the wood and fixing fence. Spent some time also with patients.
- Fri. 29. The same.
- Sat. 30. Attending patients and finishing my woods. Between times I read and write letters.
- Sun. 31. Warm and showery. Spent a good part of the day in examining house making. I did not read during the two hours Mr. R. Candall stayed to tell me about "hosses".

Mon. 1 Worked about yard road and drove with Gatewood and Helen to city

Tu. 2 Helped the boys pull weeds and made some preparations to start north. Got a letter from Mr Lyne in regard to Mr. Gortons feet. He takes a convenient and a very conservative view. Got also letter from child's mother and she to be fixed. In P.M. quite busy with a business transaction with Mr Binkley

Wed. 3 Raining. Still making preparations to go north. I am over seas and feel so badly I ought not to go but must.

Th. 4 The same. Helped Mr. Cundall clean out the cistern and went to see some patients. I am much depressed and dislike the trip both on my own and my families account.

Fr. 5 Brilliant day. Visited patients in morning and then Gatewood, Wile, Helen and I went to city to see about ticket and get some things. Afternoon spent in packing. My little Helen clings about me as if she knew I was going to leave. In the city she would begin a cry whenever I left the buggy and would watch for me on street and go into a paroxysm of joy whenever she saw me coming. In the buggy she would cry to be on my lap as soon as I got in. In the P.M. completed the packing and other arrangements for my trip North which I dread very much. It is the time for starting drew near we all took a walk in the yard and sat down as the sun was setting over the western hills on the log seat under the old elm. Here I told the children their sewing story after which we all joined in prayer.

 I talked to the children who promised me to be good boys while I was gone. In reply to my desire that one of them should be a physician each wet face looked up and answered "Dork, I'll be a doctor." Should these little purposes wisely kept we would surely be well supplied with "Dork." Gatemond & I remained to do the evening work while Annie, Wesley, Helen, Kettie and I rode to Lincks depot where I took train for Cincinnati. A bad night. My lameness grew worse and I caught more cold. Kettie slept well in the seat stretched at full length with the little pillow under her head. I spent a bad night often thinking of Annie and the flock. How often too I thought of Helen's crown.

Sat. 6. Morning beautiful. Kettie bright and fresh. We reached Cincinnati at 7:25 and at 8 are off on the Midland for Columbus. We ate our breakfast in the Central depot at Cin. After we got half way to Columbus Kettie fell asleep and did not wake till we reached Newark. Reached Janesville at 1:12. Went to see T. J. Mc Donnell then wrote two cards and ate dinner while we waited for the G. & A. train. It is quite hot. So far we have been fortunate, but I am

Aug. so many I wish I could see the dear old yard and rest. Reached Stockholm at 5 P.M. and went first to Milton Wallis. Then down to A. P. Ong's where I talked till near midnight and ~~at~~ drank an absurd amount of most excellent coffee which caused me to sweat copiously and relieved my nervousness to some extent.

Sun 7. In the morning spent two hours at Gornley's and then remained at Ong's till after dinner. Then walked to Abe Brokaw's and then on to Mallory where George and I had a long talk. I then walked part way back and was overtaken by George Brokaw who took me in his buggy and brought me back to Stockholm. The evening was spent in conversation with the folks. Dr. T. J. Lyne called on me to go and see Leslie Wotton and diagnose a case of lumbar abscess. At the earnest plea of the mother I went and bled it. Returning I wrote till 11 P.M.

Mon. 8. I am so hoarse I can only articulate with extreme pain. After an hour with Stella's coffee I grew better and went to work hunting for a suitable shoe and material for mending it. A sudden idea struck me to go to McConnelville and get Wiles to do it. I soon got ready and the people assisted me kindly in many ways. I went up on train at 8 A.M. and sitting here at work I went to see my old friend

Aug. Tom Barnes and at his store I made patterns for the week and gave to Worley. Then I returned and talked till noon and at his earnest invitation took dinner with him. He is in great distress of mind and body. Has been treated a good deal and despairs of relief. At his request I agreed to put him under treatment. It rained very hard all P.M. At the Malta depot Sam Brant and Man of waiting for train to take them home to Columbus. I reached Starkport at 5 P.M. very house. Took supper at A.P. Angis and drank large draughts of coffee. It was still raining slightly and quite dark when I was called to see Adora Beswick of flabby purpose and accident habit. She seemed desirous of getting my opinion on her case though dressed to go on boat to see Dr. Wampler. Both her looks, actions and speech disgusted me. An angry angry thither Janet Deane who formally inquired why I did not come around. I made him no promises. Retired late and slept sweetly. Nettie is somewhat home sick which localities itself first in her eye and then her toes.

Mon. 9. Dull, grey, gloomy and wet. Went about seeing friends. The show did not come as expected by train. Had a long talk with Linnie Gornley and learned the cause of my not having care of Martha's case at first. Also some of Hugh tactics and his

Aug. financial status. In the afternoon I took train for Waterford and met Jas. Boyman at the station. Hettie and I went out with him and sat once bursted the box of clothing and gave him his part. He seemed well pleased. Talked till ten P.M. and then I retired with Hettie on a big feather bed. I soon found I could not sleep on feathers so I got up and went to the lounge in the next room where I had a very good and pleasant nap. Rain! Rain! Rain!

Wed. 10. We and after a long talk took buggy and went to station and then train to Lowell where we met Dr. Harris and went home with him. After dinner we drove to Mr. McFarland's to see case of talipes equinovarus which we propose to operate. The distance was eight miles on a rough road. Saw the case which was a very bad one and arranged to go in the morning and operate. Came back by way of Cats Creek and stopped to see wood carving by Nicolas Bazil and then drove back to Dr. Harris's. Then went to see Lucilla at Swaynes. Then we make splints for the little feet and got ready to go in the morning.

Th. 11. Cooler. We drove to Mr. Jno. McFarland's and operated on child's feet. The right foot was very bad. The left better. We got back at noon. Hot and threatening

Aug. rains. I postpone my trip to Stockport till tomorrow eve. and sent cards to Stockport stating cause of delay. Snieder who got Dr. Kropps to attempt operation on child for hair lip because I would not do it for $25.00 came in this morning and wanted to talk it over and get me to do it at a reduced price. As soon as he announced his purpose I at once turned and walked out of office leaving where I had found him in conversation with Dr. Harris when I came in. He waited quite a while but I remained in conversation with Mrs. H. till he had gone. Later he returned and passed and re-passed the door to get to see me but I avoided him.

Fri. 12. Cloudy. Snieder went this morning to Marquette to see Kropps. We went up to see our little patient with the crippled feet. It had bled after the operation yesterday until it stained the casts. I feared this would blister the little feet. The casts were badly stained but the little feet looked well and retained their position very well. We were much pleased at the way the people received us and the mother's gratitude. She called her husband saying "John, just look at its little feet standing forward. I never expected to see them look so well." Then with tears gushing down her cheeks she said "Dr. Snieder's I will always pray that God will bless you." She seemed to be much interested in the story of my children and was highly pleased with all I told her. I came back feeling thankful to heaven for this opportunity of doing good. I playfully told Dr. Harris that I had set her to work for me. Took train at 3:21 P.M. and went to Stockport where I got letter from Annie and two from Garesville. Went to see Mabel and arranged to operate on her foot in the morning. Stella seemed glad to see us and the evening was spent pleasantly in conversation. As usual I retired very late.

Sat. 13. In the morning Dan Barkhurst called for treatment. I then went to see Mabel and operated upon her right foot. This time I cut deeply and freely and in rather a novel method, sometimes making two cuts in entirely different locations through the same opening. I severed the entire plantar fascia in front of heel and at middle of foot. Severed the tendon of the abductor pollicis, the tibialis posterior and anterior and the tendo Achilles. Besides making some other subordinate incisions. I then forced the crooked foot around into good shape. I returned to A. P. Clegg's for dinner and after dinner went to see the patient and to see Dr. Donovan and then Tom. Daugherty's after which I returned to Clegg's for supper. After supper spent the evening in discussing authors and literature till late when I retired to rest restlessly for half an hour when according to my usual custom I abandoned the coastship of Aug the dream-god by arising and writing letters till he came down d.

Sun. 14. Walked up to Mr. Cory's and applied medicine to his cancer on the right cheek. Add^d and Stella and I had planned a trip over to her mother's and down the ridge. They were to come on with the surrey bringing the children and pick me up at Cory's gate. I waited an hour but they did not come. Then I walked part way up hill and climbing on the high back above the road I lay down in the shade of the bushes to rest and wait their coming. Below me was the rotting trunk of a great beech under which I had passed scores of times both day and night, sometimes on professional duties, sometimes to the old brick church and sometimes to Stockport and still more remotely as a school-boy I had roamed the deep gulch below hunting for blood-root with which to stain my crude pictures. It was a fallen monument of better days. Around me still lingered many of the living sentinels. At last the surrey came and as soon as it passed by I stepped behind it and got in with them. Mary and Kettie laughed continuously and wildly enjoyed the trip. It was a pleasant day but warm. Reached John McDevitt at McDuck. John's countenance showed plainly that he was not glad to see me and though the rest insisted on my staying for dinner I promptly left on foot and was soon on the old home farm. On reaching the site of the old home I turned down the stony road up which my youthful feet had walked so often from the old spring. Reaching its site I found it was covered up by the wash of the stream. Great trees and bushes grew about it and but few of the living landmarks about it once remained. I went on to the other old spring in the corner of the field beneath the crumbling rock. It also seemed neglected. The trees which then grew about it were gone and I was just turning to climb over the fence again when I saw the decaying top of the old pear-tree, under whose branches I had so often sat to eat the fallen pears. Thither I went at once. It was forked and one half had blown down. The other half remained though decaying. The ground was covered with fruit of the tree was loaded. Though I had no occasion to go up for fruit I felt a boyish desire to climb it again and looking up it seemed to me it wanted me to do it. With some difficulty I ascended. I plucked and ate and gazed over the surrounding landscape as I had often done in childhood. I came down and gathered my pockets full according to my ancient custom before bidding it "good bye". There was the decaying trunk of a decaying apple tree close by which reminded me of a time when I climbed it and looking down saw a great snake which I descended to kill. I recalled also my attempt to alarm the cat by holding it and thrusting its nose down on the dead reptile, I looked down on my arm which still bore the white evidence of that cat's displeasure. I have survived the cat, the reptile and the tree. Close above the old pear-tree was the spot on which our first log cabin stood in which I was born. As if in sympathy with its memory the grass there was greener than any place in sight. No remnant of that house could have been found there even half a century ago. I turned regretfully from the place, walked down the slope I had so often ascended for fruit, crossed the deep gulch and ascended the opposite hill looking back often and recalling little scenes of boyhood. It was a very pleasant pastime. Presently I reached the linden tree which stood on the top of the hill. It had grown immensely since I saw it last, but still retained its old form and power of awakening youthful memories. I walked on to the barn and through it, recalling the hours of toil and sweat when I helped build it. There over the stable were the round joints, here on one side the largest one of which I had carried on a baulk from my two brothers who desisted at jointly carrying a smaller one. There was a ~~toes~~ ^{toes} in a walnut tree which as a sprout from the post I had intended to preserve in my early boyhood. In the yard were the trees I had planted nearly thirty years ago, loaded with fruit. A great cedar

Aug. stood by the pasture which I had planted forty years ago, when not six inches high. The auspicious appearance of these trees aroused in me more strongly than ever my passion for tree-planting which I seemed always to have possessed. I looked about for a short time in the old yard and then took my way across the orchard to the field back of it where I stopped to admire the two beeches I used to play under and climb. They are so vigorous and intensely green. Their growth has been wonderful. Here I induced Bob McSunds who accompanied me to go on to his father's and get his dinner. Then I went down to the grotto where I had so often gone to bathe and read and rest. The silvery little stream still poured over the rocks and splashed in the pool. The breeze murmured in the maple overhead. On a flat rock I undressed and was soon having my sweaty frame in the clear pool. This aroused the memories of many hours when I scarcely could drag about and constantly had recourse to this healthy stimulus. After completing my bath I remained for a little time on the slight bank which had formerly served as a horizontal bar. I walked around the pool and bathed my naked skin in the bright sunlight as of yore. Then I dressed and wandered quietly down the hollow where I had spent many a Sabbath hour before. Most of the great trees had been cut away, the thick undergrowth had been removed and only a few of the great trees remained like silent sentinels dressed in green keeping watch over this scene of desecration.

Aug.

The great peaks were gone, the bed of the stream would be filled up and instead of the faint path along which I used to ramble a broad stony wagon road had been built. I passed out through the corn field before and looking at its luxuriant growth I recalled the time when I broke the primrose sward with a shovel plow hoping timely sowing for the broken hard roots which were wont to play a tat-too in my shins. The ground is now owned by one of my youthful enemies though our feud is long since dead and we met with friendly salutation at the edge of the corn. He offered to take me back to Stockport but my course lay the other way and passing his house
 I went up the road my mind thronging with sweet memories till I had crossed the little branch from the east-where I turned into the fields and climbed up to the old house of my brother. The house was closed and the family were absent. Taking a large picture of my home
 I wrote a few lines on the back of itdirecting Edmund to go to Mr. Byrnes and get some things I left there for him. This I stuck in the door. I then went on to Bob McSwords's where I stayed for half an hour and as Stella and Add had not arrived
 I walked on down the ridge stopping for quite awhile at the Abbot church yard and visiting the little grove I had planted.
 I met a number of old acquaintances with whom I stopped to talk awhile and then went on till I reached the spring beyond Mill run where I rested and bathed my burning feet. I then walked on to Blackstone's

Aug when in answer to a pressing invitation I stopped and ate some meals. Mr. Colasanto, the husband of Annie Blackburn kindly took me in his buggy and brought me to Brookline stopping a little bit at Melrose. After a short stop at Brookline I walked on to Southport, leaving the vehicle. Though I had a long walk I did not feel unusually tired.

Mon. 15. Busy all morning with patients. Took small tumor from Rutha Long's scalp and spent an hour with Mr. Brookline. Then wrote some and looked after patients all day except an hour I spent with Mrs. McDermott. Mabel's feet are quite sore on top having blistered from excessive pressure. We are forced to remove the cast and make a slow fight on an ulcer. The weather is still fine. I am still at A. P. Long's and Nettie is happy with the children. Stella is very kind to me.

Tu. 16. I am very weary and much annoyed at getting so little done. The heat is very oppressive. Spent most of day at writing letters and visiting patients and acquaintances. When up train left went to the post-office. Got a letter from Sill saying Bogman had been badly hurt by a fall. Ran back to Long's and told them I was going to Waterford. In a few minutes took the train to Waterford and walked out. I found him suffering severely. The left arm and three ribs were said to be broken. Drs. Hayward & Kelly were dressing the injury. He seemed very dependent. I took up a few boards him and sent the rest to bed and watched all night. He rested fairly though he made many efforts to quench his thirst with water which I supplied.

past each time from the spring

I stayed

long as I could and cheered Boyman up. Among other things giving him some recitations. Dr. Kelly came in his office as I walked to depot. I called and talked the case over with him. Dr. Hays and walked to the depot with me and talked of Ballerina, he having graduated there only a few years ago. Reached Stockport at 8 in the forenoon. Went to Hugh Berns' and stayed till after dinner.

Went back to Aug's with the intention of changing my boarding place on account of their recent acquisition. Stella vigorously objected. Mrs. Glass consulted me in regard to spiritualism carrier or left check.

A long discussion followed. This ended with her employing me to remove it. Later went to see Mabel Sutter. There we also full the evening sky. I stay up awhile to see the celestial display. Then I took a bath which Stella had kindly provided and stretched my weary limbs on the broad bed and slept in dream of flame.

Th.

18. Up early. A gray sky and falling rain. In wet streets I walked to see my patients and I came back weary. More pictures of Helen of one of home by mail but no letter. Boring till two P.M. when I lay down and slept in the broad room on the bed undressed. I slept only a half hour but I did it well. I lay long after and listened to the feather music of the rain on the vines. It was delightful and brought into my mind the days of boyhood. Later I visited Mabel by returning to Old my Stella till very late.

Wet morning but cleared and soon grew hot. Went about town till weary and lay down on lounge and rested. Then rose and worked till noon and then taking a horse I drove to Mr. Hughes and Brooks and Muller's. It was a pleasant trip but muddy. Had a very pleasant conversation with Muller's family in which George took occasion to remind me with repeating but almost brutal frankness that he considered my worst fault my revengeful disposition, which he did not think was as far as as formally. I mainly reminded him that Doctors had less time and opportunity for discipline than ministers and possibly greater provocation. I had great difficulty in getting started, as they all importuned me to stay for supper. I came back and worked in town with patients till night. Got a letter from home. I had they are getting on well. How strange that I should be here so long, yet I feel that my mission is some way blessed.

Visited patients and wrote till dinner. After dinner I took Alice and Mary (and Nettie and drove to John Flemings, where I spent two or three hours pleasantly. I gave the children turns at driving and we all enjoyed it greatly. Home at sunset. Spent the eve in conversation. Slept poorly.

Sun.

Pleasant but warmer. Spent an hour with two cancer patients in the morning then put cast on Mabel's foot and discussed religious things with Mrs. Gornley till noon. On returning to A. P. C. he told me E. W. Oliver would call to see me. I ate quickly and fled from the town to escape being bored. Walked down the railroad enjoying the dancing water and brilliant wild flowers. Turning at Bessle I went up to Llanoravie where R. B. Muller and wife and Sue and her father and I sat in veranda and yard and talked for three hours on various social and religious topics. Sue seemed in a constant burst of delight. I surprised her constantly. She was much interested in my assertion that the solution of the social and industrial ills lay in greater thankfulness and gratitude. In answer to their desire for explanation I remarked that if people lived according to their thankfulness they would dress naked and live hungry. We all enjoyed the afternoon and when it rose to start Sue insisted on showing me her flowers which were blooming in lavish splendor among the products of the garden. She plucked forty or fifty kinds and gave to me. I combined them in one magnificent bouquet and carried back to the wonder of spectators. On my return I was bored with sullen and unthankful and unprofitable patients.

Mon.

22. I am growing weary of the delay in departure and long to be at home. Too much sympathy life and too little of my home. Mother is contented and the people are very kind, especially A. P. Argy and wife, but my constant fear of wearying is deepening day by day. Forenoon is spent in visiting patients and working with the cast on Mateli's feet. In the afternoon I felt so badly I went up over Bessle and then through the high weeds around the back water and on to Bald Eagle at bridge where I crossed and keeping up to near the Sunborn place where I took a bath which I enjoyed very much. Then down to where Deamie and J. T. Keen are making the water-fight each trying to turn the creek on the land of the other. Brady was at work on it and had a bottle of "snake medicine" close by from which he drew frequent liquid inspiration. We had a long talk and he frequently reminded me of cures and peppy things which he claimed I used to say about him. He reminded me that I had the Stockport-crowd so thoroughly subdued that if I stayed there fifty years they would never dream of attacking me. Leaving him in the enjoyment of liquid bliss I climbed the short hill and took my way through the corn back to A. P. Ang's for supper. The wolf which had gnawed about my heart had not gone but seemed to be resting from his excessive labor.

The morning is bright and very warm. My old enemy gnaws viciously around my heart. Attended my patients ^{and} went about some but suffered so much I could scarcely do anything well. I lay down for awhile. Sat up till late with the family at night. Letter from Annie and the boys. All want us to come back as soon as we can get away.

Wed.

24.

Hot again. I spent the day in town ^{and} about Ang's. Saw several patients. My car as usual goes so slowly. Letter from home with visitors of Annie and Helen. I am growing so weary of Stockport and its rambolling relations.

25. The same. A heavy rain last night made it more pleasant but still hot. I feel a little better but my wolf still gnaws me sorely. My cases go on slowly. Last night I tried to exact a promise from Stella that she would draw her children nearer to her by saying their evening prayers together. She assured me she could not and that she could not grant the promise. I then told her she would do this inside of twenty-four hours. While she assured me it was useless for me to think of her complying I still felt that she would. During today I frequently reminded her that the day was passing. At sunset I reminded her again and she looked almost sad but still persisted in standing out. An hour later as I was going out I again reminded her that the day was about gone. She raised her hand slowly but with deliberate determination in the presence of her husband and his sister and said "Yes, W. A., I will promise you." A few moments later she took her little one and began the fulfillment of that promise. What a field of great possibilities. May God bless and keep her firm and faithful and may this work so suspiciously begun prove with manifold blessings to her and others. How strangely she seemed to regard me throughout the evening evening. Retired late and slept badly.

Aug. ^{intown}. In the afternoon I went with Add and Stella and the three children as far as Mr. Brokaw's where I stopped and they drove over on the ridge for peaches. It was Mrs. Brokaw's 72nd birthday and she was hulling grapes. I took off my coat and helped her. I stayed quite a while and then walked back to town, where I visited my patients and returned to Aug's at dark and found the family and Nettie had just returned. I asked so badly I lay down for an hour.

Sat. 27. Hot. Spent the forenoon in work about town. In afternoon took 4:15 train for Lowell. Walked over to Dr. Harris'. They were surprised but glad to see me. We talked till late and then slept. I am now so weary of staying from home that I grow impatient for the day to come when I can start.

Sun. 28. Warm. Spent the day with Dr. Harris. He seems to have a good many patients and is content to continue here. His wife is a gentle, quiet and kind little woman of excellent sense and they seem to be very happy. He is suffering with hay fever.

Mon. 29. Up at dull dawn and walked down the canal. I was forcibly struck with the lack of fine scenery which usually presents itself at almost every point on the Merrimack. At 6:53 took train for Stockport. The sun was climbing through the gray clouds flinging here and there a splash of shine on a house, a mill or of gold on the forests that lined the slopes beyond the river. Banks of

Aug. sunshine and shadow played mantles hidden and pale over the slopes and along the shore. The sunset mists had colored the water which now looked like an ocean of cream and gold. As the little waves danced over the surface of the full beamed river. The willows were dipping their heads in the most graceful and modest beauty. Fantastic forms of trees draped in green vines which trailed to the water's edge. We soon reached the hills I frequented as a boy. Some of them had been disrobed of their green vesture while some still towered high above the river and verdant as in my boyhood. The winding river was bathed in golden glory. Enchantment seemed to have been over a magician's wand to produce this beautiful scene. Arrived at Stockport - I at once went to see patients and kept busy till noon. After noon Tom Mc Hugh took me out to Tom Hooper's and George Widdie's. Both were away from home. Stopped for a few moments at Parker Doughty's. What tales Tom tells of Stockport.

30. Out early and making preparations to get to Nashville. On August 28th to go eight miles and see a Mr. Seyler who is suffering with spinal necrosis. Also a call to go twelve miles to see a case of epilepsy. I had intended to stop over one day in Columbus but thinking I could do more good to throw that stop away and make this trip instead I hurried. Hugh Kennedy who was to take me and me were soon on the road to Seyler's. Reaching Seyler's I found him in a very unfortunate condition, with great spinal curvature, inability to stand without support and affected with a proud abrasion. He was needing the application of a plaster cast which having been imperfectly applied previously had caused great distrust in his mind in regard to it. Seeing his condition I determined to return to him later in the day with the necessary material and apply the cast. We then drove on five miles further to George Hollister where I treated a case of epilepsy. From there we drove to Roxbury crossed the river and came up to Stockport at 2 P.M. Got my dinner, hunted up the material necessary and drove to Seyler's. Applied the cast and drove back to Stockport a little after dark. Sat in the moonlight on the veranda and talked till 10:30. Then the rest went to bed but I stayed up till one o'clock writing and making preparations for my return.

Wed.

Very busy with patients till near train time. Stella helped pack and fixed up a nice lunch for us. A great many plead with me to return and locate in Stockport. They seem to have awakened at last to their own interests. Many got on to go to the State Fair. We had but twelve minutes at Jamesville to wait. Reached Columbus at 12:30. Ate our dinner and went to Maund's where we spent an hour. Took a three o'clock train for Cincinnati where we arrived at 7:20. Left Nettie with the basket at the L & N. depot and took car to the Central near which I bought a broken ticket for Nashville and returned. We left 1898.

Aug. Cincinnati at 11 P.M. and Hattie went promptly to sleep.

Sept. Th. 1. We had a very dusty smoky night and reached Elizabethtown, Ky. at day. The journey was successful and Hattie slept till the morning was far advanced. We reached Linck's depot at 8 o'clock but could not get our baggage without going to the Central station. Found Annie and Helen & Wesley and Correll here with the old barouche to take us home. We went to the central Station, got the baggage and after some trouble among the Railroad officials got ticket extended and sold it and came home. I had eaten smoke, breathed smoke, smelt smoke, carried it loose in my pockets and my clothes and frame seemed to be saturated with it. Took a bath and later a nap and settled down to the duties of home. When the night came we all gathered in the same old place and worshipped together. At last we were all at home again. The children were retired and Annie and I talked far into the night.

Fri. 2. Spent the day in correspondence and reading.

Sat. 3. The same in morning. Then went to city and later in day went to see some of my tenants.

Sun. 4. Spent the day in reading, writing & dictating.

Mon.

5. Reading and writing.

6. The same. The day was warmer [&] bright-with only a few clouds. I had several patients and Mr. Graham came and talked for about three hours. The rest of the family drove with Prof. Webb's family to White's Creek for a day outing. I took occasion to write a few lines in verse during their absence which I here with subjoin.

The 'Rest Are Away.

6 Sept. 1898.

The rest are away at White's Creek today,
To enjoy a sylvan retreat,
Filled with humming bees and whispering trees,
And the sound of voices sweet.

The song of the birds, the low of the herds,
And the ripple of the stream;
And the golden hours and the smiling flowers,
And children's sunny beam.

They've taken a lunch to feed the whole bunch,
And corn for quiet Queen Anne,
So that they can stay and spend the whole day
With nothing to hinder their plans.

I hope they'll have fun with many a run,
And splash in the dimpled pool,
And each attain some goodly gain
That abounds in Nature's school.

I hope they will stay till many of play,
Yes, many of war and of woe;
I hope they will play till many of stay,
Yes, many and long for the fold.

I hope they will mind and always be kind,
 Following their way far as the wind;
 That pure as the doves they will keep their love
 For the one who stayed behind.

I pray that to each the Father will teach
 A lesson of gentleness and love,
 Which they will apply as the years go by
 With a wisdom directed Above.

That the love of home, wherever we roam,
 Outlasts all the love abroad,
 And are pure and free for you ^{and} for me
 And come from the heart of God.

Who planted them then in the hearts of us,
 Who, tempted and tossed by the world,
 Will surely come back on the shining track
 Where the banner of Love is unfurled.

Let us love our home wherever we roam
 With an ardor no time can efface;
 Love its words and songs and all that betrays
 To this altar of heavenly Grace.

Let us keep it pure that our way is true
 Protection and blessing and love,
 The gift of His grace - the smile of His face,
 And a home in His home above.

When the rest are away we always can say
 Be it one or many we miss,
 "Wherever you roam we love you at home
 And keep you a heart and a kiss."

Now, if for a day, I wander away,
On business, or pleasure or care,
I hope they will say "the rest are away"
And keep me a home in their love.

And I promise them true, whenever I am through,
I will hasten right back to the fold,
To gather their kisses and loving caresses,
More precious than jewels or gold.

It was nightfall when they reached home weary and hungry and ready for counting and rest.

Wed. 7. Went to the city in the forenoon. In the afternoon wrote letters and read.

Th. 8. Was annoyed with company all day so that I seemed to get little done. I finished plaining vines for my vines on the South and trimmed vines between interruptions. A typical bright cool September day.

Fri. 9. Wrote letters and read in the forenoon. In the afternoon drove to city.

Sat. 10. Wrote letters and read in the forenoon. In the afternoon we all went to city. Had a pleasant drive and returned at sunset. At night took care of Helen while Annie sat up with Mrs. Perkins.

Sun. 11. A dull day. Several callers and many interruptions. Wrote between calls, visited some patients & late in evening took a drive.

Mon. 12. Worked at a pump and fence on Litchfield. Fed my bird tonight. Boys all in school today.

Mealey was put into the 2nd B. Grade and came home heart broken. He put his arms about my neck in the summer house where I sat writing and amid sobs told me of his assignment. I comforted him by promise of a new assignment as the principal Mr. Manlove suggested. The other boys went to Warner School. They do not like it as well as they did Caldwell School.

Tu 13

A rainy day. Worked in yard between showers. Mealey assigned to 3rd B. Grade.

Wed. 14

Worked at my trees and vines. Phil Nelson helped me.

Th 15

Visited patients and went to city. After a good deal of walking I took car to Cor. Indiana and Ninth Sts. W. Washburn to see a cow but was disappointed. Spent an hour waiting and returned by car at 1 P.M. to the Square. Walked to Perry & Lader and thence to Cor. of Woodland and Third Sts to see another cow but was disappointed again. Walked thru the Warner School to my home very weary. Rained hard late in P.M. after which everything was very fresh cool and sweet. Read in the yard after the rain.

Fri 16

An ideal Autumn day. Morning foggy and cool. Later the day was delightful with only a slight breeze. I spent most of day in yard reading the book numbers of New Unity and writing. In P.M. went to corner 9th & Indiana Sts. to see a cow.

Sat 17

Attended patients and drove Anna & baby to town. Returning visited patients and read. Spent evening with the children. We all enjoy the ripe grapes I bought very much.

- Sun 18 The day was spent with patients and looks and fun.
- Mon 19 Busy with patients and correspondence. Mr Hobson is fixing fence for me on Lischeyla and I am called over there. Quite warm.
- Tu. 20 Wrote and went to city. Worked some in yard.
- Wed. 21 The same. Bad news from some of my patients in O. Common sense seems a lost art. Gratitude is an unknown quantity.
- Th. 22 Wrote most of day. Late in P.M. went to Cor. Indiana St and Ninth St. W. Nashville to see a cow which I purchased.
- Fr. 23 A golden day. I played boy with Hettie and Helen worked a little in yard read some and after dinner went to city. It is breezy and bright and great golden splashes of sunshin fall over the green grass. The great white clouds drift idly or lie like ships anchored in a sea of blue.
- Sat. 24 Warm and brilliant. A few leaves trembling from the trees tell of Autumn yet the day is warm as summer. Spent the day in visiting patients, reading, walking, &c. The evening was delightfully pleasant & we spent an hour with the children in the bright moonshine under the elms. At times all five of the children were in the swing at once and at times each knew number. Those who were not in the swing were licking ice-cream on the grass or climbing over Annie or myself in the seats. Sometimes I played hide 'n' seek with Helen and listened to her soft glad some laugh when she found me. At last we adjourned to the upper veranda where I told the children a Whittier story and a New York story after which they went to bed and we sat for sometime enjoying the moonlit scene.

Sun. 25. Spent the day as usual at home partly with patients and reading and writing by turns.

Mon. 26. Called early to a confinement case and later looked after patients and wrote letters.

Tu. 27. Looking after patients and working about yard.

Wed. 28. The same.

Th. 29. The same.

Fri. 30. Raining. Drove children to school, went to city, got some grapes which on returning I helped shell and while Annie wrote them up wrote letters to patients in Ohio. At night while copying some notes on "O Love Divine" was called out to see Alms Guthrie who had been taken with a sudden hemorrhage from bowels. Came home and dictated two copies which Annie wrote to enclose in letters to our friends. I went back to see him again at eleven o'clock and found him writing rapidly.

Sat. 1. Alms died this morning. Spent the day at repairing & fixing and writing.

A Love Divine.

God, lend me now a seraph's tongue
 To voice the song by angels sung
 And may its sweetest accents prove
 But echo of the purest Love
 Our hearts can know. -- A Love Divine.

Dear Love above all words of mine
 As my poor heart is less than Thine
 Unseal my lips, my tongue inspire
 And on my heart with sacred fire
 To sing thy love -- A Love Divine.

Teach me to live that I may prove
 The presence of thy sacred Love
 In thought and word and deed, Teach me
 A childlike trust, dear Lord in Thee.
 A trust in Love. -- A Love Divine.

I care not for a human creed
 Of which I never felt the need
 I only ask to be forgiven
 And plead for Love -- the Love of Heaven.
 The Love of God -- A Love Divine.

I ask not place, I ask not power,
 I ask not wealth of earthly dower,
 Or ease, or human faith, or fame;
 I humbly ask, ask in His name,
 The Love of God -- A Love Divine.

I care not though another teach
 Thy vengeance, Lord, for each and each,
 I look to Christ whose lessons prove
 The boundless wonders of Thy Love
 For all who seek a Love Divine.

Give me that Love. Its sacred thrill Will teach my heart my Master's will.
 That Love will guide my wondering feet
 In paths of peace. That Love so sweet
 Will make me free. — A Love Divine.

Give me a use that Love to serve Content with what I may deserve
 A patient heart that I may still Some humble work of His fulfill;
 Some work of Love. — A Love Divine.

194 Oct.

Sun. 2. Spent the day in reading, talking to the children and caring for little Helen.

Mon. 3. Spent most of the day at correspondence and reading.

Tu. 4. Drove the children to summer school. Then took the hand saw and panned off the big gum tree about twenty feet from the ground. It was a tiresome job which I have disliked. Finding my cross-cut saw was unfit for work I took it to the bench and began the tedious job of setting and filing it.

Wed. 5. Finished my saw-setting and began sawing up the fallen tree, using the cross-cut as a hand saw. I would saw off a log, then repeat a verse of poetry, then an other log, then read a page of Macbeth and so on alternating the work and the recitation. It was very warm and the work was warm but I put in nearly all the rest of the day at it. Though quite tired I felt a pleasant glow which reminded me of the youthful days when labor was pastime.

Th. 6. Finished sawing and removing the wood from the yard. It was most of past noon. The day was very pleasant and breezy and brilliant and the sky was partially filled with soft fleecy beautiful clouds. This is the twelfth anniversary of our marriage. Nearly all the preceding ones have been bright and lovely as if by appointment. These twelve years have hurried by almost like a golden dream, yet so much has been crowded into them. Five busy active lives whose words and acts have daily blessed us. One little green grave between the white arches near by where many bless us and whose mission was as important and perhaps as full as those who gladden our hearts with song and sunshine. Three little boys away at school active in life and limb. A busy little brown-eyed fairy who flies me hourly with his love. A little brown-eyed slightly crooking baby girl a favorite with the fold. God bless them all and consecrate their missions to noble purposes. Sitting down to rest in the summer home and reflecting on the pleasant memories of the past twelve years it occurred to me that I might scribble a few thoughts on the subject in view for Annie who was preparing our anniversary dinner. The time was very short if I prepared it before dinner I would have little chance for selection or rejection of word or thought. Besides Nettie persistently insisted on dinner. The result was the following lines after which we all enjoyed our dinner. The day was ideal and all were happy. Looking back over the year with its labors and duties I feel thankful to the greatest for the loving kindness which has so signally blessed us. May the year to come deepen our thankfulness, our usefulness and love.

Twelve Years Ago Today.

Do you remember, dear,

When the golden days appear,

And the "autumn" haze is here,

And all Nature wears her garb of sober

Green and gold, the brilliant day,

Twelve happy years away,

Filled in with children's play,

Twelve years on sixth October!

As if a quiet sweetness,

Contentment and completeness,

Had paced the years in fleetness

We count the dear days over;

So full of sweet enjoyment,

Of duty and employment.

As if by Heaven's assignment,—

Twelve years this sixth October.

Twelve happy years today, dear,

Where stars were bright and clear,

Shining on my heart, Oceans of cheer

Where both have played the lover.

I think how fast they flew;

And their memory is new,

As my love has been for you.

Twelve years this sixth October.

May all our days be bright:

God keep our hearts as bright

As the sunshine. May the night

Be but the star gemmed cover

Which angel hands have spread—

Over happy heart and head

Of the happy pair who wed

Twelve years this sixth October.

7 In the morning Miss Bettie Anderson called and stayed about eleven o'clock. She was in the rain and continued most of day. Annie and I spent some time in the summer house, I dictating, she writing. Remainder of day spent with my books and pencils. This latter is an agreeable amusement to me and as I try to avoid putting anything bad or impure in my verses they probably will be a little good. I have no ambition in them except to hope that they may do a little good. The following was an improvisation experiment today.

I have No Time.

I have no time for sadness,
And grumbling at the badness,
Of the time.

I give no voice to madness
But sing a song of gladness
Which is mine.

I have no time for dreaming
Of emptiness and unmeaning Things of life.

I have no time for playing,
No time for idly saying
Words of strife.

I have no time for gleaming
The empty and unmeaning Words of vice.

I am busy with the moving,
With the earnest and the loving
Which suffice.

And as my time is going
I am busy with my sowing Seeds of Love.

I may not do the mowing
When the harvest field is glowing
From above.

But am promised that His blessing
A sure harvest for my reaping,
If I stand.

Then, I have no thought of fainting
But am patiently awaiting His dear hand.

I am sure He is but proving
If I am true and loving
In my life.

So, to my task addressing,
Let me earn His daily blessing
Which is life.

Let my heart be daily growing,
Let my life be daily showing Something pure.

While I wait for Thy appearing
With a confidence undimining,
Sweet and sure.

8. In the morning worked in the yard till the mail came. Then Annie and I drove to city. After returning split wood till night.

Sun.

9. Spent the day with my books and children till dinner about 3 P.M. Then we all drove out the Whites Creek Pike, crossed to the Dickerson pike and home.

Mon.

10. Good, breezy and brilliant. Saw my tree in South yard (which I had sawed off about 25 ft. high) into stove wood. I would have been quite tired and read a page of Macbeth.

Tu.

11. Rainy. Took the children to school and then went to city, got some books and provisions and came home. This is Watson's birthday and he seemed to enjoy the dinner and prize the Oxford Bible which we had placed on his plate. I hope he may always prize it and remember the verse I wrote upon the fly-leaf.

Wed.

12. An ideal day of brightness and quiet splendor. The air was cool, breezy and pleasant. I was at my work and we were home till after the boys returned from school and as this was little Patience's birthday we concluded to take her for a drive. We took a long drive returning at sunset. All seemed to enjoy it immensely and more than little Patience who constantly sought to climb to my shoulder and prattled about the cows and cattle and of which she called a

"fossie". I think sometimes these drives will remain as bright memories in their little hearts.

Th. 13. Worked about the yard clearing the wood and brush away, setting posts to some of my trees and with the assistance of a negro tramp who called himself a lumberjack which he seemed desirous of not finding I straightened up some of the things which had got out of shape. At two o'clock it began to rain and I was compelled to suspend outdoor work for the time being after which I went to work.

Fri. 14. Cool with a little frost. Took the boys to Warner school and then went on to near the Rosebark nursery where I visited Mr. Bowers, a patient with cancer of the under lip. He is in a deplorable condition. From here I drove back to city, bought a few things and returned, Maria accompanying me all the way. In the afternoon I did not do any work.

Sat. 15. Cool and bright. Worked at my wood shed. made a rustic seat near the large arches which I intend to make serve as a bellie.

Sun. 16. Cool, windy and bright. Read till dinner after which we all drove out to see the unfortunate cancer patients Mr. Bowers. Returned at sunset. The evening was spent pleasantly with the children at story telling recitations &c

Mon. 17. Rainy. Very warm. I remained indoors most of day writing and mending.

- Su. 18 Working at the wood and at rustic trellis at middle of South side of yard. It is a novel thing made of locust limbs fastened transversely to two large locust limbs set in the ground. It is a difficult task in fitting as the, are large and stiff.
- Wed. 19 Cool, fresh and clear. Took Hattie and G.L. and drove past Wagner school leaving G.L. and going on to Joe Bowers where I removed a part of life and then drove to town. It was a show day and Hattie enjoyed the parade.
- Th. 20 Trimming trees, chopping and repairing.
- Th. 21 Spent some time in writing the verses on opposite page ^(see below) and cut wood & nails.
- Sat. 22 Cold and windy. Wrote a good part of the day on "one of my trips" and read some. Later in day worked at the wood pile.

I wish no Fame.
I wish no fame, but let my name
Be linked with something better,
In other days than words of praise
That sound in word or letter,

But make for good but little food —
In life no sad heart brighter
That please the ear but fail to cheer
Or make a life-work lighter

But if a word of mine transferred,
Should thrill another's heart,
To greater scope or sweeter hope,
Or some good thought impart,

I would be pleased though never praised,
 Could I but write, above
 The reach of fame or empty gain,
 A word to kindle love.

I would be pleased, if my hand eased
 The poorest mortals' pain
 I'd prize the touch that gained so much More highly than all fame

But tongue affords no glowing words,
 Though nicely ranged in rhyme
 With splendid art, to guard the heart
 Against the storms of time.

And keener still must be the thrill
 Of him who wastes his power
 And feels disgrace of misused place,
 Or means, or time, or power.

All earthly gain could I obtain,
 And grasp all earthly power,
 And reap the fame of every name,
 I would regret my dower,

And deeper still my heart would thrill,
 And fret to break its fetter,
 And burn in shame of empty name,
 And long for something better.

So let my name, unlinked with fame,
 In some fond heart be treasured;
 And let my line, by hand divine,
 In future life be measured.

Sun. 23. The day was ideal in brilliancy and loveliness. Not a cloud could be seen and a soft bright sunlight filled the clear atmosphere with golden splendor. Most of the day was consumed by callers and patients. After dinner which was late the day rapidly embraced the opportunity for getting a ride and promptly put Helen down into the old phaeton and we all drove out the Western pike as far as Trinity Church and then crossed to Bridge Church pike and drove home. It was a pleasant drive which all enjoyed and none more than little Helen who was not content till she got between my knees and nestled down where she remained till she reached home. In the evening she became hoarse and we sat up with her till one o'clock. She was restless and croupy. I am fifty three years old today and feel thankful that God has spared me another year and I hope given me some usefulness. While I do not feel satisfied with the measure of my work I hope for with God. He has been so often blessed me beyond my merit. Looking back to my last birthday I can not contemplate the work I used to do each year but hope and pray that He will bless it and continue His benevolent kindness through the year to come. I have no ambition but to be useful and the measure of that usefulness seems to me rather circumscribed. My health is probably about the same. I assure myself sometimes by writing crude verses into which I try to put only good thoughts. They have little merit but as they interest my wife she has copied most of them into the journal. Our home life is happy and mutually helpful. We have enjoyed it very much. It has run on with the same regularity and our evenings are spent in the same old way with song and story and books and games, far into the night. After our evening prayers, the girls and Todd then all the children retire while Annie & I spend the evening pleasantly together while little Helen sleeps off her crib. Whatever the issues of the coming year may be I rest them contentedly with the Greatest.

In the morning at breakfast I found upon my plate two mementoes of their love two books among the leaves of which were scattered little tokens of love. The one "Gould's Song Syre" was from the three boys upon a fly leaf of which they had placed their names with the inscription "To Dad" and date. The other "The Fourteenth Century City" was from Annie. Little Nettie had remembered me by giving two pennies and a lock-mark. They concluded that little Helen should also be permitted to share and ran to the yard and brought a halcyon leaf for a lock-mark as Helen's donation. Among other things was also an ivy leaf from little Grace's grave. This affectionate tribute was very pleasant and touching. Upon looking at them it reminded the little ones of God's goodness in thus keeping us all together and blessing us so equally.

little Wally was touched deeply and his tears were the first to flow. He jumped in his seat, "got down" from his chair came to my side threw his arms around my neck and pressed me fondly while he kissed me over and over as the tears chased down his cheeks. Then by turns all came to follow his example. Even little Helen leaned forward in her high chair and sweetly kissed the air till she was pleased to reach that she might kiss me also. God bless them all and make me more worthy of them. May this bright morning with its beam be typical of our future. Father into Thy care I commend them to be bless according to Thy will and wisdom.

- Mon. 24. Trimming trees and cutting wood.
- Tu. 25. Raining. Read in the forenoon and took care of little Helen. In the evening dropped words for awhile though quite lame.
- We d. 26. Wrote letters and cut wood and took care of little Helen who seems to be getting better.
- S. 27. Went to Mr. Bowers' and saw the drawing and examined the life which I found ready for print tying and directed accordingly. Took them to city and procured making for underpinning the little cottage below us. Later in day worked for an hour at preparations for fixing it.

Fri. 28. Heavy frost but bright morning. At eight o'clock I began work on the underpinning and finished it with all my might. Long as I had time to spare I succeeded in getting done all I had laid out in the morning. I was very weary but much gratified. Later when the moon had climbed high enough to flood the yard I gathered and piled up wood which I had been cutting for several days. In this way I hoped to accomplish a double purpose, get the work done and prevent the wide-spread stiffness and soreness which was fast invading every part of my frame.

Sat. 29. I was called up before day to go to Mr. Osborne where I was doing all about eleven o'clock. Then went to Craig's to see a typhoid patient after which I returned the work on the underpinning of the cottage against dinner. After dinner I attended Council and I went to city.

Sun. 30. A beautiful day but mostly given up to callers. Read some and wrote some.

Mon. 31. Began painting my scenes but was soon called away to see Mr. Tom Brown's child. Rode over with him and came back by car. Then worked till night.

Tu. 1. Still painting and making ready for winter.

Wed. 2. Went again to see Mr. Brown's child and as usual on my way back stopped at book store and purchased some books. Worked till night about the yard.

- Th. 3 Still working at my wood and preparing for tree-setting.
- Fr. 4 Still making preparations for winter.
- Sat. 5 Rainy. In the morning went to see Willie Craig and on way back met Mr. Brown and went again to see his dying child. Home put books on shelf bought two books. After dinner Annie and I went to theatre at Garden to see Wade, James and Kidder in Othello. It being a distasteful piece to me I could not enjoy it and possibly was not competent to judge of the merits of the presentation as otherwise I might have been. As Othello Mr. James presented some features of excellence but I could not help contracting the heavy tragedian in this play with the same in Spontaneous, where I think he has few equals. Wade displayed his usual versatility but his scholarship and fine literary work seemed to me largely lost in his personification of the villain Iago. Altogether, it seemed to me the men were out of place to such a degree that nothing but excellent work here would sustain their reputations. Both displayed excellent executionary merit but all in all the play was not improving with the excellence of the actors. We came home in crowded cars under a weeping sky. In evening went again to gather with the children around the warm fire.

- Sun. 6. Bright but raw and windy. Spent the day with patients and books.
- Mon. 7. Cold and raw. Visited patients, cut wood [&] read.
- Tu. 8. Bright and sunny. Went to nursery and ordered trees, wrote letters and later in day planted ten trees.
- Wed. 9. Rainy [&] disagreeable. Am suffering much. Spent part of the day writing some lines on the Dollar.
- Th. 10. Cold and raw. Chopped some wood [&] worked about the house, occasionally writing a line or two on my "Dollar" piece.
- Fri. 11. The same.
- Sat. 12. Drove to city with Annie, made some purchases, visited the basement of second Land Bank at Baltimore, visited some patients and planted trees till dark.
- Sun. 13. Raining and disagreeable. A good part of day was spent with patients. A part was spent in transcribing some of my verses beginning on the preceding page, where I give a retrospect of one of my many cold rides. It is not to be expected that these lines will greatly interest anyone else but they possess a vital interest to me. Though these terrible experiences were oft repeated I seem to have carried a charmed existence through them [&] emerged unscathed by the experience incident to them.

One Of My Rides.

The snow was gray and far away,
 Gray clouds flew swiftly by,
 And faster still with ice and chill,
 Gray rain swept ceaselessly
 Across my way. Without delay,
 For sleep, or rest, or food,
 At break of day myself and gray
 Were plunging through the mud.

On, on, we went, on duty bent,
 Regardless of the storm,
 Which fiercer grew and rumbled anew,
 To gather force and power.
 It louder howled, and heavier growled,
 A fierce and biting blast —
 Our minding sheet was changed, ~~but~~
 The cold grew colder fast.

The ear and hand and useful quirk,
 Now mingled with the latter
 At clashing feet the flying dust
 But in a telling pattern
 That cut the skin, while mingled in
 This stormy, mad confusion,
 The danger yell, as if from hell.
 Bad sounds held, strong communion.

But on we pressed, our strong hearts bled
 With faith in high direction;
 She trusted mine — my trust divine.
 For both, was full protection.
 Her storm-tossed mane, with ice and rain,
 Whipped madly on my face;
 With nostril wide, in stormy space.
 She kept her rapid pace.

She heard my voice by plainest choice,
 And heeded my directions
 By words or touch; she showed so much
 Of faithful, fond affection,
 And lived thought, that I would not Once doubt her living future,
 Nor her reward, nor her regard;
 Nor yet her noble nature.

The icy blast augmented, fast
 In mad! tremendous battle;
 Clothes, mane and tail, with icy mail,
 Increased the stormy rattle,
 While crashing feet, on frozen sheet
 Of mud that stretched beneath,
 Still swelled the din, that mingled in
 The chatter of my teeth.

But still my gray knew no delay
 And nothing of affright,
 As from the North there whistled forth,
 Old Boreas dressed in white.
 His banners wide, on every side.
 Swept earth and sky and air
 In sheet of white from morn to night
 Nor dared the tempest there.

Far into night, with raging might,
 It heeled and yelled and screamed
 And with its caterpillar's legs
 And very dangerous road,
 Which balled the feet with mud and sleet
 And snow, and stuns enchanted,
 A cruel care I could not share,
 Nor ease as we advanced.

Along our way, all through the day,
 I often stopped to see
 The sick; but, when I came again,
 She fondly greeted me ~~with her smile~~
 With kiss and sigh as if to say,
 "My friends, I'm glad to see You back again, to share this rain
 'And ice and snow with me'".

Then sidling round, to make the ground,
 Assist me to her back,
 She pranced away, with step so gay,
 Along her weary track,
 (As if to say, "I know the way,
 And now will hurry back,
 To eat the hay, you keep always Provided) in my rack."

Once on the way, my faithful gray
 Put back her nose to meet
 The bit of lunch which she would crumb
 For hunger made it sweet.
 One biscuit small and this was all,
 Except a slice of meat,
 Which fair in twain, I tore again
 And gave her half to eat.

She tossed her thanks and through the bank
 Of snow, swept grandly on;
 She loved me well, but could not tell
 How deep her love had grown
 By land ships' hand, by winter's frown,
 Nor sleep, nor rest, nor food,
 But yielded each, our aim to reach,
 In striving to do good.

At midnight cold, - as gray but still
 I stay, with her feet -
 In days, was lawn and midnight - on
 A page of mud and dust
 And subv. its name - as she is long
 Its end - her humble state -
 Its place - the goal of where stood Above and crowned all.

Too oft in life, the stormy strife
 Still almost hide the merit
 Of honest work; and those who shrink
 The toil will claim the deed.
 No merit had a motive bad,
 And try to hide it well
 And thus efface the silent trace
 And truthful tongue to tell.

But if you have a house little worth
 The little of air
 That still day or since, I pray,
 It may be like the trail
 Of faithful gray - hidden away
 As if some stormy night
 With charity and purity,
 Had covered it with white.

But looking back, along the path
 Of swiftly flying years,
 I see the mass of other days,
 Its sunny smiles and tears.
 In fancy still, I feel the thrill
 Of grateful words. I hear
 A mother's thanks, I see the bark
 I climbed - the water clear.

I see green hills where silver wills
 Go dancing on their ways;
 Where flowers bloom with sweet perfume,
 And children laugh and play.
 I am content; — for with me went Through life, as on that day,
 God's special care, which still did spare
 Myself and faithful way.

Nov. 7, 1898.

- Nov. 14. Took care of Helen and wrote while Annie washed in the forenoon. In the afternoon planted trees.
- Mon. 14. Took care of Helen and wrote while Annie washed in the forenoon. In the afternoon planted trees.
- Tu. 15. Worked about the ground and read and wrote letters. At night went to the tabernacle with Council to hear ex-Senator Peck lecture on "Good boys and bad boys." His liberality toward bad boys was very broad and optimistic, yet it had much of pleasant application and logical truth. We walked both ways and Council seemed tired when we got back.
- Wed. 16. Spent most of day with patients. It was rainy and I could not do much outside work.
- Th. 17. The day was spent with patients and books and some light indoor work.

Th. The same. Did some odd jobs of work, wrote some letters and read.

Sat. 19. A beautiful golden day which I spent with the children among other things going to Joe Brown's house for a walk and in afternoon took all the children to the market in the old barouche.

Sun. 20. A soft mild golden day. Read and walked and told stories to the boys about Thomas Gillie, one of their favorites. Late in the afternoon we all took a drive out the Whites Creek Pike and reached home shortly after sunset. Found Mr. & Mrs. Gardner waiting. The children enjoy their trips and plead for them as often that we grant them to our friends. It is hoped will build a pleasant memory of association in their minds. It is one hilarious romp from the beginning to the end. All our happy little Helen was sufficiently happy to pull off her shoes and stockings and cast the latter overboard into the road. I hope bright memories will cling about these days and that with the stories they plead so much for God will bless both beyond our ken.

Mon. 21. Fixed fence, repaired stable and made at night. Wednesday and I went to the New Marion to hear Mr. Hall lecture on Psychology. He is a man as we had to stop at Leakey's grocery. It began raining just when we started and grew harder and

- Nov. harder until we reached the theater. I was wet through but determined as much as possible to avoid being chilled. The exhibition was very protracted and we did not get home till near midnight. Waterwood's excitement was unbounded.
22. Working some out doors and writing and reading by turns.
23. The same.
24. A bright day. This is Thanksgiving Day. The children are home from school and we all spend the day happily together enjoying our excellent dinner and our plays and stories more than we would superior splendor or wild abandon. In the evening the boys were greatly interested in a Thanksgiving story in which one of the heroes of their tales known as Billy figured as chief actor.
25. The day is spent much as yesterday.
26. Cold and disagreeable. Spent the day by the fire with the children. Sometimes I wrote a few lines and sometimes I told another story.
27. Disagreeable day. Wrote some verses entitled "While Sitting by the Fire". After the children had their story I sat by the fire till midnight.
- Mon. 28. Rain disagreeable and rainy. Finished "Only a Girl".

Only a Dollar.

Only a dollar, broad and round,
 White shining face and silvery sound,
 But, if you care to spare the time,
 I will tell my tale in simple rhyme,
 From the day I left the sunny coast,
 To compass the world, without a hint
 Of the strange companions I would meet,
 And the strange possessors that would greet
 Me. Now, my trip was long, not slow;
 But swift or slow, I had to go
 Just where my kuter chose to end,
 Or buy, or give, or lose, or lend.
 And, as I could not choose my friends,
 You must excuse the scant awards,
 I make, as I proceed to tell
 How often ill, how often well
 I fared. To make my story brief,
 I will state a few of the chief
 Of many thousand strange events
 Of the many good and bad intents,
 My owners showed in using me
 For better or ill, and for the
 For purpose vile. Then, standing with
 The painful facts, I plainly tell,
 And carefully record my strict account,
 And plainly state the exact amount,
 Your ledger shows on balance sheet
 Of gain or loss; but, be discreet
 And count for gain the simple good,
 The rest for loss is understood.
 Then take each balance as this affords
 And write it on the bulletin boards,
 Where all the world may quickly see,
 How much was gained, or lost, by me.
 For simple good, who need we list?
 For purpose bad — are the same list,

Then hold men, lords to strict account,
 Be it much or little their account.
 Before you praise their generous deeds,
 Make sure their motives and their needs;
 Note well the hand that stained, by toil
 And that which work does never soil;
 And how these hands, though side by side,
 Esteem me, worth as on I glide;
 How much it costs the first to spend
 That which the last with ease may end.
 Or give. But to my tale, I intend To leave the reader to perpend.

I started out as a conveni-
 For a little boy so debonair;
 He briefly scanned my shining face,
 Then gave me with a noble grace
 For little sister's shoes; and next
 I went to pay the merchant's vessel
 And growing debt; next, to the bank,
 Where, loaned, at ten per cent, I sank
 The farmer who paid me out for tail;
 To a neighbor who paid me out for soil,
 To a goodly miser who looked me up,
 This last ten days, in a rusty cup;
 Till his larger came, with a filching hand,
 The look of a miser could not withstand.
 I next was made the price of a vote,
 And next, exchanged for a filthy goat;
 And then I went for coal and
 In gambler's "margin" and "rebate";
 And then to pay an election bet,
 To a sweet old deacon who then let
 His preacher buy me, under debt,
 He never paid. The preacher set Me going soon; but, could not get

But self gave shoes for his holy feet,
 From his merchant who sold at cost
 Because his preacher never met Him with a den and never yet
 Had got a cent. He paid me out
 For watered milk and got, no doubt,
 His due. The milkman gave me to his maid,
 In whose honest hands, all night I stayed,
 And went with the milkman and his milk,
 Back to the merchant to purchase silk.
 He gripped me tight, though in his clutch,
 Till the goddess of liberty hollowed "ouch,"
 And then he wailed me in his clutch,
 To cheat the thieves, who, I avouch,
 Came in the night with quiet march,
 But nobler step than had the plough,
 They robbed. They traded me for sweet drink
 And thus I found an honest link
 In trade. My owner gave me next for boots,
 For Christmas gifts for girls whose boots
 Could not be bought with me. This man
 Now kept me moving in the van
 Of honest trade, which swiftly ran,
 And pleased the buyer and the man
 Who sold. He gave me to his little boy,
 Whose heart beat and his hand for joy,
 And quickly changed me for a toy,
 Which, he and sister could enjoy.
 My mission next was to decoy
 A youth at cards, and to destroy His foolish hopes, by falling in
 A gambler's hand all black with sin
 And vice foul, which always mine:
 For an hour then I groaned within His greedy grasp - then, out for sin
 And whisky cock-tails. In the din,
 I went to pay for broken skin

And more there, and Lagy's chin.
 In legal court, I thus begin
 Another race and quickly open
 To grace the judge's little twins
 With raps and caps and little pains.
 My vintner next is marriage fee;
 And next for soap and beef and tea,
 And then for secret sin, conveyed
 To scarlet hand, I briefly played
 A filthy roll. I was the price
 For plunging late beneath the ice;
 And next am lost at game of dice,
 And then I leave the halls of vice,
 And go to buy a turkey side
 To place in hungry mouths a slice Of food. Back to the bank I stray,
 Where I am snugly packed away
 And idly linger, day by day,
 As if my mission were to stay,
 Until a debtor came my way,
 And guaranteed that he would pay.
 In time quite brief, if I were lent,
 At least from ten to twelve per cent.
 Now, I am used to purchase grain;
 The honest farmer sows again.
 And then I go to buy a calf,
 And then to make the children laugh,
 At show, where, I am paid for bread,
 And quickly deck a daughter's head.
 The milliner, next, gave me instead Of broken word. Next, I am used Unwillingly, to miser's clutch,
 Whose purpose only death can touch;
 And thus, at last, I am released
 When greedy lord becomes 'deceased.'
 At last, I reach a noble man,
 Who rightly sees me and can

But for me, in a proper place Of use. Not more, nor less, he sees than His reason says: He sees my good;
 In meing, not abusing, should
 Be his guide and pays me out,
 Without a grudge, without a doubt.
 He only seeks a level deal,
 He says all else is but a steal,
 And many things he does reveal,
 Of good for me and common weal.
 He says, I was not made to be a lord.
 That good or bad in me is stored
 As I am used; that I afford
 Rare chances not to be ignored.
 That I should never hold the sword,
 And neither meant to be a lord
 Nor servant vile; that I may curse
 The man who keeps me in his power
 Too long is shut - that time to fight;
 To keep, or give, or see, or lend,
 Must depend on such circumstances
 On careful thought for honest ends.
 He says, the dollar kept for sin
 Is never worth the dollar won
 By toil; and that no living man
 Has foresight, keen enough to see
 The good or evil of my power,
 When he is dead a little hour;
 That if you slave and save a barrel
 It only makes your children quarrel,
 And severs them with envious heart.
 And prisoned mind, and keeps apart;
 And to their biased judgments prove
 Your lack of wisdom and of love.
 While they will show by this device,
 You had a nature cold as ice,
 And would not listen to advice.

And that your love must have a price;
 And thus, for you, in one short day,
 Respect and love are thrown away,
 And hearts made black with home-made guilt,
 Around the altar you have built
 For mammon worship, while you think
 You but provided meat and drink.
 Now, while this risk you should not run
 The other extreme you should shun.
 Count me a blessing held in trust
 And be no more nor less than just;
 Remember well my hidden power
 To bless or curse a future hour;
 That, when I'm sent to ease the pain
 Of hunger, I will come again,
 In blessings on the donor's head;
 Or, if withheld, a curse instead.
 Beware, I am no empty trust,
 At strict account you must adjust,
 Whether I pass for love or lust,
 For sparkling gin or beggars' dust.
 Important, too, this question must Be met: "How came I in your trust?
 Did you dig me out of the dust?
 Or secure me by means unjust?
 Was I, at my price? Or, as I thought Into your hands? Were some mistrust Attend the motive you concealed
 Which later still must be revealed?"
 Now, if your hands are still unclean,
 No trifling good can intervene
 To cleanse your trust. Let right the wrongs Return to each what there belongs,
 And when your hands are thus made pure
 My purest blessing you insure.
 You will return me, not by count,
 But always from the right amount.

For honest use. The mad delusion
 Which fills the earth with rank confusion.
 Is, how to get more, not to earn
 And slowly close the goldenearn.
 He needs to use, not to burn.
 The few short days of his sojourn.
 The greedy world has set a price
 To make a virtue of the vice
 Of getting overmuch. Abuse
 Has scotched its name to use.
 The man who makes great wealth,
 Too oft as he gets by stealth,
 Though millions more at his command,
 And sound his praises thro' the land,
 His brow should wear the robber's brand,
 While Justice, with her sharp demand,
 Should write his name in drifting sand
 Until he show an honest hand.
 Then wealth no longer, worth would rule,
 Nor be for him the sweetest tool;
 And silly mortals, in this school,
 Would learn how well they feigned the fool
 In hearing for the unknown use
 Of scoundrels, who were less abuse.
 Now, as my story nears its end,
 A few plain words, I apprehend
 If kindly said, will not offend;
 And these few words, I will commend
 To those who buy, or sell, or lend;
 Or keep, or hoard, or give, or spend,
 Or must see of me depend.
 You only waste when you mispend;
 And hoarding, too, is but abuse,
 Like manna kept for future use.
 As if the Father might forget
 And leave his child in want to fret.
 I'm gift to you, but wisely judge

And never give me with a grudge.
 Remember, too, my humble birth
 And pay no more than I am worth
 To get me - just one hundred cents.
 In toil, or trade - in lands, or rents;
 And he who pays a greater price
 Is guilty of as great a vice
 As he, who manages the price
 Of labor's bread, or coal, or ice.
 My friends, I think that you forgot,
 Or gave to me but little thought,
 In what you sold or what you bought,
 The good or ill that I have wrought;
 But, now I ask you, ponder well
 Both when you buy and when you sell,
 Or gain, or lose, or spend, or give,
 In living, let your neighbor live

Moral

The wise are those who reap content
 From money gained or money spent;
 Because they use it by the scale
 That Justice poised: As in my tale
 They never rate it by the count,
 But strictly rate it by account
 On God's own ledger.

Tu. 29. Began writing some more or say "Sitting by the Fire." It is very disagreeable and between times I do little jobs out doors.

Wed 30. Still writing and doing odd turns.

Dec.
Th.

1. Still raw and disagreeable. Waterwood, Lee and Kettie went to Prof. Webb's to spend the evening while Wesley who did not feel well stayed behind to listen to stories while he sat by the fire. He seems quite heavy and complains of his head and ear.

Fri.

2. Wesley was delirious all night and this morning he is so drowsy he can scarcely be kept awake for a little bit. Examined his throat and found he had diphtheria. Went to the city and got anti-toxin and returned and injected him and as a preventive injected the remainder of the children. Kettie's throat now began to show membranes. We at once isolated the two placing them in the sitting room where I took my position to watch with them while Annie managed the house. The other boys were taken from school. The children were very restless all afternoon and night.

Sat.

3. Both the children are better. Their throats are clearing and their appetites becoming good. I wait upon them and write at my "Sitting by the Fire."

Sun.

4. Children are much better. Throats clear, appetites good. Wesley seems to be out

1898

- Dec. doore. Our first snow fell this morning but melted as it fell. I spend the day as yesterday.
- Nov. 5. The same.
- Dec. 6. The same. At night Council and I went to the Tabernacle to hear Justin Whitney McCarther lecture on the "Pioneer Epoch." The building was cold, the speaker's voice was weak and although his lecture was scholarly it lacked animation and emphasis. It was read in an indifferent style. He walked home during which I entertained Council with a story about his favorite Tommie Kelly.
- Wed. 7. Work and play in the forenoon. In the afternoon went with the two older boys for a walk and to get some mistletoe. We got back just as the man came to disinfect the room in which the children had been confined. After this we ate our dinner all together and again spent the evening together as we had done before. The children were wild with delight at again being united. It has been necessary for several days to keep a close guard over Stealy who has been trying to get out.
- Th. 8. Work day. While Annie washed I wrote and helped look after the children.

While sitting by the fire.

There is a time when winter's snow
Lies on the roof of the house I know
Not years of when I then in the night
I sit and dream

Of distant days, which, in the haze
Of years, come back to me,
Without a care, and then I share
My inmost thought with thee

While sitting by the fire

Dear days of old! how strong your hold
Has grown upon my heart;

Your verdant hills and dancing mills
Are bright upon my heart

Of thought, as then; I hear again
The murmur of birds

In shady trees - the hum of bees -

The lowing of the herds -

While sitting by the fire

And there abounds a world of sounds
And scenes to correspond

Where oft we played - where footsteps strayed,
But love was always fond,

And true, and pure, and friends were sure
And life was sweet and bright

With friendships dear whose earnest cheer
Comes back to me, to night

While sitting by the fire

The school-house old, close by the wall
Is standing as of yore:

My school-mates still, upon the hill,
Are playing as before:

My hand is still upon the same
In every boy's good game.

From "fox" to "ball," I knew them all,
I had loved them just the same.

While sitting by the fire.

I hear the bell's sweet tones; it tells
The time for "books" has come.
We shout "books, books" like noisy rooks
And chase each other home.

Like laden bees, from out the trees,
Up to the school-house door.

Where all rush in, with playful din,
To earn our lessons o'er.

While sitting by the fire.

I see again, thro' dingy pane,
The white flakes scurry down,
And long for night when "snow-bull" fight
Will give me new renown.

For throwing hard, or some reward,
For being good so long.

The time, draws near—is almost here—
Missing the evening song.

While sitting by the fire.

'Tis four o'clock, and all our stock
Of patience is worn out.

"You are dismissed" the girls are kissed.
And with a mighty shout,
We rush out doors where each is more
The tongue of the storm
And plays with will and dogwood's skin,
Intending to get warm.

While sitting by the fire.

We fling the snow at friend and foe
Till driven home by night,

We feed the stock at six o'clock
And eat by candle-light,

While parents, cold, "it is too cold
To go to spelling school.

You'll freeze to death—see how your throat
Right here, does quickly coil."

While sitting by the fire."

But still we tease, with "please, please, please,
Till mother fills our cup

With joy—"My dears, You'll freeze your ears, Unless you bundle up."

This little touch, now proved too much
For father's strong objection.

She fixed our ears, "Goodby my dears",
And gave us full direction.

While sitting by the fire.

we rush, with hearts that gush
 In joy and merriment.
 Our path is white, the hidden quite, --
 Which keeps us close together,
 With little speech until we reach
 The old log-school-house door,
 Then say, "Hello!" in a voice
 To swell the noisy roar
 While sitting by the fire.

And now a boy disturbs the joy
 Of older mischief and merriment;
 Behind the slab, this little lad
 Unites the happy twain
 With huge brass pins, till school begins
 And choice of one is made,
 When all begin to laugh and grin
 At business thus delayed
 While sitting by the fire

The choices made, the sides arrayed,
 The spelling now begins;
 That little lad, behind the slab,
 Has crept with fift, pins,
 And safe from harm or deep alarm,
 Exhausts his gathered store
 And then creeps out without a doubt
 To wait for fift, pins,
 While sitting by the fire.

From side to side, like pulsing tide,
 The echoed words ring out,
 Just as they know, for some speak slow
 As if in awful "doubt"
 Some glibly guess and make a mess
 Of words like "sassyfras"
 While towhead twins, as like as pins
 Both spelled alas—a-las,
 While sitting by the fire

At last, recess ends our dures,
 And lively times begins,
 As boys fall back, to loose the slack
 Drawn out by fifty pins,
 Now, that shy boy was shy and co,
 Like cursed with deadly fear
 But took a glance and stole a chance
 To laugh from ear to ear
 While sitting by the fire

We choose again with careful ken;
 This time for high renown
 In tug of war; the conqueror
 Will wear a civic crown.
 The words are passed from first to last,
 And one by one go down;
 Some with a laugh—but others graff
 A sigh like their frown
 While sitting by the fire

At length a few—the tired and true
 Comprise that Spartan band,
 Who stand like posts among the hosts.
 That strew this woody strand;
 And then the few wear down to two
 Who battle for an hour;
 No one is small the other tall
 And confident of power,
 While sitting by the fire

His head is high for by and by
 He thinks to wear the crown
 But comes to grief on "unbelief,"
 And sees it handed down
 To that small boy, so shy and coy,
 Who ends as he begins
 By earning fame—but just the same
 He stole those fifty pence
 While sitting by the fire.

That little wraith was full of faith
 That God was on his side,
 And thus excelled; indeed, he spelled
 As if he had a guide.
 But, to be brief, his unbelief
 Was sound as sound could be
 He never stood but spelled the word
 With i before the e,
 While sitting by the fire

Then was a shout and then a rout;
 Hats, shawls and bonnets flew;
 Some got their own, and some will know
 Got "mittens" that were new.

Which pleased the boys so shy and coy
 Who now beguile to leave

"Now when you choose to see your own
 "Four" eyes before your "ear"

While sitting by the fire

'Tis forty years - but time endears
 Since that eventful night,
 And tho' those years have brought their tears,
 Their memory is bright,

And still abounds, with sights and sounds,
 Untinged by human art

That grow more dear as I sit here
 And store them in my heart,

While sitting by the fire

God bless those years, their smiles and tears
 May thought of them remain

God bless their joys, their noisy boys

And girls so sweet and pure.

God bless their worth, throughout the earth

And make each heart as light.

Where'er they be, on land or sea,

As each one was that night,

While sitting by the fire

God bless those days, their simple ways
 And simple wants as well;
 Their joys were blent with sweet content,
 Their loves I cannot tell
 Their faith unmixed was firmly fixed Their trust in God secure
 Their worship, too, was pure and true,
 Their conversation pure

Dec.

children went to city to procure additional Christmas goods.

Sat. 24.

Boys went to the city to see the Christmas windows. Read for the Christmas tree and played with Helen. At night after the children had retired I brought in the Christmas tree and candles and I worked at trimming it till near midnight, after which I sat and ate a lunch while we talked about Christmas and the people whom we had remembered with little gifts. We retired in the eve, small hours.

Sun. 25.

A quiet day, but warm, pleasant and beautiful. We ate the roasted goose and cranberry sauce and many other nice things together and enjoyed our Christmas more perhaps than the ostentatious ministrants whose dinner will be spent in hurried formality and less gratitude. God has been very kind to us and while we celebrate this day we should be both thankful and thoughtful. We should remember that it commemorates and places ourselves in closer touch with the sentiment - of "Peace on earth & good will to men."

On rising in the morning the children greeted their well laden Christmas tree in the parlor with exclamations of wild joy. Throughout the day they frequently surrounded it - appointed to the different articles with great pleasure.

Dec.

So great was their curiosity that they could not refrain from frequently taking off articles for examination. While not a loud and noisy Christ was it has been a bright & quiet and happy one such as we wish may be oft repeated.

Mon.

26. Took care of Helen while Annie washed.

Tue.

27. Off at dull day for Centerville. The trip was well taken and successful, reaching Centerville about 10:30 A.M. It is a little, dingy, battered and unpicturesque village of five or six hundred inhabitants. It is perched on a high hill just beyond the river and is reached by climbing the rocky height on taking the longer circuitous route of the wagon road which leads up the hill. We entered the town through a ragged gateway and which seemed to lead from a big cattle lot into the public square in the middle of which was the dilapidated and half-constructed old courthouse which seemed to have slept there for a century. On the sides and through the middle, naked brick columns had been built to sustain the crazy old stairs leading above. In little boxy, dingy offices on each side of the open was the business of the county transacted. In one of these we met the tax collector, attorney who was to take our depositions. After listening him I was not wholly satisfied he became grained and proceeded with the work. This occupied till three o'clock after which we repaired to the hotel where we procured tickets, and at 9:30 P.M. finding most of the family sick with influenza, I went to bed.

Dec. 28. Spended the time between reading, writing, waiting on Cornel and amusing time with long stories.

29. I am suffering with influenza and but in the time as quietly as I can though disagreeable to myself and everyone else. I am so depressed that I almost wish I could fall asleep and not wake.

30. The snow. I tried to do a little work in yard but gave out and lay down to rest.

31. I am some better and my appetite appears to be returning with little taste in my mouth. It has grown colder and a light snow had been fastidiously driven through the air all day. I have felt a number of colds but I have been out but little. I can not walk without great effort. I have two aches but rather weakly most prominent that seem to be connected to nature, one from the most person of motion. One is a back under my right arm and the other is in the lower back in the end of my spine. This latter has positive objections to my use of the oblique for long periods but very limited walking. This with manifold other points constituted and miserable condition at positive war with amiability. I do not know what the new year has for me but hope it will be little of this condition^{and} much of usefulness.

Jan.

Sun. 1. At home with my books, and papers.

Mon. 2. The light snow is melting off. I spend the day at my books. Am reading Hall Caines Christian, which does not impress me favorably.

Tue. 3. The same.

Wed. 4. Studying letters.

Th. 5. Reading and looking after patients.

Fri. 6. Being much behind in my letter writing I spent the day in catching up. I seem to have no energy or power to accomplish anything and the day being up without showing anything accomplished.

Sat. 7. Went to the city in the forenoon^{and} in the afternoon sawed wood. At night home and I walked to the tabernacle to hear Bob Burdette lecture on "Twice-told tales: The Rise and fall of the Mustache". It was a very entertaining lecture and seemed to be intensely enjoyed. The lecture seemed to take certain and immediate possession.

- Jan. of the entire audience and amused them at his will. He is a humorist, graceful, witty, often sarcastic speaker, but upon the whole the mirth predominates. He is a rapid speaker and long experience has given him perfect ease and control. He enjoys the enviable distinction of being the only lecturer who cannot be induced from giving the ship. However the ship cannot be taken into account. After the lecture we walked home beating our car.
- Sun. 8. The day was spent with the children and with my books and papers. In the afternoon the boys went to the tabernacle the choir meeting preparing for the annual service of Miller & Chapman.
- Mon. 9. Wet and dull. Writing and reading.
- Tu. 10. The same.
- Wed. 11. Suffering with neuralgia and get little done.
- Th. 12. Spent part of day on some lines entitled Are You a Christian, suffer a good deal.
- Fr. 13. The same. In P.M. the boys went to a choir meeting at the tabernacle and I finished the and did up the evening work.
- Sat. 14. It was this P.M. the boys went to tabernacle. My pain has somewhat disturbed my notions of time.
- Sun. 15. Still suffering but wrote most of day. In P.M. Annie and boys went to hear J. Miller Chapman at tabernacle and I kept Miller & Chapman's notes.

Are You a Christian?

Are you a Christian? No? Why not?
 Come state the facts. Come tell me what Your reasons are? Have you not thought
 Of this quite oft? Is it so fraught With mystery that you have failed
 To find the truth? Have you assailed
 The simple tale which others praise
 With joy? In truth, have you assailed
 In trying to convince your mind
 The Christian's faith is wholly blind?
 An imposition on mankind,
 Of vague assertions, not defined;
 And purposeless and unkindred;
 Unfeeling, empty, or unkind;
 Devoid of sweetness, unrefined?
 Is this the reason that you find
 You cannot be a Christian?

Are you a Christian? No, you say
 Have you a faith? How do you pray?
 Come tell me just what you believe
 What is the faith to which you cleave?
 What is its base and what its crown?
 Is it your power or reason?
 Rests it upon your treasured store?
 Or on a life of garnered love?
 Or is it built on human love
 Which death can shake? How do you prove Your faith? with stake or martyr's tears?
 Will it withstand the crash of storm?
 The sting of scorn, the lash of years?
 While poverty and pain endure
 Its patient rule? More it suffice
 In all the tests of sacrifice?
 More it survive the passing breath,
 And triumph in the jaws of death?

What is your faith? I want to know
 On what it rests and how you know
 You cannot be a Christian.

Are you a Christian? Do you pray?
 Are you ashamed to frankly say,
 That when your heart is sore with grief,
 You often wish and ask relief
 Of something greater than yourself?
 Is this a demon or an elf?
 Say, is it real, is it fraud
 Is it a god or is it God?
 Does it possess the love and power,
 That every place and time and hour
 Demand? Methinks, I hear you say
 O, no, O, no! But still you pray
 And cannot fling your faith away,
 And are not willing to obey
 The Christian's faith which time has shown
 Has never yet been overthrown,
 But with each want has simply grown;
 And tho' superior to your own,
 You cannot be a Christian!

Are you a Christian? No, you say,
 You cannot reason out the way
 To faith in Christ, and just believe That fact, calm reason will receive;
 And thus, your judgments I perceive,
 Must measure all you can conceive
 Of worth or truth! If we admit
 Your rule for you, you must not sit
 In judgment on another man Whose faith has proven better than Your reason. You ask for bottom cause
 And prate a deal about the laws
 Of matter. When did they begin

To reign? Was matter but a twin Formed? Who gave the law to rock?
 If answer lie beyond the reach,
 If reason, no answer can you find,
 But faith - perhaps of some strange kind
 But still a faith the not defined
 More clearly than the faith misaligned.
 Is it more-chaste or more refined?
 Has faith and reason grown a kind
 You cannot be a Christian?

Are you a Christian? No reply?
 Now if you can please tell me why
 This faith the smitten still has grown
 Like mustard seed wherever sown
 And still a vigor quite unknown
 In flame or fortune it has shown
 While scholar, sage and peer have found
 This humbled mind a common ground
 Where all may worship all may join
 A charity and hope and love
 With faithful sweet self-sacrifice.
 Why does the Christian's faith suffice?
 Where you apply the crucial test
 Is my faith is this the best?
 You need a faith where reason ends;
 A living faith that comprehends
 The love of Christ. In this abide
 And you will have God on your side
 And be content. Now thoughtful friend
 Are you convinced and just pretend
 You cannot be a Christian?

- Sun Mark 16 My neuralgia is much intensified. The light is very painful to my right eye. I lie about and get up and sit and try to think of something to help drive away the awful pain. All are kind to me but nothing seems to wholly relieve me. I take huge doses of medicine with little apparent effect.
- Tu 17 Yesterday multiplied by some large number. My dark room affords little relief. Annie is very kind and reads to me.
- Wed 18 Awful day - Some patients and callers intensify my trouble.
- Th 19 Same. Forty doses of medicine in 8 hrs has small effect.
- Fr 20 A little better. Annie is quite a treasure but I cannot help feeling I am putting a great burden on her. I think my very keen pain is making me cross and irritable and work. I steal some glances at headlines in paper but am sharply reminded of my Transgression and imprudence.
- Sat 21 The same fiery orb. My comfort is chiefly in the assiduity of my faithful wife and the gentle and playful attention of little Helen who now just begins to toddle and lies away to bring the cuspidor when as she hears me hawk.
- Sun 22 The same
- Mon 23 Improving a little I get out doors for five minutes and suffer five hours

Tu 24 Better. I go, next door to see a sick child Suffer worse later.

Wed. 25 The same. Go to barn and straighten up after the boys.

Th. 26 The same. Read a little but find it painful. Have been composing some poor verses on a baby, while sick to try to divert my thoughts. Out more today.

Fr. 27 Went to see Mr. Hill and on to Drug store and kept out doors most of day at work

Sat. 28 Walked to town attended to business till 2
P.M. and walked home very weary. Am so lame rest of day I keep quiet. Bad evening I cannot write much nor read much & so am quite uneasy. My sleep is much broken since I feel weak.

Sun 29 Cold and a little snow. Write up journal for last two weeks and write some letters but it is quite a task. My eyes ache severely but I like best to do my own work if I can.

Mon. 30 Colder. I read what I could but it is a painful work. Late in day it began to snow and snowed far into night.

Tu. 31 Snowed a greater part of day and was quite cold.
I read some but had to quit. Snow is about 5 in. deep.

Feb. 1 Bitterly cold and blustering I sat by fire read a little and listen to Anna who reads for me. It is very disagreeable but we keep up a good fire and the boys after the day study enjoyed the evening story.

Th. 2 Some warmer. The same routine. In evening Annie and Galewood go to Takemachi to a lecture.

Fr. 3 I am very much indisposed. I suffer a good deal but write a few lines and send letters.

Sat. 4 I remain alone reading and writing while all the rest go to city to J. L. Graham's picture gallery. A dull cloudy day. I really enjoy the quiet around me as it rests my tired head. Wrote a few lines of verse.

A dream of golden hours.

I am weaving a thread of the golden hours,
Which stretches away like a land of flowers;
Where birds are singing and skies are bright,
And fountains are leaping in silvery light.

Where babbling brooks dash in feathery foam,
As they play hide and seek on their journey home;
Where the hues are all splendid and beauty alone,
Is predominant in all things, from the rose to the stone.

Where the breeze always whispers its love to the trees;
And the flowers are wooed by the hum of the bees;
Where the sounds all are music and noise is unknown,
All music is worship - each heart is a home.

Where life is all gladness, unknown - unknown,
Ambition has never demanded a throne.
All life there is sacred - all love is divine,
All worship is infinite - pure and sublime.

- Sun. 5 Cold dull and disagreeable. I write some and try to read but my eyes are very painful.
- Mon. 6 Colder and drifting snow. By fire all day except when I feel I start out to expand my piece on 'John Allbright' respecting a virtuous character and pen it to five verses.
- Tu. 7 Very cold and stormy. I write
- Wed. 8 The same
- Th. 9 The same. Made one visit out.
- Fr. 10 The same. Very cold.
- Sat. 11 By fire and made two visits. Snow is 3 in. deep. Thermometer 11° F below 0.
- Sun. 12 Colder. By fire. Finish my piece of verses which reach 99.
- Mon. 13 Visited some patients. 13° F. Read a little. At night attended Mrs Hitt. Very low.
- Tu. 14 Moderating. Went to see my patients of yesterday. Mrs Hitt died at 11:30 then 12:30. Spent day in doors after my return to save my inflamed eye.
- Wed. 15 Annie went to Mrs Hitt's funeral at 10 o'clock. I kept Hettie and Helen and tried to write some. It is thawing and cloudy and looks like rain. I will start to copy John Allbright for Annie as it is long but my eyes may compel me to quit very quickly.

John Albright.

John was a lad, who never had Much use for manners mild;
 To tell the truth, he was a youth
 Who, simply, had run wild.

No matter what, he always got Whatever he desired;
 Which if withheld, he simply yelled
 Until he had acquired.

If wanting in, he raised a din,
 And as a lion's roar;
 If wanting out, he howled about,
 And kicked against the door.

When meal time came, it was a shame,
 To see this urchin vile Pull back the cloth and dishes off,
 And smash them in a pile.

While mamma clean, set out to clear Away this shattered mass
 He took his cane and broke a pane,
 And smashed the looking glass.

This indulged lad had grown so bad
 He nothing now did fear
 The poker hot, he quickly shot
 Right into pussy's ear.

She soon replied and sent a tide
 Of crimson down his face;
 And then he howled, while pussy growled
 And scratched another place.

John was aroused and now espoused
Each brilliant new diversion.

It was John's day—he had his way,
And never feared coercion

He took a stone and pounded on His mother's new piano;
It was his drum, he made it hum
And screamed in bad soprano.

His joys were loud and drew a crowd,
His pa among the rest—
He saw, indeed, an urgent need
To check the youngsters' zest.

His grandfather had no appeal,
It had so brightly grown;
He seized pair thumb just like a crumb,
And bit it to the bone.

Pa had enough, and with a snuff
John went on with his show;
The little pup, he doubled up,
And plunged it in the dough.

The coffee mill, he next did fill,
With pebbles and dirt and snuff;
And round them from then on he turned
He poured this awful stuff.

Then grandma came. This sturdy dame
Now took him by the neck,
And whirled him round and round and round
Till he was quite a wreck.

Then in the dough she plunged her hand;
 His head was white with batter;
 Then in his eyes, despite his cries,
 Some snuff, she threw there, later.

Then took the cat that little brat
 Had turned to desperation;
 Swung by the tail, just like a flail,
 It filled with consternation.

While thus attached it spit and scratched,
 And struggled for release;
 But, in his face, she rained her grace
 And lost his frontispiece.

Then John lay down his little crown,
 Relinquished his regal splendor
 Drove up his sword without a word,
 And made complete surrender.

And thus John learned that manners earned
 Are surely most abiding
 And grandma's tact, a sluttish fact
 In many things, deciding.

And there he lay, for half a day
 In drowsy thought abiding,
 Then peering thru, he said 'tis true
 "My grandma is presiding"

She brought some food, in gentlest mood,
 And manner most devout
 John turned his head and faintly said,
 "Please let me do without."

She washed his face with gentled grace
 And placed him in his chair
 And, kneeling down, she prayed for John.
 A simple prayer.

She prayed for him, "forgive his sin"
 And tears rained down her face.
 John was amazed and, as he gazed
 He felt the touch of grace.

What! was he loved? His prayer power
 What he had never felt,
 And made her throw his very own,
 And with grandma he knelt.

His words were few but earnest, true—
 "Mammy, can you love John?"
 I will love you, and grandma too,
 And thus he prayed right on.

John was up changed, no more estranged
 His heart began to thaw.
 He tried the right, and every night,
 He ^{prayed} knelt with his grandma.

No more a fool, he went to school
 And made a famous teacher;
 To college next, when, nothing checked,
 He came out "Grandma's practer."

John Allright name has not become
 The watchword of devotion
 He sought no fame; when chance came
 He took no high promotion.

His Grandma's church was in the lurch;
 A charge without a pastor.
 He strove to get it out of debt,
 And furnish it a teacher.

And as he toiled, his Grandma toiled,
 Without complaint or pause.
 She sat all day, and knit away
 And sold it for the cause.

Her finger-ring, she last did bring
 And gave with this command.
 "Take it, dear John, and put it on That debt—it must not stand!"

The ring is gold—~~and it is~~ ^{and it is} old
 And cannot bear it now.
 With it she said, "my heart was set
 With that church and dow."

"When grandma, dear, was with me here
 We kept it free from debt.
 His task was hard, but his regard
 I cannot now forget."

We loved the Kirk, and the our work
 Was such we could not pass
 We thought of Him who died for sin
 And of the life He gave.

We always walked, because we talked
 More closely, as we trudged;
 The cold or heat, these walks were sweet
 And never once begrudged.

A score long-drawn, since I, with John,
 Tugged there one stormy day;
 It was his last and this long past,
 I yet can hear him pray.

"God bless our work and keep our kirk,
 When our frail hands shall fail;
 Raise up a hand from this small band,
 When off we shall sail."

That night, beside his bed, I cried
 In deepest grief alone;
 With 'bitter' tears I saw the years
 That since have come and gone.

But John was brave, and, at his grave,
 I placed me to the test;
 When he was gone he would not
 Be left in little kirk.

I prayed and worked and nothing shirked
 But still I prayed alone,
 Until the prayer beside my chair
 Joined in by little John.

I named ye, John, and looked upon Ye as the "man of hand"
 To still defend, which God would send From out our little band."

But, as I prayed, dear John; ye strayed,
 And almost broke my heart;
 I prayed in faith that "He who saith,"
 Will surely do this part.

My faith, dear John, - was almost gone -
 How could I give ye up?
 It was a test, and God knew best,
 When He should "fill my cup."

That morn. I brought with sober thought
 Some force with my persuasion
 Of such a kind ye could not find
 A chance for smart evasion.

My prayer was heard; my heart was stirred;
 My tears came down like rain;
 I blessed the years of toil and tears,
 Which God had blessed again.

I saw my prayer was answered there -
 I had not 'prayed in vain;
 My Scottish blood was at the flood,
 I prayed, and prayed again.

Since then, my dear I had no fear
 But faith in His protection;
 If you have power ye pray with tears
 And He will give direction.

How can I not be happy that
 With happy heart I gave;
 My shimmering wheel - my old time rest -
 "This ring" is all I saved.

Now, take it, John - when I am gone
 Its mission, too, is done -
 'Tis fit, I know, that it should go,
 To close what it began.

"'Tis almost paid, grandma," he said,
 "I sold some books, you know—
 I sent away my watch today"—
 "He John—this is our house."

Her word was law and this John saw;
 He took her shining dower—
 That little ring—a mighty thing,
 So fraught with love and power.

"When this is paid, dear John," she said,
 "Then ye may go and teach;
 I could na bear to hear ye there—
 In practice as ye preach."

John hid away, for on that day,
 He meant to scrub the floor
 And fix the floor and window, too,
 And mend the broken door.

Was grandma's prayer out in the air,
 Stirring up the neighbors?
 Yes, they were there, to help and share,
 With John, in all his labors.

They all worked hard and cleared the yard,
 Fixed fence and broken gate.
 Then all went home but John alone—
 Home cold and evening late.

Fixed the floor and grandma's pew—
 To rest with some to do.
 I fix the door and scrub the floor,
 Now, while I am alone.

But, as he scrubbed, and rubbed, and rubbed,
 By that bright glowing fire —
 "Hello in there!" "Hello in there!"
 He said some more things.

He stayed no more, but rushed out door —
 A friend stood at the gate:
 "What's that you? What do you do?"
 "God bless you, too, my mate."

I don't pay my own way here —
 I want to know for —
 Come on, my friend — let's go to bed —
 As much as you require.

Now, I see that day, just like a fire —
 They found I have no chain —
 He says for this great that of him
 Is long enough to chain.

But look the last of my own part —
 Why, Billy, where's your heart?
 O Billy, don't — let them go
 Save a fellow's tears.

When I get home, I'll buy me some,
 Which, he could not, you know;
 Billy, don't — his there's more with the book,
 He's the blind in show.

John, no tears — let other years
 Cast up my small account;
 My greatest fears are that my tears
 Will say "what small amount."

Like the place, so like the friend,
 Of some old-fashioned friend;
 Where grace has grown, though time has flown,
 For him I long to find.

Worst scrubbing out, I'll cost about.
 I want to see it all.

And how is that - what's that? what's that?
 That thing upon the wall?

Why - why that thing is grandma's ring.
 It's on that nail
 "But it might loose" - he could not choose,
 But told the entire tale.

We not been down to see her -
 But gave it but to her;
 I'll tell it true to please her, dear -
 What's that? I shan't, you say?

No, No! No, no! It must not go.
 Just leave it on that nail.

Of course my tears - hurrah! three cheers
 For grandma and her tale.

Hurrah! hurrah! for dear grandma;
 Her heart is now wild, now
 God bless her next to save the day -
 God bless her wedding day.

When boys at school, I broke the rule,
 And whispered to John -
 "If you should teach, or ever preach, I'll go to hear your sermon."

"And I will sing like everything,—
 Then you got whipped for laughter."
 But now, I'll come and make it hum—
 I'll shake the very rafters.

"Goodnight! goodnight!— yes, I'm all right,
 And I'll be there next Sunday."
 When John got done, trudged on home,
 But 'twas no longer, Monday.

"Throughout the week, he went to seek Acquaintance with his altar;
 For much he feared, as Sabbath neared,
 His courage, then, might falter.

But when he feared, that ring appeared
 To glow with "light divine!"
 A beaming light, in darkest night—
 Was this his friend's design?

Why did he bring and hang that ring,
 Right there, against the altar?
 Was it mere chance? Why did its glance
 Portend a heart's great altar?

"Here," he said, "her heart was wed,
 Before this very altar;
 Now, I have both, should I be loth,
 Or and in purpose falter?"

He knelt down there, in earnest prayer,
 And gave up everything,
 For love of Him who died for sin—
 Then rose and kissed the ring.

When Sunday came, his heart was flame;
 The neighbors, all were there;
 And grandma, too, was in her pew,
 And made the opening prayer.

O, what a prayer! no chuck was there,
 But felt the rain of tears;
 So sweet; so kind; it brought to mind
 God's blessings, all the years.

She blessed them all - the great, the small;
 The careless and the cold;
 She prayed that Love, like Israel's dove
 Might rest upon the fold.

John rose so calmly and read a Psalm.
 Then paused; "A schoolboy friend
 Will sing a song." From out the throng Came one whom all eyes scanned.

His pleasant face still bore the trace,
 Of grandma's inspiration.
 He took his place, with quiet grace,
 And prayerful meditation.

He sang "of Love like Israel's dove"
 And melted every heart.
 Made each rejoice; his loving voice
 Was sweet as David's harp.

He sang of "Faith in Him who saith,
 "I'll not forsake the flock"
 Of faith in prayer and mother's tears,
 Which rested on a Rock.

A pang of hope which had a deeper
 Should call him to his feet,
 To catch each story of suffering—
 That hope he thrilled and beat.

From heart to heart with magic art
 He poured a flood of feeling;
 Faith, hope and love came from above,
 To every heart opening.

All eyes were turned to his face,
 He poured — he came to us —
 In intense stress, with falling hair,
 He loved and knew the only.

Then turned to what did he know
 That John was standing there,
 He clasped his name, a moment, and Both bowed their heads in prayer.

The words that John said next,
 Had two words — "Jesus wept."
 His voice was kind, and thro' each mind
 The love of Jesus wept.

The simplest words, which tongue affords,
 Are precious as fire there;
 And never yet, can one forget,
 That sermon, song or prayer.

All hearts were one when he had done;
 All crowded round the stand,
 To get near John, to speak to John,
 To take him by the hand.

And a blessing though, to see him, too,
 And that and keep ye, John.
 God bless the Word which I have heard,
 God bless that sang no sermon.

But I must hear who sang it, dear;
 Come, John, please tell me quick.
 Why — grandma, dear — why — yes — he's here
 My friend — young Billy Lick.

Then three hands clasp in fervent grasp;
 Three friends sit down together
 In quiet fashion — they talk at ease
 God bless their hearts forever.

Now, these three talk while fairies stalk
 Throughout the glowing room.
 When shadows fall, and dance, and crouch,
 Then guard them safely home.

A legend says, when winter has Spread all the hills with white;
 'When all go home, the fairies come Back to that church, at night.

Then on that flock, that little flock
 Sit in the wood-fire's charm;
 The open door lets in the poor,
 And travelers, to get warm.

While these three stay, the fairies play
 Those shadows on the wall,
 And dance and sing around the ring,
 And o'er the altar tall.

I'm from a town which brings much
 A touch that will not fail.
 But, I am told, that hand of gold
 Still hangs upon that nail.

- 16 Another day of suffering to pay for my independence of yesterday. I managed to pass the day in with Helen and her divisions, with occasional trips into the dark corner to rest my eye - I could not refrain from occasionally stealing a glance at the Journals.
- 17 The same. I manage to write some lines on Springtime shutting my eyes frequently to rest them. Also look after some patients.
- 18 The same. My springtime piece is nearly finished. I began a short piece "A scene I can not paint" but quit it after writing these two verses which are not correct.

A Scene I can not Paint.
When the hazy days are stealing,
Like a silent dream of night,
And the fancies are appealing,
And the heart is feather-light;
When the fairies whisper round me
Their music, sweet and quaint,
I always see around me
A scene I can not paint.

So silent on the face of light,
Blent by a blush divine;
Its figures all are chosen right;
Its lesson is sublime.

Though thousands mark its touch or tone,
I'm striving to acquaint
Their human touch - still I have shown
A scene I can not paint.

Spent day at reading and writing a part of a piece in verse which I give below

I want to see the Springtime come

I want to see the spring-time come;
I want to hear the wild bee's hum;
I want to hear the birdies sing,
I want to hear the forests ring
With cleaving ax. I want to see
The bursting buds on every tree.
I want to see the babbling stream,
With gold and silver in its gleam,
Steal softly on like childhood's dream
Where lovely visions always tenn

In spring time.

I want to see the spring time come,
This wintry life is cold and dumb;
I want the spring that I may roam
By dashing streams, where ^{dashing} snowy foam
Plays, music on the platoon stone;
And leave the mosses, that have grown
So sweetly there. I want to hear
The melody so sweet and clear
That always falls upon my ear
When I have sought the chance of here

In spring time.

I want to see the spring time come
I want to walk and gather from Its beaming gifts of sight and sound
Where love and beauty so abound
I want to see the daisy, meek,
Play with its sister, bride and seek,
While violets without a care

With fragrant sweet perfume the air
And everything has done its share
In love and beauty everywhere

In spring time

I want to see the spring-time come
 With soft blue skies; to hear the hum
 Of many wings in fragrant air;
 The loving tones of mating pair;
 The mellow notes of ~~cooing~~ doves
 That coo and sing and tell their love.
 The lingering charm, that always clings
 About the whirl of flying wings,
 And all the thousand other things
 With pleasant sounds that spring-time brings
 In spring time.

I want to see the spring-time come
 And call the herds and flocks all home,
 To graze upon the smoky hill
 And drink, again, the twinkling rill,
 And hear again the tinkling bell,
 Its song of safety, sweetly tell;
 So soft - so faint - so "well, well, well."
 Hark hear its "well - well - well, well, well"
 'Tis well - 'tis well - all doubts dispel
 'Tis well - 'tis well - on hill - in dell,"
 In spring time.

I want to see the spring-time come
 I want to hear the pheasant drum;
 I want to hear the gray squirrel bark,
 And see him frisk about the park
 I want to hear the roosters crow,
 While cackling hens walk to and fro.
 I want to see the grasses grow
 I want to see the cattle low
 I want to see the lilies bloom
 And fill the air with sweet perfume
 In spring time

I want to see the spring-time come
 That I may go and gather some Wild flowers, among the vines that cling,
 About the dear, old, bubbling spring,
 Where welcome feet have worn the stone
 Along the path, so overgrown.
 One could not see the full-orbed moon
 Nor, scarce the sun at blazing noon;
 Where, lying down to drink its boon
 I heard overhead a turtle's croon,
In spring time.

I want to see the springtime come
 And end the winter's martyrdom.
 I want to see all nature free
 For leaf and flower, bird and bee.
 I want to feel the breath of spring
 Caress my cheek - to hear it sing
 Within the pines, the songs I've heard
 In other climes, where nature stirred
 The sweetest notes of flock and herd,
 The softest song of bee and bird,
In spring time.

I want to see the springtime come,
 And call, again, the songsters home;
 I want to hear the piping quail
 Sing out, Bob White. I want to hail
 The robin and the sky-lark, too,
 The whippoorwill and shy cuckoo.
 I want to hear that peerless bard,
 The turtle-dove, nest in our yard -
 I mean the matchless, mockingbird -
 The sweetest singer ever heard
In spring time.

I want to see the spring-time come;
 I want to hear its busy hum,
 And know each note is sweet and true
 And feel that God enjoys it, too.
 How sweet to think the purple plum,
 Of love for God means love for man.
 And all the dear things that abound
 In sea, or air, or in the ground,
 And only waiting to be found
 By touch or taste, sight, smell or sound
 In spring time.

I want to see the springtime come,
 And see the apple, peach and plum
 In brautious blooms that sweetly hold,
 The summer's or the autumn's gold.
 I want to smell the breath of spring,
 Where roses bloom and irises cling
 And every modest little thing,
 Shows life and love and tries to sing
 And praise alike, their common King Whose hand has taught them quickening
 In spring time.

- Mon. 20. Read and wrote.
- Tu. 21. The same.
- Wed. 22. Weather still disagreeable and I divide my time between Helen, my correspondence and my books. My eye has grown a little better or rather a little less painful.
- Th. 23. The same.
- Fri. 24. The same.
- Sat. 25. Wrote some letters and read "The Gleister and Heath" till my eyes grew weary. Somehow it has been a depressing week to me and I do not feel at all satisfied with what I have accomplished. I feel as if a vague spectral calamity brooded over me which I have failed to philosophize away. Hope I shall be better soon, both in spirit and body. I long to see a promise of usefulness which would go hand in hand with content. But God knows better than I what is best for me and I must wait.
- Sun. 26. Finished the 'Gleister and Heath' and played with the children.
- Mon. 27. Wet. Read some and wrote a few verses. I am suffering with bad cold.
- Tu. 28. Rode to city with Mr. Powell. Walked about city till 1 P.M. on business and grew very tired. Went to the Nottingham Hotel established by the Salvation Army, even and walked all there at. It was clean and comfortable.

Mar.

Talk with Emeline Merrill who is in charge Went from there to the Haymarket where I saw Francis Schlatter the healer. A crowd was about him but many attested the reality of his healing power. I walked home and the heavy work in yard in P.M.

Wed.

1 Not very well and sick. Can eat but little.
Wrote the verses on A Mother's Blessing found on opposite page after finishing the lines on I have plenty of time. I wrote also a letter or two.

Th.

2 Warm and bright. Wrote letter to Editor of Unity sending a copy of A Mother's Blessing.
Also wrote some other letters and spent a part of day at work in yard.
My verses on A Mother's Blessing were made in little over an hour and I did not sit down to write it - It seemed to write itself
I like it however for its simplicity and the amount it tells in a few words.
I scarcely know why I write these verses as no one knows better than I do my lack of fitness for verse. Yet God can do all things and He may make them useful if so I am content.

Fri.

3 Wrote letters and read and worked at my vines and roses which I find are nearly all dead. It is warm and the buds are bursting. My stomach still keeps sick but I do not like to complain or give up.
I often feel the family think I am sick too much and too long.

I have plenty of time

The schoolboy said "I have plenty of time,
And need not hurry; that bell always rings
Quite a while before the school-master brings His things to his desk. I have plenty of time.

He put down his books in order to climb
A tree for its fruit, but seeing a bee
Haste off with its load, to its home in the tree.
"You hurry" he said, "I have plenty of time".

His booty secured, he sought the confining
He had tried all the morning to shun;
But he started too late - the bell had begun
To mockingly say "I have plenty of time".

And so it kept ringing, "I have plenty of time",
"I see," said the boy, as he started to run,
"I have wasted my time and now I have none",
But the bell kept ringing "I have plenty of time".

But run as he would, it stopped ringing at once.
Now the boy had only a hundred yards more,
When in went the teacher and bang went the door.
"Shut out," said the boy, "I had plenty of time".

But, "I have" and "I had" will never make rhyme.
That bee knew its business - if I had known mine
And hurried right on before it was mine
That bell would not mock me with "plenty of time".

This wasting of time is surely a crime
And its punishment comes with relief.
The plenty we have is little enough.
The bee and the teacher had plenty of time.

A Mother's Blessing.

The August sun was sinking
But little Mary stayed
Beside her mother's easy chair
Beneath the maple's shade.

Why don't you play with Robert, dear,
Down by the fieldside?
"I am waiting for your blessing, ma'
Was all the dear one said.

Why, dear, I had forgotten
My promise for that drink;
Come, rest your head upon my knee,
Until mamma can think.

God bless my child who waited
And threw away her play
For my forgotten promise.
God bless her every day.

A pale thin hand was resting
On a head of sunny hair
One voice was raised in blessing
One childish voice in prayer.

The evening sun sank lower,
But little Mary stayed
And dreamed a child-like blessing
While mamma sat and prayed.

Together they in dreamland,
They prayed and blessed each other,
While angel fingers touched the hair
Of sleeping child and mother.

When western hills were in a glow,
 God waked that child and mother,
 To see the sunshine of their dreams
 In blessing one another.

A stormy night, 4 Mar. 1899

I sit alone within my room
 And listen to the rain
 Which, mingled with the stormy black,
 Beats fast upon the pane.

There is music in its majesty,
 Which I can love the more,
 When sitting by the fireside,
 And listening to its roar.

It calls to mind the distant days,
 My cheek was to the storm;
 Where duty called, by night or day,
 Its music had a charm.

My ardent blood felt not the chill;
 Its sound brings over me now;
 I loved the storm of my star
 That beat upon my brow

I revelled in its noisy war,
 A part of which I seemed,
 And proudly, like a conqueror,
 Of conquest still I dreamed.

But now I see my blazing fire
 Whose gentle glow and ear
 Is dear as that flaming eye
 I loved so much before.

Sat. 1

Rainy. Wrote some in A.M. In P.M. I went out to work at our house and later in yard. I got some wet and inspired me, though with some vigor. At night I learned of Helen while Annie stayed with Mrs. Powell's dying babe. She came home at midnight.

Sun. 2

Company. Wrote some and finished up my little piece. A stormy night.

Mon. 3

Another sudden change in the weather. The ground is covered with snow and the swift wind is loaded with flying flakes. I spent the entire day indoors at reading and writing.

Fri. 7

10. Worked about the yard, the weather being fine. I find my roses nearly all destroyed by the winter.

Sat. 8

11. Pleasant but rather windy. Took the entire family to city. After attending to what business I had, we drove down to the Shelter Home or Workingman's Hotel. One of the inmates was sick with fever. At the request of the Superintendent I presided for him. The Surgeon and his wife were very kind in showing me through the building and explaining the working of the home. The inmate's wife expressed a but he came and soon began his lecture on "Some Traits of Scotch Character" Mr. Watson is more fluent than most Scotch men. His illustrations were well chosen and his speech quite scholarly. He read from The Bonnie Briar Bush and Auld Lang Syne and explained the characteristics and traits represented in each. He was very effective as a reader and did not forget to follow the Scotch method of expression, their reserved manner, nor their peculiar accent. He follows his books closely and in an accurate and scholarly manner he constantly presents his subject. His humor is ironical and dry and his accent that of the Scotch Scholar. His explanations of his written characters was lucid and gave much light on his already popular books. It was a treat seldom presented and greatly enjoyed.

In person Mr. Watson is tall and rather graceful but his grace of movement seems rather that of culture than of nature. He is sinewy and strong with a distinct Scotch face which bespeaks vigor of thought rather than culture. He has slightly wavy hair bushy brows a large long nose which in profile greatly changes his appearance a restless gray eye which conveys the idea of crafty alertness rather than genial kindness strong mouth and upon the whole is a strong physical character tho much less scholarly and fine than his pictures would imply. I liked him very much and after lecture was over I went with Clara

- We came out in a very hard rain and hurried up to Church St and got into a car. We had to stand all the way home and the rain poured down all the time. Still we enjoyed the evening as a whole. It was nearly midnight when we got to bed.
- Sat. 18 Rained all day.
- Sun 19 Cool but clear. At home all day.
- Mon 20 Went to city and visited the Westminster Hotel taking some papers and pictures for the reading room. See P. H. Lawrence in the yard.
- Tu. 21 Windy and wet and bright by turns.
- Wed. 22. My wife is giving me such close attention that it requires considerable attention on my part. I wrote and read in the forenoon and in the afternoon the weather being quite warmer I drove to No. 105 Wharf Avenue to see Henry Pickerson, the two older boys accompanying me. A rain-storm was threatening, to escape which we drove rapidly home, which we reached just in time.
- Th. 23. Working about the yard and reading some. The weather was pleasant and in the evening Annie and I walked to the tabernacle and back to hear George R. Wondring lecture on "Miracles of the French Revolution." He gave a scholarly, analytical and brief presentation of that remarkable but cloudy ten years of French history and of Minahan, its great hero. He was always interesting, often brilliant and at times wonderful in his splendid story. The theme in our with which one of his heroes were not conversant which rendered his task more difficult. While I admired his method of handling the subject I could not wholly agree with his conclusions. It was however a pleasant entertainment, instructive and intellectual and we enjoyed both the lecture and the walk. It was 11 P.M. when we returned and the children were all asleep in various positions over the floor.

Same in A.M. In P.M. took Annie & Hattie and drove to city. I left them to do some buying while I drove to 105 S. Wharf Ave. to see Henry Hickerson picking them up at the Shelter House where they waited for me.

- 30 Wrote articles for the Shelter Home to be published in the Banner and Americans.

My "wolf" keeps me busy and gives me little rest. I read and try to write, then out and walk but am unable to divert his attention.

Read Cyrano de Bergerac and worked some in the shop and played a little while in the south yard with the children.

- Sun. 2. Read "The window in Thomas" in the forenoon and in the afternoon endured Lynne Bennett and Walter Crundall.

- Mon. 3 Walked to see Mary H. and saw Mr. D. May 12th as a cold rain set in I took car and got home at 10 P.M. and read till night. My heart trouble has not been so serious today.

- Tue 4 Worked some in shop at a rustic frame I made of a broken twig from the Big Pine Tree that stood on Garnet Point, at Dartmouth College. It was the one under which I had often sat to study my lesson when a student there. Though no other one during that session seemed enamored of its shade I learned it had always been a favorite resort and continued to be so until its destruction by lightning several years later. I procured this little branch as a souvenir. It is only large enough by carving to make a small photograph frame. This I secure to a thin pine board with slender nails leaving the ends as shown by the 1-10 of the tree. On

Apr. the back of this I wrote the following.

My College - Pine.

Aug. 1875.

On Dartmouth hill there stood a pine Majestic, old and weird; in fines,
Its ancient birth none could assign,
But legend often did extol
Some story sweet about this pine.

On Garnet Point, in storm or shine,
Its sturdy trunk, straight as a line,
Without a lichen, moss or vine,
Stood proudly like a storm's ensign.
None, none were like thee, brave old pine.

It was my trust I would climb
From college up the steep incline,
With book in hand, in summer-time
To breathe its atmosphere divine.
How much I loved thee, dear old pine.

But lightning blasts thee, dear old pine,
And scatters far my fragrant shine,
And leaves me but this twig of thine
Which now surrounds my humble line.
But, still I love thee, dear old pine.

5. Still working about the shop. My stomach under strict dieting has grown better and my heart is not troubling me so much as on yesterday but the demon still lies in wait and its presence is ever so annoyingly apparent while all around me signs & warnings of danger are not to be ignored. I feel when I am thus annoyed or threatened pleasant as matter of course trouble in much less life is strange to me but it is not full gloomy in the face of this formidable foe which I feel is liable to be defeated any day. In fact I contemplate it as quite possible and wholly ignore it when I can. Its occasional attacks of hostile energy are less intolerable to me than its constant menacing presence.

Working and reading during day and at night walked with Annie to the tabernacle. Musical entertainment for the benefit of the Salvation Army Shelter Home. The night was rainy which made the attendance small. The entertainment was fine - in some respects excellent.

The program was as follows:

1st, 1st and 1st School.

2d. Song, Dixie.

Miss Minnie Vasey.

31. Ch. in L. in 18611 Black Norway Mrs. Waite.

1 Mrs. Waite.

4th Song, Her Bright Smile Haunts me Still, Miss O'Regan.

3rd Song, Mid the Green Fields of Virginia, Dr. McKinney.

6th Song, 'Tis the Last Rose of Summer, Miss Armstrong.

7th Blind School B. and C.

25. Same within a hole of bedrock. Same. Same.

9 - Protein that the Egg. Needs Co. of Ohio.

Apr.

- 10th. Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep. Miss Emswiler
 11th. Kerry Dance. 3d Medley Mrs. McClure
 12th. Blind School Band.
 13th. Ben Bolt. " Mrs. Lebeck.
 14th. Full Chorus - America.

I particularly enjoyed the singing of Mrs. McClure, Miss Lebeck and Mrs. McClure, but what impressed me most touchingly was the excellent music rendered by the band composed of blind boys, some of whom were quite small and one of whom fell asleep between exercises. No one who enjoys vision can appreciate the stupendous difficulties under which these unfortunate little scrapples make wonderful results.

The exercises were introduced by the Rev. Mr. Rust who remarked that the churches had not given the work of the Salvation Army proper sympathy and support. He paid a very eloquent tribute to the self-sacrificing labors of these people, remarking that he always ran off his hat when he passed them on the street.

When the meeting was over a cold rain was falling and we waived the pleasure of walking home and took the car.

Sat.

8. Waited on some patients, read some, wrote some and played some with the boys.

Sun.

9. Home letter, in evening, Annie and I went to Salvation Army lecture by Col. Holtz at Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Mon.

10. Went to the city in the forenoon and in afternoon worked about the yard.

Tue.

11. Worked in shop and wrote letters.

- Wed. 12. The same. Made trip to town.
- Th. 13. Went to see Henry Hickerson. Wrote and read in the afternoon.
- Fri. 14. Making preparations for planting.
- Sat. 15. Planted garden, wrote article for Sheller Home and played ball for a little while with the boys in the South yard.
- Sun. 16. Spent the day at home, which was mostly taken up by eadlers. It is still chilly and the wind has a wintry disagreeable feeling.
- Mon. 17. Worked in shop and yard.
- Tu. 18. Went to see Mr. Allen at the Railway office and not finding him I waited until and then wrote a letter and left it upon his desk - as an ultimatum. I then walked to Mr. Hickerson's, 205 - 2nd Ave. I came from there to the Custom House and spent some time looking for a Mr. Wolfinger whom I had been informed could give some information about a possible purchaser for Ben Agua Springs. Day passed away unavailingly and I walked thence to Mr. Graham's picture gallery where I spent a couple of hours and then walked home. In the evening Mr. Allen called to see me and talked his usual nonsense.
- Wed. 19. Working about the shop and yard.

Apr. resting by turns

Th. 20 The same. My wolf is giving me close personal attention which taxes both mental effort and physical diversion.

Fri 21 Drove to city in forenoon and in afternoon having several drives.

Sat. 22 Finished the picnic drive, looked after patients and read.

Sun. 23 Spent the entire day at home but accomplished little in the way of reading on account of callers. I felt so exhausted and sick so badly I lay down for two hours. In the afternoon when we were walking in the lot Judge Batters and wife drove by and inquired if our place was for sale and the price. While I should be glad to have a good bidder I do not expect anything important from him. Still this inquiry indicates that our place is pretty well desirable to the cultured class.

Mon. 24 Painted floor, spent some time with patients and wrote some letters.

Tu. 25 Worked some, read some and looked after patients.

Wed. 26 The same.

Th. 27 The same. In the evening Annie and I walked to the Tabernacle and back to hear Mr. French, Principal of the Chicago Art School deliver a popular lecture on

Art. His subject was the "Wit and wisdom of the crayon". The lecture was very instructive because it was popular and stripped of the technicalities with which lecturers are not usually short of their subject. He was very expert in the use of the crayon and sketched with great rapidity and decision. He was clear, scholarly and vivacious. Both his touch and his tongue seemed replete with humor.

Fri.

28. Worked some at the screen devos, some in the shop and wrote a very long letter to H. E. Mayers in reply to his expressing regret and asking forgiveness for his old offense. It was a task to me to write this letter but I quite agreed with Annie that I ought to do so. I could not help feeling somehow that some commercial inspiration stood behind his letter. I hope I am mistaken and really wishing to exercise the proper charity I wrote him a long kind letter enclosing several extracts from ones I had written during the winter.

Sat.

29. Went to see Tom Hudson and Mrs. Carley in the morning then worked at the screen and read and wrote and played with the children in the yard.

Sun.

30. A beautiful day all taken up with calls and patients. I seemed to get nothing out of it. Night came on and I was weary and longed for rest. After a thorough application of massage by my patients, Annie I slept 4 hrs without waking.

Reading and writing letters and looking after patients. In the afternoon went to attend Mrs. Varley in confinement. Got home about 4 o'clock, very much pleased that the complications which beset the case dissolved so readily. I am much annoyed by a peculiar sore throat which I fear is rather ominous.

Th.

4.

Drove to Mr. Pickens' and returning stopped at the "Shelter Home" to deliver some evening Commis. back here for Mrs. Merrill. After a little shopping I drove home and in the afternoon visited patients.

Fri.

5.

My time was divided between patients and books and letter-writing. I feel strangely irritable and rather necessitated to be on guard with myself some of the time. I can scarcely get an hour which appears to be really and thoroughly useful, day or night. While it does not seem to be any great thing, my formidable enemy. It seems as if it were a myriad crowding upon each other for the pleasure of attack. I lie long hours seemingly asleep but vaguely conscious of all that is occurring. I hear the rustle of the leaves - the scream of an engine - the bark of a dog, the carrol of a bird, the whisper of a child's then for a little moment seem to have fallen, suddenly fallen into a posture which is blank and empty but in which in some vague way I can still recognize myself as a something between an abstraction and an entity; an almost senseless something counterfeiting slumber. In the midst of this I hear the Town clock and then a measureless distance seems to pass until I hear the clock from another steeple chiming the same hour, which sometimes I count off with labored effort; and then again I seem blotted out in the midst of the count and only the dying sound lingers in my memory.

After after this weary welter of semi-consciousness seems to have been prolonged sufficiently to murder my patience I am strongly tempted and some secret shows me that this long strange sleep struggle had but a few minutes duration. I have tried to buy the luxury of rest as I used to in my boyhood by toil. Occasionally this has been partially successful but when the toil was fatiguing beyond my liking it only seemed to be added like an intolerable incubus to the sleep hours and all its little details are gone over again and again with confusion of recollection. To be beneficial, the exercise or labor must be pleasurable and not oppressive. What have I got from life? Even the labor I delighted in so often proves a delusion. Philosophically I ponder my conditions over and over and personally often wish I were at rest. Then, like a dying gladiator, spurning the ground so soon to be his couch, I summon my will and suddenly find a thousand phantoms of defiance battling like storm gods for the victory of confusion. Sometimes in a little moment, balanced around some hopeful little thing, some little kindness done, some little thing accomplished which gives hope of good I feel a momentary victory of content, but oh! how much I have desired a broader and better usefulness. I have cared so little for fame or empty gain and so much for a self-satisfying life and have struggled so hard and meanly, hoping that Heaven would see fit to show me the promise of a good accomplished which I often fear I am not to see. Yet with all this depression I seldom feel wholly unable to accomplish something respectable. Possibly it is my unwillingness to be vanquished. In my weakness I borrow a small consolation in feeling that I have already done an average life work, but the inability to see its fruits before me gives me scant satisfaction.

How strangely I seem to have been led on. I can not wonder that I have sometimes seemed strange to others. If I could feel that in some hidden way the seven last years were to be prolific of usefulness in a sense as broad as the previous seven seemed to be I could be satisfied.

Again I am thinking of

- May following my boyish impulse to seek another field for usefulness. I have been contemplating the possible sale of our home and removal to some field which would be safer and better for the flock I may not long tend. Where should it be? I have so often felt the desire to hear the roar of another ocean — to see my children develop under the influence of its mighty lessons. Yet — God knows best and in the language of my mother I will "bide my time".
- Sat. 6. Showery. Wrote and read and walked.
- Sun. 7. The morning was ushered in with gray sky and heavy rain which later gave way to sunshine and high wind. I have felt so little to be able to rouse myself into any considerable effort — Spent a few hours with my books and sometime in walking. I could do little at writing.
- Mon. 8 Moving in yard
- Tu. 9 In morning was called off to go to see Bro Brower at end of S. Sherry car line. I went and found him very bad. I stayed 2 hrs and came back on car to the square. Got some things and walked home. Very noisy but soon rested and moved until night.
- Wed. 10. The events of yesterday should properly be set down for this date. On yesterday I moved in the yard and in the evening Annie and I moved to the tabernacle to hear Col. Copeland lecture on "Seeing the Elephant." The lecture was very interesting and covered a wide range from the humorous to the pathetic. It was very realistic and we enjoyed it very much. After the lecture we walked home and discussed home matters, business matters, our future prospects, our pastimes enjoyments, &c. We enjoy these as they are comparatively a new feature in our lives. We left the flock at home and when we returned Connel alone was awake. As he is usually the first to fall asleep this was quite strange.

Th. 10. Still working at my yard and garden.

Fri. 12 The same.

Sat. 13. Worked in the shop and about the yard and went to city late in P.M.

Sun. 14 Cool but brilliant. I spent the day at home with my papers books and patients.

Mon. 15. Warm. I raked the hay on the yard. Then though very tired I went to see Mr. John Bowers beyond the end of the S. Cherry car line. When I came back I worked a little while in the garden.

Tu. 16. Wrote letters till the mail came, bringing me the pawls for my lawn-mower. I then proceeded to repair the machine.

May.

This took me till after four o'clock, when I began the tiresome job of cutting the high stubbled grass in the South side of yard. I cut without stopping till dark, in that time cutting more than I had ever got a hand to do in half a day. I had cut all lying south of the walk and east of the big gum tree. I was so tired I did not sleep much and my blistered hands burned like they had been scalded.

Wed.

17. Took the machine and cut all of the yard lying north of the walk against breakfast. I somehow felt like driving this job ahead of me until it was conquered. Whenever I have a job that is disagreeable to me or one that I can impress decidedly I give it no rest. After breakfast I finished the remainder of the yard and then before dinner I hauled out all the garden, corn & potatoes. In the afternoon helped the boys saw some on the big gum tree in the South yard.

Th.

18. Raining. Worked about the yard and wrote some letters.

Fri.

19. In the forenoon, took a long walk and in the afternoon took Annie and the two little girls and drove to John Brown stopping on South Summer St. for two hours to watch the floral parade on its way to Cumberland park. We got home late and after eating our dinner helped the boys

May saw on the big game.

Sat. 20. In the forenoon took Nettie and Helen to city. In the afternoon worked in the garden. At night took care of the two little girls while mamma and the boys went to the closing exercises of the May Festival at Centennial Park.

Sun. 21. The day was broken up with callers whose mission seemed only to disturb. I accomplished almost nothing though the day was ideal. A strange oppressive something seems to hover over me that I can not shake off.

Mon. 22. Split wood and sawing wood the day.

Tu. 23. Split wood in the forenoon. In the afternoon Mr. Graham came to take the pictures of the family. We were sawing up the big game tree which had stood in the south yard. The children were ranged around the cuts, Gus & I holding the saw in one picture and the two little girls in the other while Annie and I occupied positions at random. Our desire was to procure a real rustic picture. After the negatives were taken we removed the body of the old tree to the wood-pile.

Wed. 24. Worked some at my wood in the forenoon and in the afternoon drove to see Mr. Bowers.

Th. 25. Having much writing on patients and not

May 17. Working about the yard.

Tue. 26. In the morning drove to city taking Nettie & Helen along for the drive. In the afternoon worked wood on the south yard. We had cut down a large locust which died and the boys sawed by turns against me. They saw very well for little boys.

Wed. 27. Off in the morning early to Centerville to attend the sale of the P. & O. property. It was a summer tide and I felt very much exhausted when on reaching the depot. In reaching Centerville, we walked about the dilapidated courthouse and consulted the lawyers till noon. Then we went to the hotel and ate a ten cent meal for 50 cts. After dinner while waiting for the train that was to bring me back I saw a beautiful lamb on a fallen apple tree which had grown into a circle. I borrowed a saw and sawed it off and brought it with me as a rustic curiosity. At the sale we were enabled to bid the property in to secure the debt. I reached home at ten o'clock P.M. made one call on a sick patient, washed the disagreeable dust from my face and set down to an excellent lunch which I enjoyed with great relish after which Annie and I sat alone and talked till after midnight. These bright happy evenings are replete with pleasant memories.

Sun. 28. The day was broken up with callers so I could neither read, write nor sleep.

Mon. 28. Hot and dry. Spent most of day at splitting up the gum into stove-wood.

Tu. 30. I began early in the morning to split up the locust, which the boys had sawed up on Saturday. It was a hard task. Many of the cuts being forked and knotty. My hands were blistered and I was dressed with sweat, but I disliked the job so heartily that I clung to it and just before dark I finished. I was glad it was finished, and though I was too weary and sore to sleep as I tossed on my couch I congratulated myself on my victory.

Wed. 31. Took the car and went to see Mr. Bower. In the afternoon worked in the garden and read.

June.

Th. 1. Went to the city in the forenoon. In the afternoon began work on a Fourth of July stand for the boys. I am erecting a platform on the top of the stump of the locust I had cut in the South yard. It is about 8 ft. from the ground. The children are very much pleased with it.

Fri. 2. Finished my stand and went again to the city taking Anne and Helen for a drive. In the afternoon made a hammock and read.

Sat. 3. Spent several hours in the forenoon fixing the braces for Edward Pennock's feet. In the afternoon read and played with the children.

Sun. 4. Company nearly all day prevented accomplishment of much or enjoyment.

Mon.

5. Writing and working a little about the yard. I could not do much consecutive work for little Helen pleased almost constantly to be taken. She does not feel very well and insists that I should amuse her.

Tu.

6. Went out south Cherry St. beyond the railroad to see Mr. Rogers. Tried to find a buyer for my cow but found the butchers were chiefly liars.

Wed.

7. Spent most of day in taking care of little sick Helen, who will scarcely let me get out of her sight. The boys got their reports from school today. Calverton as usual leading his class with a grade of 90. Connel's grade was 74. His grade was 85. He seemed proud of it, bringing his paper to me where I was sitting. Helen in the hammock, and telling me how he could improve it another year. Although the youngest in his class he was nearly first and this considered with his lack of experience shows a fine grade.

Th.

8. Looking after patients and taking care of little Helen.

Fri.

9. Drove to see Mr. John Benson taking Annie and Helen with me. She seems to be benefited by the ride and enjoys them very much.

Sat.

- Sun. 11. Cool and cloudy. Took Annie and Helen and drove to Mr. Nottgrass's in the forenoon. Spent the afternoon in reading and looking after Helen.
- Mon. 12. Worked some about the yard in the forenoon, then went with Mr. Nottgrass in his buggy to see his sick girl. Came back and wrote in the afternoon.
- Tu. 13. Took Annie and Helen and drove to Mr. Nottgrass's stopping at the court-house to meet Mr. Maddy and seal and deliver him a deed for the property in which he now resides on North Fifth St. Found the little girl very sick and on returning left word for him to report the case later in the evening which he did. In the afternoon wrote some lines on the old gum tree which we had cut down in the South yard it having died two months ago.
- Wed. 14. The same.
- Tu. 15. We drove again to Nottgrass's and from there to see John Bowers opposite the New Railroad shops on Cedar St. Wrote in the evening.
- Fri. 16. We drove again to Nottgrass's stopping at the Butchers and Druggists Yard where G. and L. had already arrived with "Jennie".

the old cow we were selling. We found the little girl better, but still very sick. In the afternoon visited patients and read. Wrote also some lines on "Little Things".

Sat.

17. Went again to Mr. Nottgrasses. The day is quite cool. Helen is enjoying these rides very much and usually manages to get a play and a sleep in each. In the afternoon read and played with the children.

Sun.

18. Took Annie and Helen to Nottgrasses in the forenoon. In the afternoon was called to see Mr. Broughton's child, which is very sick. Considering the bare treatment I have derived from them this call is surprising. "I fear this case will be very difficult." Spent two hours with Prof. Turner in the afternoon, who is quite sick.

Near sunset we all went for a walk but had not gone far till we were compelled to return when we found Miss Katie Bond waiting for us. The children enjoy these walks very much and I think we should take more of them while they are children with us, and thus give them another bright memory of childhood with which we are associated. When the evening stories were completed the children gave us their goodnight kisses and went up to bed, while Annie and I transcribed the following lines, she writing, I correcting and dictating.

The Big Old Gum.

A big, old gum, tall, weird and dark,
 With massive trunk and rough brown bark
 And leaves of glossy green - washed
 Till autumn tints them fiery red,
 Stood in our yard. From year to year
 The birds had sung and nested here,
 Secure within its leafy shade,
 While round its root the children played
 Their merry games. Unknown to them,
 Old Time had touched its giant stem,
 And when another spring had come
 It did not rob our dear old gum.

We watched it closely, day by day;
 Its few, small leaves falling away
 And tho' it tried so hard to grow,
 Its time had come - it had to go.
 On banded knees we sawed it down
 And found it ^{wound,} ~~scarred~~ with many a
 From cutting edge to hidden nail,
 From thoughtless blow to cruel wail.
 We found it deeper than it seemed,
 And deeper than we ~~sawed~~ dreamed;
 But, when the boys from school had come,
 They went to sawing up the gum.

Now, while we cut it for the flame,
 With sweeping saw, the artist came
 And snapped a picture there and then,
 Of log and saw and little men;
 In fact, he gave to each a share,
 From baby girl to faithful mare;
 But, when he made another trace,
 Two little girls were at the saw,
 And all the rest were laughing round,
 Some on the log, some on the ground
 To see the new force that had come
 To help us saw the big old grain.

We keep the picture, that the years,
 Which bring the tide of toil and tears,
 May have this witness of a time
 And place we loved - a sunny clime
 Where children chased the golden hours,
 With flying feet, among the flowers
 Which bloom so sweetly, ~~sweetly~~ ^{round} our home.
 God grant these ~~flies~~ ^{flies} ~~may~~ ^{may} ~~near~~ ^{near} ~~us~~ ^{us}
 But, that Thy blessing still shall cling,
 About our hearts and always bring
 A deeper love, whenever we come
 To think of ~~sawing~~ ^{sawing} up the grain.

Little Things.

I want to note the little things
 Of which the singer never sings;
 The little words which often start
 The faintest thoughts in saddest heart;
 The little smile which scarcely tells How deep the heart behind it swells;
 The little touch of baby's lips,
 The little smiles of baby's lips,
 The little taps of baby's shoes,
 That say so much to me and you,
 And of the pleasure which they bring
 Of which the singer can not sing.

I want to note the little things
 That touch the heart and often bring
 The rain of tears, without a choice
 When we should ~~weep~~ or when rejoice;
 The little thing which changed the mind
 And made the spoken word more kind;
 The little duty, nobly done;
 The little conquest hardly won;
 The little sacrifice of want;
 The little faith, no force can daunt;
 The comfort which that faith must bring
 Of which the singer can not sing.

I want to note the little things
 Of which the singer never sings;
 The little cares that fill the life
 Of mother in her daily strife;
 The thousand, thousand little things
 Which she must do, which never bring Her rest - which must be done again
 Tomorrow, and tomorrow then;
 And then tomorrow still; while man
 Can neither make, nor do, nor plan,
 This trying crowd of little things
 Of which the singer never sings.

I want to note the little things
 Of which the singer never sings;
 The little things which end a life
 The little things which change a life
 From ill to good; which come and cling
 About our hearts and always bring
 A thought of love in other days.
 A thought of work in many ways.
 These little things, like daisies, bloom
 Between our footsteps and the tomb;
 They are but little, little things
 Of which the singer never sings.

Mon.

19. Still hot and dry. The leaves are falling from the trees like in Autumn. The grass is so crisp and dry that it crumbles under foot. Hot winds sweep almost constantly from the south.

Annie and I drove to Mrs. Holcomb's on Polk St. in the morning. In the afternoon I visited patients and took care of little Helen who is quite cross.

Tue.

20. Looked after patients and took care of the little girl who seems to recover very slowly. The burning weather continues.

Wed.

21. Drove again to Holcomb's in the forenoon and in the afternoon visited patients and wrote.

Th.

22. Attended patients here from till 4 P.M. Then took car and went to a Mr. John Sever's near the Quaker shops.

Fri.

23. The heat and drought increases. The trees are dying in the yard. The weeds in the street are withered. Most of the crops are destroyed. Spent part of the day visiting patients and wrote the verses on opposite pages. Helen clings about me and follows me up wherever I go. I can not resist her pitiful plea of "Take, take, take". Her plump flesh is wasted and flabby and she often totters when she walks. She will sit for hours with me - often on my lap - content apparently because she has me with her. She suffers a good deal but is quite patient and sweet in her suffering.

Give me your hand my Brother.

Give me your hand, my brother,
The time is flying fast;
I can not wait, dear brother—
The day is almost past.

Give me your hand, my brother,
As when, in youthful days,
We joined our hands together
And knelt in evening praise.

Give me your hand, my brother,
And let me hear you say
That you forgive me, brother,
Before I go away.

Give me your hand, my brother,
I want to say goodbye;
Forgive me, dear, dear brother—
Goodbye, goodbye— goodbye.

Here is my hand, my brother,
You have nothing to repent;
We are children of one mother
And life was only lent.

Here is my hand, my brother,
I want to keep you up;
Here's mine— and here's my other,
Come brother, share my cup.

Take both my hands my brother
And give me both eyes now;
Will cast our lots together
And reap we our harvest now.

The Spots Upon My Cuff.

I was sitting in my summer-house,
Where my time is often spent,
With my books and papers round me,
Alone and quite content.

I did not wish for any-thing;
In fact, I had enough -
A little hand came tapping
Its tips upon my cuff.

The little tips were dirty
And my cuff was fresh & clean,
And where the tips had rested
Three spots were plainly seen.

The little tips were dirty
But the heart was sweet and true,
And the smile about the dimpled mouth,
The sweetest I had seen.

The smiling lips were lifted
To proffer me a kiss;
So, I left my books and papers
For this little world of bliss.

"Look's girl," she sweetly chirruped,
With her hand upon her head,
And seeing she had surprised.
"Take, take", she softly said.

I pressed her to my throbbing heart,
 She did not have to wait;
 I gave the dimpled fingers
 My white cuff for a slate.

Take all my books and papers,
 White linen and such stuff;
 More dear I hold than fame or gold
 These spots upon my cuff.

Let albums hold the scholar's name -
 His fame is but a puff;
 But here I have Louis' autograph,
 Inscribed upon my cuff.

At Northern Rose.

While Fame, about your waiting feet,
 Her choicest treasures throws
 I deem the offering incomplete
 Without a Northern rose.

In other days when Fame sat throned
 And duty nobler grows
 When laurels twine with fadeless pine Recall this Northern rose.

Sat.

24. Some indications of rain. Spent the day about home writing and doing little things. Little Helen toddles after me all time and then insists that I shall take her. Sometimes I sit her on the summer house table beside me and try to write though her playful help usually prevents any connected work. While she was "helping" me today I wrote the following, a word or two at a time as I was permitted. I do not attribute its literary defects to her little arms around my neck.

My Martyr.

I have a martyr with a patient face,
 With a cheerful voice and a smiling grace
 Who meets each duty with more a frown,
 From the part of day till the sun goes down
 Even then her duties are never done.
 And some of them are only begun;
 And these will wear till another dawn
 And still another has come and gone;
 But she is patient and faithful & brave,
 With a missioner's pride as an ocean wave
 Caressing forever o'er and o'er
 The rock-bound beach and the sandy shore,
 Imparting her life with its sweetness there
 Till the lines of her fingers brown & fair
 Ache martyr of love and martyr of life
 This sweet-faced martyr is my wife.

- Sun. 25. Still threatening but no rain. Spent the day with little Helen.
- Mon. 26. At last we have a little rain - only a little but so delightful. My time is divided between writing letters in the summer house and reading.
- Tu. 27. Still hot and dry. The trees are dying. The grass is burned up and gone. The pasture lot, which a month ago was green and luxuriant, is desolate, brown and bare. We are watching the stock in the yard while they eat the short grass under the trees. We have nowhere and at no time experienced such a drought. The hot winds from the south lick up all the moisture but we have only to trust ^{and} wait. Early in morning before breakfast was called to a case of confinement at Albert John's. Returned soon and spent most of day with my books, papers and in watching the stock.
- Wed. 28. The hot dry weather continues and my vocation is about the same.
- Th. 29. The same.
- Fri. 30. The same. We are watering our trees in hope of saving them until it rains.
- Sat. 1. I feel very much depressed with a strange, inexplicable sadness. Just before noon Mr. Borne came for me to go to Spring Hill Cemetery to see his father. It was very hot and dusty and much of the road was rough. The horse was old and very conservative in his movements.

The whip was also old and much worn on some other animal. It was seldom applied and then with a peculiar effect which might well be compared to the motion of a very short lumpy horse, which however was confined merely to the bridle legs, which seemed to, in a moment, straighten in the air as if the owner had suddenly determined to stand on his head, and out of consideration of the weather and the incidental exertion had abandoned the idea upon going one-fifth of the distance. This would be repeated three or four times each effort growing less than its predecessor till the dead level of hot-indifference had been reached. Whenever practicable this ancient would saddle men so that the wheel on my side would keep on the rough, broken stone which produced a motion not unlike the round-end of an old threshing-machine, and was accompanied with as much dust. A dry, hot, steamy air rose constantly. The driver avoided much of the same impressions he might have received by keeping asleep most of the time. I discovered occasionally that he possessed the rare ability to sleep just as he pleased, and for some reason occasionally clear he would sleep with one eye open, at various intervals while the other soared. Then again he would wholly shut out the world, but on the approach of another negro team would dreamily open his eyes, recognize the driver exchange abilities and then resume his occupation. Clouds of dust constantly rising from the passing teams did not deter his sleepy business by causing a collision.

 He drove as if inspired. I often wished for my own sake that I might hurry out of this disagreeable dust and heat. The cedars which stood by the way side looked as if covered with gray ashes.
 The weeds and leaves and all objects along the road were coated with gray dust. We reached there at last and after waiting on the failing patient while the family took dinner, I walked through the Spring Hill cemetery to the pits and proceeding up as the toll-gate climbed the high stone fence and walked over to the office of the National Cemetery to inquire as to the burial of my oldest brother who had died at Buford S. C. while on Sherman's march to the sea. My quest was unavailing and I walked back through the great evergreens contrasting in my mind a quiet rest of the sleepers all about me with the dismal din of life.
 A slight breeze sighed through the pines and the grass leaf and smothering-land were ringing in the shade. I hurried from this shady retreat regretfully, walked back to the house along the dusty pike and was soon on my sunny summer homeward. I found our family had become more conservative than ever. I reached home before I died, brushed the dust from the outside, repaired a broken fence, bathed my dusty hands and face ate my dinner, spent an hour in tending the cows and the remainder of the afternoon in reading. I had something of a vague impression while talking to patients late in the afternoon that whenever I would speak the dust flew out of my ears. I am reminded of the terrible experience through which myself and next older brother once passed in the useless task of whipping the lime out of hair for plastering in a small closed room. I hope this experience will not be repeated, but if necessary I will try to accept it philosophically.

July.

Sun.

2. Still scorching with hot winds from the south. The leaves are dying on many of the trees and beneath some the ground is covered with fallen leaves like in autumn. I did not feel equal to much exertion and spent part of day on the floor with Helen.

Mon.

3. The fierce weather continues. Took Annie and Helen to city and stopped at home of uncle. Spent remainder of day with patients and papers.

Tue.

4. The heat has abated but the dry weather continues. I visited patients during the day. The boys have been incessantly active preparing for their evening entertainment. I have suffered a good deal today and been compelled to lie down a good deal. As evening drew near I felt some better and when Mr. Webb and family came I took my place with them in the yard and witnessed the exercises which consisted of song and original speeches by the four older boys and a declamation by Wesley. These exercises were given from the little platform about 8 ft. from the ground on the top of a big locust stump. They had decorated the platform with flags and reached it with a step-ladder. They all entered into it with heartiness and the program moved along smoothly till they came to the fireworks. In attempting to use some old fireworks they met with partial failure which was to them a serious matter, as they had regarded this as the crowning feature. The evening was delightful and after the speeches we all repaired to the south veranda where Annie had prepared two tables one for us and one for the children. The five boys served the delightful repast and enjoyed it very much. In fact every one seemed to be delighted. For once the whole crowd had more ice-cream and sherbet than they could eat. It was a delightful entertainment from beginning to end and the long program which the children had arranged beautifully was carried out without a break. We all enjoyed it on account of its informal heartiness. May all their entertainments be as innocent, pure and patriotic. The speeches were very good considered as original efforts by children as youthful.

- Wed. 5. Cooler with sprinkles of rain. I spend my time with my patients and books.
- Th. 6. Warmer and dry. I rose to the city again and looked after some patients later.
- Fri. 7. Still hot and dry and the persistent South wind seems to be hunting for any moisture accidentally left. I saw some and visit patients.

July

Sat.

8.

The same. Late in P.M. we drove to city.

Sun.

9.

The sun shines with extreme brilliancy though it is not very hot. The winds still seem much for moisture. The ground beneath many of the trees is covered with fallen leaves. The sound of the wind among the leaves is like that of autumn. I spend the day answering letters.

Mon.

10.

Thermometer has fallen & the wind is from the North. The same brilliant sunshine, the same intense drought.

Tue.

11.

Thermometer 76°. Heat everywhere - hot winds from the South. Everybody is uncomfortable. Not a pound of grain could be gathered on the stock lot. We are feeding as in winter.

Wed.

12.

The conditions are all intensified. Hot winds from the South are almost stifling. We have all joined hands to clean the parlor. I thought the heat is intense.

Th.

13.

The atmosphere is fairly on the ground that many hands make light work.

The same. We finished the parlor.

Fri.

14.

Visited some patients and spent part of the day in entertaining Louisa Merrill and wife. They were on their way North and were seeking a place to stay till they could get their orders.

Sat.

All the conditions of the drought are becoming more intense. There are signs in every direction. There are no signs of rain. Meanwhile the hot southern wind blows constantly as if from a blast furnace.

... the withering the little remaining vegetation and withering the leaves on the ground if a tree has been defoliated. The sturdiest weeds, the most balful pests of vegetable growth paused in their attempts to grow a month ago and since that have been steadily shriveling up. In the adjacent field the cockles which long before this time are usually six feet high and in some places a dog can scarcely pass through them are standing now about three inches high all shriveled and many dead. A hot-roaring sound fills the air as the hot winds pour through the shriveling trees. Occasionally a few distant clouds appear but they soon pass away and leave the brassy sky from which the sun pours a constant scorching fire.

We are all fairly well and of course would still be fairly comfortable. Of course our company unjoins our regular methods and substitutes their wishes instead.

16. The conditions continue. The winter guests, do as work and wait.
17. The hot dry weather continues. Spent most of the day mowing some short millet in order to save a little feed.
18. Still hot and dry. Worked in the hay with the boys and got in what we had cut. We hauled it on the old barrow.
19. Read a fine Adverse Providence that his mother was arising throughout the day. Some days this around it begins

July. to look like rain.

30. A little rain. Spent the day at reading and writing.

21. The same. The drought seems to be breaking up. It has rained light showers all day.

22. The same.

23. Rained hard. My "wolf" has been giving me close attention for two or three days. We have had company all week, Ensign Morrill & wife. This disturbs our usual methods. After the storm, sunshine.

24. Spent the day with patients and papers.

25. The same. In the evening, during a hard squall, our Ensign Morrill of the Salvation Army returned from city accompanied by his favorite colored body servant. After supper he took his wife and child and started for depot, intending to go to New York. Though we had made extra efforts to entertain them for the week or more I could not help thinking as he left that he was disappointed in not receiving more than board and lodging. Now that they are gone we may settle down to our regular method and simple style of living.

26. While working at my water-tank, Mr. Bond called to get me to go and see the destruction caused by the defective work on the house he occupies. This compelled me to go later to the city to secure a plumber.

- Th. 27. Worked with my vine read and walked. Spent two hours teaching the boys in algebra.
- Fri. 28. Teaching the boys, reading and walking.
- Sat. 29. Worked a little about the place^{3d} read. It is very warm.

Sun. 30. Cloudy with sprinkles of rain. Everything seems to be trying to grow. We are sitting in the summer-house and can look out to the North West and see the rock crusher sending up its clouds of steam and smoke and hear the rattle of its machinery. As it belongs to the city we can scarcely see why it should be running today.

Just beside the summer-house a cuckoo began building a nest two months ago.

She was molested by a jay and abandoned it. She is now sitting where it was and for the last half hour has been keeping up a constant, soft, lonesome song. Sometimes so faint as to be almost inaudible though she is in plain sight or by a rod away. I have never heard one sing so sweetly as this.

For four years this one or another has built in the yard each year building close to me. I was very sorry to see her deserted. I wonder what can be her motive in returning to sit like Thomas in the ruins of Carthage.

Mon. 31. I do a little work and read. In P.M. went to city to get a letter to get me my ref.

Tu. 1 Working a little and reading by turns.

Wed. 2 Teaching and reading. The time moves along pleasantly and so swiftly, the summer seems almost gone.

Th. 3 The same. It is hot and still today.

Fr. 4 We all got into the old barouche and drove to White's Creek to give the children an outing. We went far down the creek to a deep hole where all the children were soon in the water to the neck. Even little Helen was a joyous participant. About 12 o'clock they all got hungry and finding a spring got water and Annie soon had a bucket of lemonade and a lunch spread on the grass under a big sycamore where they had already provided a swing made from a rope we brought along. We ate freely and soon devoured the repast. Then Annie swung in the swing a little and the boys climbed like monkeys in the branches. Then all but she went in to bathe again and the boys tried hard to swim in my shallow water. I tried to instruct them and after an hour of splashing we dined and drove home. It was a pleasant day and all enjoyed it very much. How fast our little ones are growing up. We will soon have no little boys and should play with them soon. God bless this and all such days and may its memory ever be inspiring and pure.

Sat. 5 Went to town in A.M. and read and wrote in P.M. Not well.

- Sun. 6. Rainy. Read most of day. It stormed very hard in the evening.
- Mon. 7. Breezy. Reading. Annie is not well. Boys mowed yard and recited Algebra to me and I interlarded later and lesson with stories of which they never tire. Just now the mythical hero is Christian Calum a character they almost idolize.
- Tu. 8. We still have hot weather with showers. I spend my time with my patients and journals.
- Wed. 9. The same.
- Th. 10. The same.
- Fri. 11. Very hot and oppressive. Annie and I drove to the city and I returned quite exhausted. Spent the remainder of the day in reading and teaching Algebra.
- Sat. 12. It rained in the early morning and cast a gloom of disappointment over the remainder of the family who had made arrangements to go with Prof. Webb's family to White's Creek to fish and swim. About ten o'clock however the clouds cleared away and the blue sky and bright sun and the pleadings of the children induced me to drive out with them to White's Creek, Prof. Webb having gone before. We had scarcely reached the Creek till all were stripped and in the water, except the two women, two babies and myself. I stood upon the bank and directed the awkward plunges of the children who soon began to overcome their fear of the water and learn how to handle themselves in it. Counsel or refusal maintained his polky conservatism and had to be ducked a good many times to overcome his fear of the water. At the last he got so he could dive from the shore into the stream like the rest. All dinner we spread the cloth upon the grass under the big sycamore and all gathered around on our knees and all enjoyed the meal very much. After dinner we took a short fish and then Prof. Webb and the boys went back to the water, while Mrs. Webb and Annie and the two little children looked on from the shore, while I continued fishing. At half past four o'clock we started home although the children would gladly have remained in the water till dark. We were all tired but all enjoyed the day. I went with great reluctance as my throat had been very sore for several days and an indescribable aching had pursued me night and day. However I enjoyed seeing the others enjoy themselves and witnessing the improvement in Annie's appetite.

Sun

13. Very warm with one light shower. It was a dull day for I felt so badly I could not enjoy reading and had scarcely the courage to answer my letters. My throat continues sore, the soreness extending down into my chest. I feel unaccountably weak and this coupled with a persistent aching renders me quite unfit for anything.

Mon

14. Spent most of day in writing letters and preparing some pictures to be sent to be sent to some of our friends writing some verses on the back of each. The day has been brilliant and mainly pleasant and breezy.

Th. 17. Reading and teaching.

Fri. 18. The same.

Sat. 19. Went to Mr. J. J. in the forenoon. In the afternoon helped the boy mow weeds till near sunset when Annie and I drove to market. In the evening we sat on the veranda in the moonlight and talked till near midnight. The air is cool and ethereal. The children get their evening story and are soon sound asleep within the open door. Then we sit and talk alone for hours while we watch the moon shining softly through the vines and presenting a picture almost like a fairy dream. We are living so much together and with ourselves.

Our children do not seem inclined to stray away and have the reputation of being good children by all who know them. Surely we ought to be happy and thankful.

Sun. 20. Spent the day in reading and walking and treating patients.

On opposite page I will transcribe the verse to Helen entitled "In the Swing." It was inscribed on the back of a photograph showing Helen in the swing while I stood behind to prop it.

In The Evening

To Mother.

Away you go! Now tightly cling,
 While we are longer wildly flung
 Your tangled hair; hold fast the rope,
 Almost beyond your fingers scope;
 With bounding pulses, and steady brain
 Sweep like the petrel over the main,
 But cling to Faith, ah, closely cling,
 It is the rope of God's own string.

Away you go, without a care,
Just like a swallow in the air;
So glides your youth, so swiftly on,
That when few years have come and gone,
You then may stand behind the wing
And little hands beneath your wing
With faith in you; but teach the Hope That rests in Faith in God our hope.

Away you go, like airy vraith,
With jess heart and laughing faith
And ringing psal; God keep you now
With sunny heart and cloudless brow
And stainless life, without, within,
Unburied with Love, unburied by sin.
Away you go! Now closely cling To Faith and Hope - to God's own wing

Pleasant Thoughts.

Let us build a wall of books
 And pleasant thoughts
 Of sunny slopes and shady brooks
 Where sweet forget-me-nots
 Bring back the breath of Time
 Young Time untried
 Which opened wide
 Youth's rosy gates of morn
 When life was new
 And friends were true
 And friendship had a charm
 To keep the heart
 Without an art
 Forever pure and warm.

When we sit down together.

23 Oct. 1899

When we sit down together, dear,
 When we sit down together,
 Love makes the dearest ones more dear
 When we sit down together.

When we sit down together dear
 'Tis always sunny weather;
 Your smiles will tell, that all is well,
 When we sit down together.

When we sit down together, dear.
 The haze is on the heather;
 The children play and bless the day,
 When we sit down together.

Mon 21 Moved weeds and read.

Tu 22 The same. Made preparations for the children to go on an outing to White's Creek.

Wed. 23 We all went to White's Creek. Tho the children enjoyed the trip greatly and it had many pleasant features for all of us still it was not as pleasant as I had hoped. We all enjoyed our dinner under the big tree. The fishing feature was a failure tho I got two small ones which we put into a basket and set it in the shallow water while we used the basket to make lemonade. A little later the fish and basket were stolen. In bathing the little girl kept near the shore. When all were a little way from Helen she tumbled down & tho she tried hard to crawl out and did go some distance she did not understand navigation and got down and stranded a little in very shallow water. I was farthest from her and quite out of quick reach. Annie ran in and got her out and then fished barefoot while her stockings dried in the sun. Helen did not care to go back. We had a pleasant drive homeward.

Sat. 26 The same. Quite warm.

Sun 27 Mr Pennock and wife took dinner with us. Visitors kept me engaged nearly all day. In P.M. late went to see Helen Dawson. Am. hear. and throat is sore.

Mon 28 Writing letters and teaching Algebra to G & L.

Tu. 29 Writing, reading and visiting patients in A.M.
In P.M. Annie and I drove to city and got me a suit of clothes for my dreaded trip to Centerville next Monday.

Wed 30 Wrote letters and copied verses nearly all day. In evening a strange reflected red or damask covered the eastern sky in which a lurid rainbow appeared. This strange phenomenon was soon followed by a very hard rain that came from the East.

Th. 31 Showery.

Sep.
Fri. 1 Making preparations to go to Bon Aqua. I dread the trip as I would hell. It always ends in disappointment.

Sat. 2 Off at 6 A.M. for Bon Aqua. It is hot and close and I am weary and sick to start with. Got there at 10 A.M. walking from depot over to the new school house & on to the cottages. Mrs Morrison seeing me hailed me and I stopped and spent an hour with them. It is very hot. I walked over a good deal of the place before dinner.
Things are not running so smoothly as when we run it before. All seem to be weary. A lazy drowsiness akin to indolence seems to meet one every where. Even the song birds seemed to have gone. I was kept busy till night listening to tale of sickness and distress. Late in P.M. John T. Corby came over and brought his wife for me to treat. At night I was sent to room 7 over the dining room and till midnight listened to the talkers below. I did not sleep an hour. The odor of decaying vegetables victuals, hay, many other kind of provisions mingled together came into my room thro the open window. I put in a hard trying night.

Sun. 3

Up at day and at once called to treat a drunken libertine. Then walked to the big Blue Pool and bathed in its clear cold waters. It was too cold to remain in long. I came out all aglow and walked back to the hotel and got my breakfast. I sat beside a large Knight from Centerville and he was a curiosity. He ate smoothly with his finger and when meat was forced to touch the plate and with a fork rolled over nearly every piece at last selecting one and then leaving his fork alone he would tear it with fingers & teeth like a dog. Then pouring gravy on his plate he took small bits of bread and dipped and rolled them in the gravy with his fingers in a very uncleanly way. In front of me a formidable old lady with a great prognathous jaw fulminated furiously about "niggers" whom she regretted to see free tho she professed to love them immensely. She never stopped talking even when putting on feed. When she asks a question she proceeds to answer it as if she alone knew how to ask and answer. Sometimes she asks a question and goes right on as if an answer was not desired. She is a talking machine whose horse-power has not been determined. After breakfast the same routine of patients - the same trudging in the hot sun. O how I wish this trip were done and I back with Annie and the children. At last the long, dull hot crowded day faded out, but a suffering debauchee and some other sick ones kept me busy till between 9 and 10.

I then went to the room assigned me on the hill and found it in a nasty plight. No lamp matches towels soap and a nasty smell was found to cling about everything. I ventilated it but the outside odors were worse. A great hog roiled and grunted complacently beneath my window. This I later learned was the scavenger department and desirable on ground of cheapness. I got as far from the vile odors that came in at the window as I could and vainly tried to sleep but like Macbeth could "sleep no more". Near day they came to rouse me to go to the drunken devotee. I went without calling for a light to see to take leave of my place of many memories.

Mon.

I began as usual to serve the sick and continued in the profitless work till 9:20 when I stole away and joined the hack on its way to station. I did not go around to see the lady with the fighting jaw. The last to bid me goodby was my friend Mrs. J. L. Morrison. We took train at Station for Centerville and got there about 10 A.M. It was hot and so close I could scarcely breathe. The sweat in streams gushed from my body and blinded my face almost blinding me. We climbed the big hill from the station to the ancient looking village and after traversing its dusty and stony street for three hours went to its one miserable hotel and paid fifty cents for a ten cent dinner of the second class. After dinner more hot treading. At last we find the sale of Bon Aqua Springs is postponed till Wednesday but that an advance bid of $3200 is made which insures it to go. At 4:10 We took a crowded dusty, hot little car and started home.

Sep

At Bon Aqua I got off and got a big fozzie lying at station weighing over 50# and this was added to my attentions on my hot dusty way. At Nashville the street cars connected so badly I got home at 10:30 P.M. I at once bathed and changed my dusty garb and sat down with faithful Ammie and ate heartily of ice cream she had thoughtfully provided. I lay down at midnight but the horrid memories of my trip clung like a wet garment and for sometime kept me awake. At last I slept.

Tu. 5

I spent the day at home with the family. I am much depressed. Still hot.

Wed.

6

Ammie decided to go to Alford, Penn. and we hurried to get her off in time. I took her to the train and returned to Wiley who visited the man. Then we went to market and I paid my city tax and drove home. I am so run up and depressed I can scarcely get about and a deep drowsiness clings to me constantly.

Still very hot. Visited patients and wrote.

Fr.

Attended to my daily duties in A.M. In P.M. took all the children to city and got books for school which begins Monday. I was very weary at night and retired earlier than usual. A heavy rain storm roused me.

Sat

Up early and mowed North yard before breakfast. I am quite lame and very tired. Wrote and attended patients in A.M. After dinner I mowed the rest of the yard and helped the dear boys get this their day work. We had like some other boys footpound some thing that got into a bad shape. They felt hurt and gathered about me and cried and told me how sad they were. Taken all in all they had really done well. Galamus had mowed and the three cows had been milked and the milk customers all served and the meals prepared, house swept, some lessons learned and many other things done. I soon felt relieved cheerfulness and we all went on to the evening work together.

Sat.

Sun. 10

A lovely morning. The boys all set to work on their morning duties and at 9 A.M. they came to the summer house where I was at my writing and announced themselves ready and on the way to Sunday school. They told me they felt happier than they did yesterday and all looked happy. They pointed out that they were ready earlier than when mamma was here and seemed proud of their arrangements. They often speak of mamma and tell when she will come and say "it is no longer as when Dock is gone". Thank God the dear ones are fond and closely bound together.

Now they are off together. Lu carrying a spoon bucket in which is a plate of butter for a customer. In the room I am suffering terribly with my lame back which gives me no rest. The boys have now had their breakfast and we get dinner. The boys did real well and we enjoyed our dinner. In P.M. I told them long stories and helped them in their lessons.

Mon. 11

After scurrying around for a time I got the cakes baked and ate breakfast and set off to school. Had there then they are little treasures. After they left I swept for them and helped wrap the morning work. Then went to see Mr. Fox. In the afternoon Annie returned with Mrs. Florence Pennock bringing her son Edward, who is ruptured, for treatment.

12. Sketched on some patients and wrote letters.

13. The same.

14. The same. Weather is very brilliant.

15. Sketched to day and back and though I did a good deal of walking in city I did not feel so weary as I expected.

Sat.

16. I am suffering about all I can with fear and go about. A deep stupor pervades my frame and while I am trying to shake it off lightning like flashes of pain follow each other with such rapidity that between these forces I am nearly helpless. I have done my best to shake it off and it off but spare it by addressing myself to tasks hoping for diversion and relief, but feel conscious that I am so impotent for physical or mental work that if it were my habit I should yield to discouragement. I sometimes stretch myself at full length for relief and am in a half awake condition but am now busily watching the play of these forces which are arrayed against me. I have wondered how long this kind of contest could be.

sustained and surely feel that were it not for others I would very gladly go to sleep forever. At such times the songs of birds or waterfalls or music seem scarcely appreciable and I wonder really what further one can do to serve. I surely want to go with the rest - to be constantly speaking of it - like a spoiled infant is exceedingly disagreeable and to feel that it is always between me and my purpose demanding an explanation of my failure to execute is annoying beyond expression. Altogether it is a repetition of brilliant days of apparently better weather. I wish I could separate any possible availability remaining to me and like assets in an account at once put them into effective use and then cease. It might seem like a few days of my former self.

Possibly it is proper I should have such discipline as this affords to understand better the lives of some others.

Sun. 17. The same pleasant, brilliant weather with the same demons of discontent and disturbance gnawing at my existence.

Mon. 18. Wrote and worked a little. An anthrax on the third finger of my left hand annoys me.

Tu. 19. Walked to city and back after looking about at some second hand stores. In P.M. I took a scythe and mowed the back of Tom's yard. The mixed oval grass and weeds will make a little feed for the cow and I feel that I must save all I can. Calumet came a little and snow will for a few days.

My Mission.

For You, 13 Sep. 1899

What is my mission? - what my place
 In God's great plan? Is it a spot
 To sit or stand, while others trace
 The fields of noblest pursuit thought
 For sparkling gems of brain or heart?
 Is it to trudge the grimy soil
 Of common things, where human art
 Has made no path? Is it to toil
 With humblest touch and name
 In lowly life? Is it to climb
 To Fame or creep to Shame -
 Is it the accident of time?
 Down dismal steep - up bright sublime?

What is my mission? I would know
 Its purpose, use, its scope its end;
 Its place, its time - all things that go
 To make it up or comprehend
 Its plan. I'd know its tears,
 Its toils, its tempests and its calm;
 Its sunny smiles, its deepest fears -
 In fact, I'd know just what I am
 And what I am to be.....
 But, I would know my Master's will
 And just the things that He Makes known, must please me still.

Be still, my heart... I need not know,
 Let Faith my anchor be
 The hand that gives will just bestow
 What still is best for me.
 And when I cannot see the way
 'Tis then He is most kind.

"He leadeth me" by night and day,
 No naked, lame and blind.
 I need not care the earth may hold High honors for its great
 His purposes will all unfold,
 If I will only wait.

I'll wait beside the Silent Sea
 Until the change of tide Shall float my bark and then will He,
 Upon its bosom wide,
 Direct my trackless way. In faith,
 What need I care what storms may come,
 When I am safe with Him, who saith,
 "For you I go to make a home".
 What need I care for Fame or Fate,
 For wealth, or place, or power;
 My mission now is but to wait
 The tide may change this hour.

Wed 20

Moved all day hard and finished up
Perrin's yard and Graham's yard at day
It was a hard day's work but I felt a pride in doing it. My throbbing finger was a hot argument all day.

Th. 21

I wrote a letter and then raked up some of the grass. Late in day the boy and I hauled it on the barouche and put it into the little old cow stable.

Fr. 22

Worked some about the place till the boys came from school and then we all raked up and hauled in the weeds on the little yard where Mr Graham lives.

Sat. 23

After many stops and hindrances Annie and I got off to city. We spent several hours looking at stores and searching.
After dinner at 5 PM. I read till night.
My finger was in evidence all night.

Sun. 24

Cool. Read part of day and in P.M. Annie & I walked to Mr Allen's new house. My finger joins "the wolf" today in active war.

Mon 25

Suffering acutely. I write and walk and read by turns but the punishment does not abate.

Tu. 26

I visited Mrs Fox
in morning and then walked to 1500 McGowan St to look at a heating stove but found it too small to do the work I wished. I attended an auction where some books were sold at 701 Second St. and bought nothing. Walked a good many places and walked back home. The day was cool & I had some discharge from my furious pain by walking. It seemed to keep the wolf away.
I took another walk after dinner and got in sunset. My arm is very sore and so swollen in willa that I prop up my arm to sleep.

Sat. 30 Help take care of Helen who is sick and read some patients and read.

Oct.
Sun. 1 Help nurse Helen and write some. In P.M. I was sorely tried by a duet of smokers. Lynch Bemis had some company, he did not want to entertain & he gave me the job. He brought a Major Reeve or Col. Reeve as he preferred to be called into the parlor where the sick child stays by the fire and both smoked viciously on cigars too strong for a Spaniard. Here Lynch soon burned out his cigar and scattered the ashes over the floor and then left the Col. to keep up the insolence all P.M. I saw it was necessary to take him off for a walk and give the child a chance. Got rid of him at sunset and came back to the sitting room to help care for Helen.

Mon. 2 Went to city to try to sell cow and after a long walk and numerous talks to cattle dealers I came home thoroughly tired. Spent P.M. helping take care of Helen.

Tu. 3 Nursing the sick girl and writing at times

Wed. 4 The same. Some patients.

Th. 5 Poor Helen is quite sick and needs constant attention. Between crying spells I write the last verse of my piece "The man with the hoe" It is only a weak presentation of the subject, as rigorously handled by Edwin Markham but is less pessimistic and I hope more nearly true. I do not think he interprets Milllets passing accurately.

Oct-

Fri. 6

Caring for Helen whose fever does not seem to abate. This is the anniversary of our wedding & while Helen slept and Annie worked I wrote a verse for her that partly describes the year of our marriage life. It is of course very imperfect from many causes and I could not well write while Helen felled. The day was partly cloudy but mainly pleasant and at eve the stars were all out. At night I told the children a long story about Christian Calm and they were delighted. It was a pleasant anniversary except for Helen's sickness. Even she tried to make it pleasant by sitting in her chair at table and eating a few bites. May God make us adequately grateful and bring us all again around the table when another anniversary shall have come.

Sat.

Went to city with Mary and Catherine to get shoes. Spent P.M. in trying to please Helen who insists on being carried all the time. It is cloudy and warm and threatens rain.

Sun. 8

Little Helen is quite sick and pleads to be with me all the time. I hold and carry her most of day. Mr. W. Rutledge was here for a few minutes today. In P.M. carried Helen out of doors as it was warm. Got a short time in which I began to transcribe the following

They are lovers still.

6 Oct. 1890

The day was bright with golden light;
The haze was on the hill;
A happy pair were wedded there,
And they are lovers still.

Time flew like light. Their home was bright
And children came to fill
That home with song, and keep them young,
And they are lovers still.

Those fleeting days, in Love's own ways
Has Cupid ruled with skill;
They have their joys, their girls & boys,
And they are lovers still.

There they have kept, while children slept Love's vigils at their will;
And thro' the day, joined them in play
And they are lovers still.

At father's knee, still let them be Protected from all ill...
If twilight come and call them home
Let them be lovers still.

Let autumn's haze and golden days
Exclude life's wintry chill.
God bless their joys, their girls and boys
And keep them lovers still.

A Highland Hate

My heart is proud that in my zeal,
 I take no mean revenge;
 And when I conquer let me feel,
 I've nothing to avenge.
 I have been wronged and I have avenged;
 The truth that time would tell;
 Few men can hate as I have hated,
 Few men can love as well.

My heart is proud; God knows my scorn
 Burns like the Persian flame;
 But, still I would not plant a thorn
 To sting a foe to shame.
 My heart and hand are truly mated
 And know each other well;
 Few men can hate as I have hated;
 Few men have loved as well.

My heart is proud, I never trust
 At any human shrine
 Few hearts can feel what I have felt,
 Few wrongs have burned like mine
 My very life was ever freighted
 With hate, hot-blown from hell.
 The few men hate as I have hated
 Few men have loved as well

My heart was proud; the past is dead:
 My heart is humble now,
 And peace is reigning there instead
 The hate I did allow.
 I feel a love, deep, unabated,
 No words could e'er foretell;
 Let no man hate as I have hated.
 Let all men love as well.

"The man with the hoe."

The man with the hoe "a short time ago
Attracted attention so wide
That people began to study the man
Both painter and poet had tried

To use for a text; and all were perplexed
To see how these giants of thought
With the brush and the pen had blundered again
In giving the lesson they taught.

For all men should know, the man with the hoe,
When tried by a rule ortho-dox,
Is not a mere thing but the son of a king,
And neither a drudge nor an ox.

It must be allowed, he is King of the crowd,
If measured by usefulness now;
And the brush and the pen can never tell when
They ranked with the hoe and the plow.

This lord of the soil is willing to toil
And remembers, the Master has said
"In the sweat of thy brow" not another's you know Each mortal shall eat of his bread

This sovereign of earth the humble of birth
With feet on the lowliest sod,
Is the chief of his race and bears in his face
The image and promise of God.

Tho he have not the ken of the brush or the pen,
His faith is so trustful and pure,
He prays from the sod straight up to his God
And relies on the promise sure.

The lie bound to the hoe contentment will show
 His back bend on onerous weight.
 This image of God has shoulders so broad
 They peer as the pillars of state

Whatever is said, this baron of bread
 Needs neither the brush nor the pen,
 Is let the world know that the man with the hoe
 Is the Kingliest King among men.

An Autumn walk

I love to walk when fields are brown,
 And Autumn's leaves are dropping down,
 And nature lays her golden crowns,
 On the lap of another earth.
 As if she rendered her account,
 In ripened worth and rich amount,
 And showed such grateful heart the fruit
 Of all the golden youth.

I love to sit and idly dream,
 Upon some sweet enchanted scene.
 Until, in fact I almost seem,
 To be of it a part;
 And scarcely hear the stillly sound,
 Of nuts or leaves upon the ground,
 Or other music all around,
 Untouched by human art.

I love to wander in the woods,
 And worship where no one intrudes,
 Profanely in God's solitudes,
 Where everything is pure
 Where every note that greets the ear,
 Is but an echo pure and clear,
 Of love in that enchanted sphere,
 Where worship is secure.

- Mon. 9 Helen is better. I spend the day with her & my books. I write the bugs out some at times till she sleeps and then I write a line or two of my verses. I do not know what use they can be but try to put no impure thought into them and leave their mission to the Lord who directs and from small things can get great results. Possibly a line may sometimes touch another's heart.
- Tu. 10 The same. Helen is so cross it is only by constant watchfulness she can be managed.
- Wed. 11 The same. Helen is better.
- Th. 12 The same. Very warm.
- Fr. 13 Worked hard all day at a pump and some other turns.
- Sat. 14 Annie and I took Helen and drove to city. It is very warm.
- Sun. 15 Wrote letters and entertained company.
- Mon. 16 Warm and dry. No school. The boys wanted to go hunting and when I gave permission they bounded away like deer. I sat and wrote my delayed letters and at 3 P.M. they get back with a sack of walnuts and a prodigious appetite. So we all sat down with grateful hearts to a good dinner after which I took a long walk and came in by the plaid light of Luna. My walk did me good and I slept better than for a week.
- Tu. 17 Rainy. Wrote some and visited friends.

- Wed. 18. Walked to the city and back, after doing a good deal of walking while there. I was very weary and wrote the remainder of the day.
- Th. 19. Weather is beautiful. Wrote letters and looked after patients.
- Fri. 20. The same.
- Sat. 21. Went to the city in the forenoon. In the afternoon wrote letters and read. The boys went to the Street Fair and came back at four o'clock disappointed. In the evening after the children retired Annie sat and read and talked till midnight. These evenings are pleasant and seductive and we forget to retire at the proper time. They have their pleasant memories and we should enjoy them while we can.
- Sun. 22. The day was bright. Wrote a long letter to Linnie Hornum, copying two of my poems for her.
- Mon. 23. A flawless day. It is my fifty-fourth birthday. I walked to city and back after doing a good deal of walking there I was very weary but after dinner I walked a long way to the North getting back after dark. I never saw a finer day. "How is passage a bright year for me?" I am not content with what I am accomplishing but hope and trust God will direct more wisely than I can plan. I hope a way may be opened for me to a nobler usefulness. Yet I must trust God and patiently wait. I may be in the peace and condition He desires but

Tu 24 Walking, writing, working a little by turns to drive away my wolf.

Wed. 25 Got the old barouche and filled corn into eight sacks and got all ready for the trip to go to the River side mill after coming from school. They thought it quite a treat and all three went off to mill. I had company in P.M. but kept a watch till I saw them returning on N. Second St. They made the trip safely and were happy as birds.

Th. 26 Did a little work and some reading and wrote letters.

Fr. 27 Walked to and from city in A.M. listing my property with some agents for sale. In P.M. my wolf still annoying me I took a walk and rambled in the bed of the stream looking at the curious stones I found there and as I often did before I brought Mother to the fountain. At night called up to go to see Mr Jas Hudson

Sat. 28 The morning was gray and misty. Annie and I went to city to hunt a stove. It soon began to rain very hard and we came back in a hard rain and got wet. I spent rest of day at reading and moving some hay to make a snug place for Sam & Isretine for the night. It is growing colder.

Sun. 29 Cool. Read the papers wrote and mailed. I am feeling badly. Looked after some patients.

Mon. 30 The same, took long walk to drive off "my wolf."

Tu 31 Walked to city and back and hunted up and bought a stove. Visited patients in P.M. Kept Helen at night while
G. & W. and Annie went to John's.

- Wed. 1 My wolf gives me no rest. I work a little and in P.M. I watch the putting up of a star in South Parlor. When up it seemed to be a good heater and we gathered about its glowing front and enjoyed it greatly. Cornell is not well & after giving him some medicine he went to bed in north parlor but was delirious in his sleep and we sat and talked and watched till near midnight.
- Th. 2 Cold rain. Went to Wawsons in the morning and not finding him left order for some pink crape myrtle roots to send to my friends by mail and then went on to where Mr Bundall was boring a well on Mr Allens place on Trinity Heights. Walked home in a cold rain, thinking on the goodness of God who gives me strength and protection still.
- Frid. 3 Writing and visiting patients.
- Sat. 4 Bright. Went to see some friends and walked to Town and back. In P.M. I raised the side of shop which was sinking. At night called to see Wm Hupp a victim of cigarette smoking. The nervous disturbance was very alarming.
- Sun. 5 Fine day. Visiting patients and reading.
- Mon. 6 Still fine weather. I work at the walk below shop and dig holes for trees.
- Tu. 7 Still digging holes and waiting on patients and writing letters.

- Wed 15 Still working with my trees. I am very tired at night. Letter from Ole Patwood asking loan of $75. Have him $15.00.
- Th. 16 Still working with trees and digging holes.
- Fr. 17 Same. Late in day sawed down the dead tree close at the S.E. corner of house and planted a hickberry tree. Worked till long after night by the light of moon to get it down to wood pile.
- Sat. 18 Spent and cut wood went to see patients and entertained company. Severe pleurisy all day.
- Sun 19 Day given to patients chiefly. Fed 'em. Warm.

Sun.

Called up twice in night to visit patients
Went to see Dorcas Penrock and Mrs Ed. Bowley
The night was all broken up.

Mon.

20 Working about home and waiting on the cows.
At night spent a miserable experience there having to work all night long under trying circumstances

Tu.

21 Came home at daylight in a drenching rain.
Took a nap and worked with trees in P.M.

Wed.

22 Digging and planting and visiting patients.

24 in Hamlet. He is perhaps the greatest Shakespearean scholar on the continent. He made many explanations and rendered many passages with exquisite skill. He considered Hamlet Shakespeare's greatest production, though Macbeth he considered the greatest drama.

The acting was very fine and his diction perfect. I enjoyed the hour and a half which was all too short and I could have listened to him two hours longer without fatigue.

After the lecture was over I waited for the three boys at Bloomenstein's drug store they having gone to the Tabernacle Lyceum. We all walked home together.

Fri.

24 Went to city on some business but spent most of day at Rosenbergs auction where I purchased two pictures, one consisting of six small portraits of Longfellow, Bryant, Whittier, Lowell, Holmes and Emerson on one page, entitled "Our Poets"

The other, a fine steel picture, "Thoughts by the Sea," which I gave Annie for a Christmas gift. It is a restful quiet tasteful piece which grows upon one as it is studied. It is a reproduction of J. M. W. Turner's painting of same name. I also purchased some books and other stuff.

3. 25. Annie and I drove to Rosenheim's & I did some shopping and came home at dinner. In the afternoon mended a shoe and helped dust a big rug.
- Sun. 26. Gloomy and dull with some rain. Wrote letters and read.
- Mon. 28. A gloomy day. Wrote a good deal & planted some trees.
- Tue. 28. Brighter. I am digging out trees from the washed bank in the field to the North for setting in the yard. When the boys come from school they join me and watching the trees home. When the tree is too heavy we place the root on the wheel-barrow and the boys hold up the top while I take the wheel-barrow and so we come home with trees several inches thick.
- Wed. 27. The First Tennessee regiment reaches home today. The schools are suspended. But the city seems to have gone mad with a senseless idle mischief. I did not go out but worked with the boys at home, planting trees. We were not so successful right and had something to show for our day.

Th. 30 Thanksgiving day. A golden beautiful day. Took the boys for a walk in the forenoon and brought back a persimmon bush which we planted in the north yard. After enjoying an excellent dinner we drove out. White's Cook took us to the Brick Church pike and then back to the city. At night Annie and Wesley and myself walked to the Tabernacle and back to hear Frank Beard in his picture talks. He is a veteran in this kind of entertainment.

Fri.

1. Transplanted trees in the forenoon. In the afternoon, Annie and I drove to city and while she attended to some shopping I attended the sale by Clerk & Master of 283 ft. of ground on west side of Lichey Av. which I purchased for $800.

Sat.

2. Took the boys and drove to the high hill beyond the old fort and dug up some forest trees which we hauled home by tying across the arms of the old barn and set out in yard. After returning I worked pretty hard today and though I slept little last night I sit up and read and chat while Annie completes Nettie's dress which takes till nearly midnight.

Sun.

3. Cold and gloomy with wind and rain. I read and write letters.

Mon.

4. Transplanting and reading. Went to city also.

Tu.

5. The same. Helped survey 283 ft of lots bought on Lichey Av.

Wed.

6. After patients and at work Transplanting.

Making preparations for winter, packing cellar windows &c. Also dug a few holes for trees. Spent an hour or two on a piece for Wesley to recite on Christmas at his request. It must be adapted to a boy and especially to this boy. With these limitations I wrote

Old Santa Claus

I do not know what I can say
About our merry Christmas day
It is so full of joy and cheer
I wish it came four times a year
Because we always have such fun
When we find out what Santa's done.
Tis strange he always comes at night
And leaves before the morning light,
But then he is so very good
That if I never understood
His cunning way I'd shut one eye
And with the other verify
The wondrous tales they tell of him
So full of love and funny rhyme.
I've watched before but let me say
Long as I watched he stayed away
And then I took another look
And watched him thru the little crack
With eyes like this. What did he do?
Why fastened them with sleepy glue:
Then did his work, and then withdrew
And never gave an interview.
Since then I never watch for him
But go to bed when day is dim
That I can get an early start
Next day so I can play my part
(You need not watch, I tell you, boys,
Because he never makes a noise;
Besides he watches too, I think,

They say he never sleeps a wink.
 And though he must be very old
 No one has ever heard him scold.
 But then I've always understood
 He's pained to hear when we're not good
 Now, boys, I'll tell my little plan.
 I mean to be a little man
 And try to please old Santa, dear,
 And get him back another year.

Fri. 8. Walked to the city in the forenoon. In the afternoon worked about house and visited patients.

Sat. 9. Made posts and laid off ground for setting fence on Lindsey Ave. Hills.

Sun. 10. Visited patients, read and wrote.

Mon. 11. Blemmy and very wet. Worked a little in shop and read in the afternoon.

12. Digging holes for trees. Very tired but very restless.

Wed. 13. Bright. Finished digging for trees on Lindsey Ave. and cut wood.

Th. 14. Wrote and cut wood and read papers. I am very lame from my leg and am afraid to walk.

- Fr. 13 Cold and windy. Went to city and walked home carrying several bundles. I was very lame and suffered all night.
- Sat. 14 Bright again. Annie and Fiddie drove and the boys all walked to town to adjust accounts with Old Sunda. I kept Helen and wrote while they were gone. Made a gate for lot on Lischev Av.
- Sun. 15 Spent day with the family as usual. Took a walk with Werty in P.M. At night Annie and I walked to the First Presb. Church to hear Dr. Vance preach on 'Patting'. The night was bright and lovely and we enjoyed the walk.
- Mon. 16 I work in shop at picture frame for Wesley's S. S. diploma.
- Tu. 17 Still working in shop.
- Wed. 18 Worked all day in shop. Went to city in P.M. and ~~made~~ worked at an oak frame for Annie to see on the picture of 'San' 'Maclaren' (Dr. John Watson).
- Th. 19 Went to see patients and worked in shop.
- Fr. 20 Went to city and visited patients and worked about house. Warm and pretty.
- Sat. 21 Rained all night and still drizzling. The boys filled up the corn while I visited a patient and when I came back I loaded in the old barouche and they all started to the Island Mills to get it ground for feed. I watched the dear boys out of sight. As they went up the slope on W. Second, Batiw was driving and Cornel and Werty were behind pushing. Called out in alarm at 10 P.M. I went to see where New Beam. Sat and helped mamma prepare for Xmas.

My Pen.

In memory of the older time,
 And thoughts too dear for words of mine,
 I bring this witness of my line,
 A common witness - yours and mine.

What tales of love its point can tell!
 What magic thoughts about it dwell!
 How oft it served us and how well,
 In all that sweet, enchanted spell.

I trust, for you, when I am gone,
 Its faithful point will still glide on,
 And some good angel come out in
 The subjects that you write upon.

May dearest thoughts flow with the ink
 As often as you give it drink,
 And every line a new a-think
 From your new thought to that I think.

For memory fond will come again,
 When time has wrought a superfluous
 And tell of happy hours - and then
 About the doctor and his pen.

Sun. 22 Cold and windy. Visited patients and read. We spent the day with the children.

Mon. 23 The same. I read and helped make arrangements for the evening entertainment that our children and Prof. Webb had planned to have here. At night Prof. Webb entertained us by E. Prof. Turner came and the children carried out their long program of song and speech after which refreshments were served and then fireworks ended the entertainment. All were happy.

Tue. 24 Cold. Spent day indoors reading.

Wed. 25 Worked in barn and shop while Annie and the boys went to town to get a case marked $4⁰⁰ sent by express from her brother at Beatty, O. I can not at present see how he expects to make money out of the gift but perhaps he does. At all events she will now be constrained to promptly make a satisfactory return.

Th. 26 Annie and I went to city and got a few things and she sent a present by express to her brother. We also stopped at the Collie Piano Co. store and bought a nice upright Grand (Schumann) Piano. She had been wanting one for a long time. It is a very pretty one if it only proves good as it looks. I have never felt able to afford it but now feel as if it were best to see that we have no benefitting and refusing the minds of the children.

Fri. 27 Working and reading. It is quite cold. We all spend our holiday snugly together.

Sat. 30. Went to city. Stopped at rocketeers and got a few things before we moved. The weather was times quite cold so that we do not get much out-door enjoyment. Yet it is dry and this is a great satisfaction.

Sun. 31. Still cold and crisp with a keen wind. In the forenoon I walked to Arrington St. C. P. Church to hear the Rev. Mr. Herrick, C. P. preach on the death of Mr. Moody. The church is quite small, curiously arranged but cozy and inviting. I was treated very kindly by the members and minister who came and introduced himself to me before the services. He seemed to be a very earnest speaker and detailed many incidents in the life of Mr. Moody whom he had known at Northfield, Mass. He said the people there all regarded him as the greatest man in the world. He regarded Mr. Moody's power as due to his simplicity, sincerity and earnestness. He regarded his death as a personal loss to every Christian in the country. He announced Mr. Moody's favorite hymn which all sang with great earnestness. After the services I came home at once expecting to write some letters in the P. M. which was all broken up by callers. After the evening work we all gathered around the fire and I told the boys a long story after which we talked of the year past and looked for that to come. They were all moved to tears and made good resolutions for the year to come. And bless their simple lives and in them strength of purpose.

Jan
1860

It is quite cold and we go into the new year cheered about our glowing stove in the South parlor. While writing a letter after breakfast I was called to go to Mr.
S. White. Some the piano purchased last week was put in the house and on my return I found the children wild with delight. They rushed in a body to meet me clasping me about the neck and kissing me repeatedly as they told me the good news.
Throughout the day they kept it - the music almost incessantly. The father repeatedly asked that she sit at the piano. I have had many misgivings about the purchase of a piano always fearing that I would need the money more for something else. However I decided to make the sacrifice, reasoning, hoping, God would make it all turn out right - as in so many other instances where I scarcely knew what to do. I should be truly pleased if its influence upon my children in making them better men and women should be at last demonstrated. I have often feared that the flock would need what this money would buy and while my early dissi-pation would make me to a great extent unprofitable while I lived, and fought out it might be much harder for them to do so. Yet God can furnish both kinds of wants with the same facility and I have left this matter in His hands, asking and hoping that he will show it in the improvement of our dear home in refining and sanctifying those who may share in its expressions of music in pity or love or usefulness. May it prove an instrument fraught with the power of bringing closer together

the little flock that gathers about it.
May God bless our home through it and may its gentle influences bless the hearts of its hearers inspiring them to something nobler, sweeter and better in life and detach them more deeply through its memories to our home.

I spent part of the afternoon in writing while the children turned each other at the piano, which they hammered most diligently.

- Tu. 2 Went to city in A.M. In P.M. visited patients. Went at night to take walk to hear Ed. Chapman.
- Wed 3 Visited patients and worked in shop.
- Th. 4 The same. I am suffering a good deal with my own throat.
- Fri 5 Writing, working in shop and visiting my patients.
- Sat. 6 Went to city and visited patients. Got a top piece for cane and on return worked a little at fitting it on a piece of hedge that is a souvenir of our home.
- Su. 7 Patients and callers took up the day so I read but little.
- Mon 8 Worked some in shop and visited patients.
- Tu 9 The same.

- Wed. 10 Rainy. Went to city. Walked home so weary I could scarcely stay up. Rested a few minutes and went to see patients.
- Th. 11 Spent day with patients and paper. Up at night and slept little.
- Fr. 12 The same. Went out near Joy to see Mr. Bushy poor.
- Sat. 13 The same. Am quite busy with patients today. My "wolf" is constantly in evidence.
- Sun. 14 Bright. Went to Busby's and visited other patients, wrote an obituary on Carrie Marie Fay for the register and entertained several tobacco friends who called. God, why do they wear a pipe?
- Mon. 15 Warm. Went to Isaahams, Leivers and Busby's. Was very tired from so much walking.
- Tu. 16 The same. At night after I got in bed was called up and walked out to Busby's. Got home at 3 in the morning.
- Wed. 17 Lowry. Went to Isaahams where I read the law to them. Also to Busby's. Worked some in shop.
- Th. 18 Wet. Worked in shop. I am suffering with bad cold. Visit some patients.
- Fr. 19 The same. Very wet.
- Sat. 20 The same. Quite hoarse.
- Sun. 21 Visited some patients and took a short-walk with the boys.

- Nov. 22. Visited patients and entertained company. Sew very weary of staying in the house all day and longed for a job of outdoor work. Late in P.M. went with W. & L. to town to purchase books for them to take to High School tomorrow.
23. The dear boys had graduated from the Caldwell Grammar School with excellent records. Gatewood's Average was 94 leading his class by 7. Corbels was 83 and as he is not eleven and few in his class reached that figure his record is very satisfactory. There is quite a deal of envy shown toward the doctors Yankee boys. Wesley also led his class with a record of 86. Many people speak of the brightness of our boys in school and this pleases me more than to feel they fed from a silver spoon. Our walk was long and I was lame but enjoyed it and when I reached home I had to go back to Mr. Graham's at the top of the hill and soon as I got back I found Mr. Davis waiting at the gate. I gave him medicine and was called off at once to go to Trinity Heights to see Mr. Boguskie. Called also at Burtys. It was late when I returned but I sat down contented and enjoyed the lunch Annie had prepared for me. We sat as usual and talked for some time before retiring. Now knowing the morning duties call for early rising we enjoy then quiet chats by the evening fire so much we seldom retire earlier than 10 P.M. often as late as 11 P.M.
24. 23. Wrote letters while Annie went to the depot with Mrs. Pennock. In afternoon visited patients and worked in shop. Mr. Wolf is in evidence all the time. To dull his fangs I select some physical exercise of a light nature which will keep the mind from getting too much confined. Just now

I am making a cane out of a difficult piece of wood.

Mon.

24. I had barely commenced work in the shop when I was called to go back to Trinity Heights to see Mr. Busby's daughter who was suffering with diphtheria. It was cold and windy and taking the saw along I worked for a little while in the hedge below his house at Trinity - making out some pieces for a trellis. On returning I had to walk back to the end of the Linchey car line to see Mrs. Sevier, and from there I walked to 315 Josephine St. and thence home. After a late dinner I returned to my tinkering in the shop.

Tue.

25. Wrote letters and worked in shop.

Wed.

26. Writing, reading and working in shop. Late in afternoon I cut and carried a large hedge tree from Vanghan St. It is quite cold but dry and breezy. At night Annie and I walked to the Vine St. Temple to hear Rabbi Lammthal lecture on the presence of the Jew in all the departments of life. He characterized him as the guest of God. We walked back enjoying the crisp air and quiet walk together. After returning we sat and talked till near midnight.

Sat.

27. Bright and frosty. We went to hauling out manure in a little wagon borrowed from Mr. Cundali. The three boys and my self attacked it on all sides and though we got a late start by three o'clock we had it all scattered on the ground. Though we had little time we enjoyed the moral un-play ment which was quite new to the boys. When the faithful mare would start with a necessarily sudden effort on the 'sloughed' ground Waterwood and Cornel would suddenly take a header backwards into the 'mellon' in earth. After they had repeated this experience a few times they started to prepare for the sudden fall. However they learned to understand inertia. However they learned a little natural philosophy by these repeated falls. Wesley waited complacently along and thus missed all the sport which the others got out of the 'grounding' party. I to in P.M. went with Prof. Webb to the city. In the place where the market-house I saw near 1000 dead robins which had been secured by approaching the perch with a lantern which blinded the birds while the mercenary slayer knocked them on the head with a stick. It was a shocking sight. They were sold for 35¢ per dozen. Prof. Webb requested me to write an article for the Banner on this indiscriminate slaughter. This I promised to do. We came home before sunset and taking my ax I chopped stove wood till dark, enjoying the cold crisp air and the exercise very much. In the evening by the bright fire after the children had retired I ate the lunch which Annie had brought in and read the papers till nearly 11 o'clock.

Jan. 28. Cold with drifting snow. Wrote the article for Banner on Robin Slaughter, read the papers and played with Helen who seemed to think she had a latent talent on mus. time.

my business. Took a walk late in day with Grand L. that I might give them an outing and tell them a "Wilton story."

Mon 29

Quite cold and windy. I kept pretty close to the fire and read most of day, but for the necessity of going out and chopping my brush awhile for exercise.

Tue. 30

Wed. 31

Work in shop and at wood and read by turns.

Feb.

Th. 1

Cold but bright. Read and worked in shop till dinner and then sat down and ate a lunch and drank a cup of coffee Annie had thoughtfully provided before my starting, then I did not feel the need of it. Then walked over the dusty sidewalks to city and after going to the bank I hurried on to the Vendôme to get a ticket for the matinee performance of the Sign of the Cross. It was finely staged and well played, but there was too much difference between the best and worst of the players. Chas. Dalton, the star of the troupe made a typical Roman officer and as Marcus Sulpicius was a great attraction. He is a man of fine presence, magnificent voice, heroic physique and imperial bearing. There is a noble and refreshing purity in his play, that contrasts painfully with the flagrant voluptuousness and coarse sensuality of the Roman women that are numerous and prominent in the play. The silent change that manifests itself

Marcus as he proceeds, in making love to Mercia is a striking tribute to refinement and Christian gentleness and charity. His pleading upon Nero for revocation of his cruel decree that Mercia be thrown to the lions is a masterpiece of earnest argument, noble indignation and fearless daring. His final conversion to Christianity and his prompt decision to go with Mercia to death among the lions and his calm display of Christian courage and fortitude were portrayed in a wonderful manner. It is a fine plan and though in my judgment, not nicely balanced, it is still a strong exposition of a critical period and of the triumph of the doctrine of the Galilean over a sensual and brutal barbarism. It was received well by a protestant home and enjoyed deeply by all who loved the pure supremacy of the Christian civilization. It was a success few will seriously question. The boys are English.

I walked home after stopping to get Helen her candy, and some cam-mountaining from a boy who keeps a shop with his father in the basement of the Maxwell House. It was growing dark when I reached the street and I hastened on enjoying the walk in the keen bracing air and strange to say, felt no weariness on reaching home. I then went to see Mrs. Sevier on Litchey Av. and on returning sat by the fire after the boys had retired and ate the tasteful supper Annie had prepared (used blower) while I discussed and explained the play. The walk was not so wearisome as I might have thought.

Feb. 12. I worked in the shop in the forenoon and the afternoon took the boys and cut down the eastern half of the large beech which stood at the wood pile. It had been split in other days by storm to the ground and was decaying so badly I thought most prudent to take it down. It was a tiresome job but was successfully completed at sunset.

Feb. 13. In the morning the boys went to mill with Sam Anne and Gundall's little wagon. All three enjoyed it so much previously that I let all go again and they all mounted the little old wagon and seated on the sacks drove away as happy as larks on a wheat shock. While they were gone I worked hard at my chest and had it mostly erected up when they returned. After unloading the feed they joined me in the work till dinner was ready after which they drove out to Waterwood avenue while Kettie and I walked across and after visiting Mrs. Busby we all hurriedly attacked the thimble budge secured four sprangled trunks which we put in and while Wesley and I walked home Kettie and Walter who had become trotted rapidly on ahead and were waiting for us when we got home. I have done an unusual amount of hard work today and feel quite sore tonight, but after eating half a minor pie and drinking some nice coffee I am by way of feeling in the bright glow of lamp light and the papered shades with lantern light.

Feb. I was more content than thousands who attempt to enjoy without earning. I believe if I could stand hard and continuous work in the woods free from the frets and cares of professional and commercial life I should grow stronger in body and habits in mind. Of one thing I am more and more convinced each day and that is, that holiness and contentment for me at least must be found in simplicity of life.

Sun. 4. It is cloudy and some rain has fallen. Spend most of the day on my correspondence and journals.

Mon. 5. It is damp and disagreeable. I work in shop and read.

Tu. 6. Very wet. The same.

Wed. 7. I look after my correspondence, read and work a little. Helped Prof. Will on an article he was preparing for the press.

Th. 8. I can do little but try to work some out doors.

Fri. 9. Hunted some patients and the journals continued the note of our house at intervals throughout the day. Just after dark received a telegram from J. C. Morrison, San Diego, Cal. asking me to telegraph a prescription to him for his sick wife. This compelled me to go to the city and I did so writing little notes. But and talked and read till near midnight.

Sat. 10. The day was bright and I resumed my out-door work, planting out half a dozen trees, chopping some wood and calling on Mrs. Wiles to invite her to investigate our property. She is to come Monday. This is perhaps the most ominous thing we have contemplated since we resided here.
I approach it with some forebodings with much distrust of my ability at this time of life to recast the relations of a home, especially one so pleasant & so so intimately associated with every member of our household in its upbuilding & pleasant history. What is best to do I can not tell. Personally I should much prefer to leave the matter entirely to the decision of the family, or to my wife.
Yet it is a responsibility I should have and have no real right to ignore this thing is certain. Whatever may be the result of it it is conscientiously planned for them. It may be a great mistake. It may come to a thunder, but I feel that I should trust that and do what seems best for all. He has always been with me to bless me even when I was dissatisfied with his blessings. If I had youth & strength as I had ten years ago I would have little hesitation in attacking any problem of this kind. With a perfect trust in God I should not hesitate now. I know how deeply all are attached to the home & its environment and though I have been associated with more features of its construction than any of them and my attachments more numerous perhaps still it is their's too I think.

to snob. Yet they are young with greater degree of adaptability and it might be possible that this is a better time for them to make the change than later.

Some elements of doubt also cling about the future of their surroundings here which one must not wholly ignore.

Taken all in all it is a matter of great solicitude to me on account of those I love. Let me renew again my trust in God and try to be content with the solution which he has always ready.
Whatever may be the result I hope it will be better for my family in way I cannot further mention. I have felt at one time to make a fair figure of them contentedly contemplate its acceptance or rejection. I do not shut my eyes to the fact that many new and trying problems will arise to complicate the situation here when I am removed from it and my family are left to confront it alone.

After discussing this matter till a late hour at night I retired with a heavy burden upon my mind and fell into a deep sleep usually deep for me from which I was awakened by a call to go to the Chapel for the service. Here I was delayed till after the service in the morning before I began to slumber.

which her husband proposes to buy if we can agree on a price. She did not come on, we did not feel disappointed. We leave it all with her and wait. I am feeling very badly and long for sunny weather again. I tried to work some in shop but it was so cold and damp I could not enjoy it. In regard to selling our home the children seem excitedly opposed to it.

In A.M. wrote an article to be published in Banner on the cow law which gives the owner of the vagrant cow a patent right on plunder. It may be considered too vigorous for the paper.

matinee - James O'Neil appeared in the three "Ambascieri". I had previously seen Salvini in same play though this was a new version. It is considered more elaborate & distinctly representative of the spirit of James, celebrated fiction upon which it is built. It would be impossible to draw a just comparison between Salvini and O'Neil. They are so widely different and the plays are not more unlike. O'Neil is the personification of cultured grace and his work shows exquisite care. The piece was magnificently staged and the support admirable. While this version of the play exhibits the rank coarseness and domestic impudicity with the consequent duplicity which appears to have characterized the French court at that time it is not so ugly dramatic as the former day. I think neither of these productions would fit in well into the other plays being seen.

O'Neil represents the commercial and expitable Gaul most accurately; Salvini the stormy clashing and unrelenting fierceness of the heroic Gascon. O'Neil is most graceful, most polite. Salvini most soldier-like in bearing, spirit and execution. I do not think O'Neil capable of the thrilling work set in which Salvini stood unrivalled. This same however does not belong to this version. Both versions are superior to Salvini's. Taken all in all I think O'Neil is one of the most graceful, finished and careful players on the stage. The time was not unenjoyable. I will go some days of seeing dramatic yet be well to good entertainment.

very cold he might not. After the play on "John Bull, Sandy 'ed Pax." His poor voice French accent, combined with the large building rendered it a most unsatisfactory lecture. He is a typical Frenchman and does not seem to be reminded of his importance.

Tue.

2. My rheumatism has abated sufficiently for me to get about a little better and I can stand to read a little more which makes the time much more tolerable.

Sat.

3. Walked to the city and back. Called to see Mr. Wiles who desired me to give him a price on our home. I gave him the price and he took four days to consider it. We arrived at the conclusion to name this price after many careful discussions. We are perfectly delighted with our home but considering its present and future necessities have concluded it would be wiser to leave these tasks to other hands. Somehow I am feeling that I shall have only pleasant memories of the place and will envy its future growth and beauty in other hands. Of course we will miss its advantages immensely but I hope we are all sensible enough to recognize that Success is not wholly dependent upon location. I have often asked God to direct us in this matter and somehow feel that come what will He will direct us if we trust Him and all will be for the best.

Sun.

1. Warm. Read papers and took a walk with Annie. We went to our lot on Friday and talked of the possibility of building there. I am somewhat lame.

Sat. 17 Clara and Wesley and I walked to the Tabernacle to hear Sam Sweet. He is a kinder brighter and more scholarly man than Sam Jones. After the services we all walked home.

Sun. 18 Rained all day, Sat. M. I went to 1620 N. High St. to see a poor consumptive Mrs. Eva Parkhurst. On my return I had several patients to visit and this took all P.M. in the eve.

Mon. 19 Still wet. Spent the day with patients and books and papers, working a good part of the time in the shop.

Baxter should prefer to establish their reputation with such disagreeable productions while their ability would enable them to write something nobler in kind to understand. I was glad to find later that my boys were not greatly pleased with it. After the play the came home and I proceeded to a drug-store to write a prescription for a Mr. Parkhurst who was in waiting at the theater door having followed me from my house. I then went to freight depot and got a box of purple sugar which had been sent me from Ellwood, by Mr. Remond. It weighed 45 lbs. but I took it on my shoulder and carried it to the street-car and came in home at dark, got my supper, went to Mr. Stiles and from there to the corner of Foster and 2nd where I joined Charlie and Wesley and we all walked to the Tabernacle to hear Dr. A. A. Willits lecture on penmanship. It was a bright cheerful, optimistic presentation of life given in a sunny, pleasant and plain manner. Charlie and I enjoyed it as much as Wesley did his sleep which lasted from beginning to end. Then we all walked home. We all enjoyed the lecture on account of its pleasant incidents, anecdotes and applications to the various phases of life.

Tue.

23. Busy with patients most of day but did a little work in shop.

Sat.

24. The day was broken and divided between calls of patients and work at home.

7 Mar.

At night Annie and I walked to the Vaudeville to see "The Children of the Ghetto". It was finely staged and perfectly executed. It would be difficult to state who played best among so many excellent performers. Milton Sunkoff in the role of "Rab" Shumacher gave a presentation of the Jewish Rabbi especially clear and convincing. His rendition of the spirit of the Jewish law seemed to permeate everything connected with it. The simplicity of his household - his life, his teachings, and most fatherliness and patriarchal dignity was entirely consistent with the sublime supremacy of the Jewish law. The play was strong in its simplicity and naturalness and abounded in incident and variety at once charming and strikingly strong. The old servant woman was typical of her class and exhibited a tongue kindheartedness in strong contrast with her plain but dominant individuality. The maternal brother was ingenious, plausible and selfish to heartlessness. One could not help fervently approving the indignant linguist exhibited by one of his victims who accidentally meets him with an expression never to be forgotten for its naive, frank and passionate protest - "Go away, Sugarman". The role representing the Rabbi's daughter was sustained in a sweet and perfect manner throughout, exhibiting the characteristic obedience of the Jewish child to their parents' wishes - regard to their respect and ages. Her tender loyalty and attachment to her parents bore the most tremendous strain till one would be tempted to ask with her "Father is not our religion".

could?" Among the players was a child of 13 whom Jas. H. Kearns pronounced the finest performer he has ever seen among children. She is a daughter of Judge Tallferris of New York but so expertly did she play that her manner needs either pedigree nor ancestry.

Already she exhibits a mature individuality, a perfect conception of her role and a naturalness and accuracy of portrayal which seems more like a spontaneous and unconscious exhibition than a painstaking and perfected imitation. Already she is the governable empress of mimicry. Such ability warrants the prediction that she must soon stand in the forefront of the world's greatest players. "Hojiska" plays "Lady Macbeth" with no more faultless precision and absence of self-consciousness than this bright-eyed and demure little maiden plays her part in the "Children of thehetto". It is an exquisite exhibition of different phases of Jewish life in London and in its people, variety and faithful delineation of custom and respect for Jewish law leaves nothing to be desired. So accurately is the representation of William Lacker in "Het" Shemuel that he defies anyone to prove that the player is not an old man. However great his reputation may be in other roles he ranks in this one with Jefferson in Rip Van Winkle or Harde in Richard Third. We walked home discussing the play.

Sun. 26. Rainy and dismal. I was kept busy most of the day visiting patients and submitting to interruptions.

Mon. 26. Sunny with a disagreeable wind. I attempted to complete my garden fence though quite lame. Continually interruptions compelled me to hurry and work at great disadvantage. My pain grew worse but I determined to finish. I completed the fence at sunset and with agonizing tortures walked to Mrs. Parley's in forenoon. When I returned I was suffering intensely. The pain affected me breathing and caused to search for untried places throughout my body. I lay down before the fire and under the patient application of Annie's massage the pain partially subsided and I retired at the usual time. To pass a night in which it seemed to be for the most part half asleep to cough and motion, half awake to burning pain and restless devouring torture. The pain had made me such a coward that I dreaded to move when worn out both in patience and strength from maintaining a given position with sufficient muscular tension to prevent spasmodic exacerbations of torture. However I lay and thanked God it was not worse and days are bright and over the night away.

Tu. 27. I arose weary and racked with pain. I dressed and tried various position for relief.

Mar. 7. About ten o'clock took another treatment by massage, tried to read and do little things that might temporarily distract my attention from the thousand tangles of fiery lustre that played with flame-like fury through my frame. For awhile I carved the handle of one of my swords, then broke for a couple of days while I lay on my back. Then I commenced half a dozen that I had previously made. On the day more on it slowly yielded but left me feeling very weaker rather did not leave me but subsided so that I could walk about slowly by being very circumspect.

Wed. 28. Still suffering and dividing my time as best I may. I read a little and rest occasionally to my workbench where I can hold the tiger and the wolf at greatest dread. Upon the whole I am gaining a little though existing in torture and dread.

Th. 29. The same.

Fri. 30. Still gaining and able to spend an hour or two writing.

Sat. 31. Cold in the morning with white frost and sharp air. The imperfections of my patients for several days were capped this morning by a more earnest appeal and I responded by walking to see Mr. Hickerson and Maria Moore at the corner of Hancock & Lacey where I waited till Annie & little Helen came in the buggy and took me up. We drove to the city and did some shopping and returned in time to be unconfortably dragged about to treat insignificant ailments till four o'clock. Then worked in shop till sunset, except that I walked to Mr. Webb's and delivered a case I had made for him. In the evening I felt better and after the remainder had retired I read until 11 P.M.

Sun.

1. A bright morning. Little Helen takes her first trip to Sunday school. I sit by and while Annie does up the morning work. The condition is the usual one except that we miss little Helen with her prattle and imaginary plays. The remainder of the day was spent with callers.

Mon.

2. I am somewhat lame but work in shop and about the yard to test my ability to go to the London with Annie tonight to see the "Little Minister". When night came I had found by some visits I made to patients that I was going to be able to make the trip and we proceeded in our favorite way - on foot as the evening was fine. We got there in good time and enjoyed the play which proved to be however inconsistent with the story upon which it was founded. I can not see why the writer of this play should have made the reputation of this production of Currier tributary to pure comedy. While it abounds in incidents not altogether humorous or even pathetic it was permeated with light comedy that one who had given careful attention to the narrative could not help regretting its selection for comedy. It was only fairly played though a few of the actors did quite well. Perhaps the best was the impersonator of Rob Donn whose accent was more distinctly Scotch though his role was very much at variance with that laid down by Barrie. The gipsy was poorly impersonated but taken all in all we enjoyed the play, while regretting its lack of faithfulness to the text. Something immensely better than this might easily be produced consistent with the original and more careful in its effects. We walked home as usual discussing the varied features of the production.

5. The same. In the afternoon Mr. Pennock and daughter Margaret, Mrs. Walter Pennock and Edward and Mary Kelly came and spent a couple of hours and took supper with us, after which we left the children to do up the evening work and Annie and I took the car for the Vendome to see Joseph Jefferson in the "Rivals." When we reached the building an hour and a half before the play a long line had already formed from the office half way to the street. We took our places in line and at a quarter to seven moved to the office, procured tickets and joined in the hasty rush for the gallery, where prompt good seats were secured for the play to begin. As usual this was late, but the audience was good-natured and hilarious. At last the curtain rose and the great masterpiece of Sheridan was ushered in. To give additional interest to this play Jefferson has added a great variety of by-plays all consistent with the character of it while at the same time they impart to the character of Ceres interesting qualities not found in the original. In this respect Jefferson has shown himself quite as much the child of genius as in the more familiar Rip Van Winkle. These by-plays are opportunities, happiness and provocation of mirth. It would be difficult to say in what particular Jefferson excels. He is accurate, painstaking, careful and the very soul of comedy. One can say of his playing that no play suffers from his thorough though peculiar treatment. This can be said of few actors. There is always a quaint innocent humor in his grotesque methods which enhances the interest of the play beyond calculation. He is always fresh, unassuming and unconscious and it would be almost impossible for the most cynical to resist the spirit of contagious mirth of an innocent, quiet nature which he imparts to the audience. His attitudes, his movements, but particularly his methods of speech more than his language convey an indescribable drollery and a naive innocence that is irresistible. He has succeeded in making a subordinate character in this masterpiece rank in im-perform with the chief character in great plays.

 This alone shows ability of a superior order.
 Perhaps no public player has saved so many people to laugh and forget the cares of life as Jo. Jefferson. He has played comedy on a higher plane than he found it while attempting to it many desirable features wholly novel and original. There is but one Jo. Jefferson. He was ably assisted by his two sons Jo. Jr. who took the role of "Sir Lucius O. Triggs" and "Hillie" who acquitted himself creditably in that of "Ray". The play was first staged by him it continued by one Jo. Jefferson of Ripston N. H. where it was not marred by any positively weak support. It was nearly eleven o'clock when it ended but no one had grown impatient. We had enjoyed it thoroughly and walked home laughing at the humorous presentation of what had always seemed to me a painless comedy. Could Sheridan behold Jefferson's production he might wonder what had become of his chief character but would surely be pleased with the genuine one represented by Mr. Davis.
 As Jefferson is seventy one it is doubtful if we see him again. In answer to a certain call he appeared and spoke at some length stating that he had played here fifty-six years ago. Our forgetfulness in listening to him that he is seventy one years old. I had hoped that Annie & I would have the joint privilege of seeing him in the "Cricket on the Heath", where as Cold Plumes
 I still feel that this thing of comedy has reached his highest point. Whatever his role he is the King - the incomparable master of comedy, the reigning ruler of every heart in his audience and the greatest hero of the foot-lights. the country has yet seen. With Rips Van Winkle let us say "May he live long and prosper."

Apr.

Fri.

6. Attended patients in the forenoon. In the afternoon went with Mr. Pennock to Longmoss and walked thence to see Mrs. Smith on Trinity Heights, came home very weary with increasing lameness.

It was well staged and fairly presented and gave such satisfaction that the plays advertised for next week were all set aside for this and the people will get another whole week to study and enjoy it. - Mon. 7 Worked at taking up drain pipes till 4 P.M. and then went with Earnest Curtis to see Mrs Lorange W. Powers 7 miles. It was a hard trip but when I saw how they were situated I thanked God for my blessings. Came back by car from Wheatland N.J. At Transfer Station Mrs Lewis A Powell gave me tickets to Dr Wyeth's address on N.B. Road.

May

I telephoned Annie to meet me at Blomelins and waited till she came. We walked home as it was breezy and moonlit. The lecture was full of extraordinary assertions in regard to Forrest - too much panegyric. The faultless man is a curiosity and I do not believe in excessive hero worship. Dr. H. was assistant demonstrator of Anatomy at Bellevue Hospital Medical College when I was a student there. His voice is the same. I regard him as a fine surgeon whose imagination in regard to Forrest has been consciously heated. Forrest was undoubtedly one of the phenomenal products of the war but Fort Pillow remains in the mind of the calm reader as the scene of a shameful use and abuse of opportunity to be humane.

Sun.

8 Drove to city in A.M. Returned and visited Mrs Harrison and later Mrs Irvin Hudson whom I am called on to treat. It was near dark when I got home and I heard Helen's sleepy cry up stairs when Charlie was trying to get her asleep. I went up took her on the "tushie" (cushion) and told her stories and her laugh came soon to reward me. Then she asked the "Apple Tree" song and as I hummed it she fell asleep. I put her in bed thanking God for her sweet little life and asking Him to bless it with carefulness, sweetness and love. The rest all went to Webb's and I am writing alone having read till weary. God bless them all.

Wed.

9 Quite cool with a stiff North wind. I set about early and spent a very busy day in garden at drain pipes and wood pile. I found the very brick daisy work quite well and retired late & pretty tired. Thank God for these days.

Th. 10

A ideal day - not a cloud - cool - calm and sunny. This will long be remembered here as Dewy day. In the morning, I went over to do some business but failing to see the person who appointed the hour I went to transfer station and waited till Annie and the little girls came and we went to Centennial Park where we met the boys who had walked out. It was 12:30 P.M. and we went to a seat under the shade of the trees and ate our lunch and then went to the Auditorium to hear Brooks' Marine Band after which we all went to the Club House and saw Dewy review the Flower Parade. He enjoyed it very much from the way he kept clapping his hands so heartily it could be heard one hundred yards away. His wife kept waving to the parade as they passed.

Many unique decorations were shown and the vehicles were swathed in flowers of many hues but the yellow predominated.

Helen had her first street car ride today and she seemed wild with enjoyment. About 3 P.M. she tired out and slept in my arms for an hour and then enjoyed the parade. We came home shortly before sunset and the tired boys soon came and did the work and retired requesting to be awakened at 10 P.M. to see the fireworks. Of course they slept all night. I was very tired but pleased to see the rest so happy tho I do not get deeply enthused over empty displays which I have seen so often.

Mr. J. A. Binkley called just when I was getting ready to go to the city. As he could not pay me I extended his account. After waiting on him I went with Mr. Turner to the city and he paid me his claim in full and released my lien upon his property, as he had made another loan to release this and as I had always been patient and exacted neither the principle nor interest when he could not meet it I doubt the wisdom of his procedure. After walking about a good deal and becoming quite weary I came home by car. I spent the afternoon in reading and helping to bait the coos.

Swift Years

How swift the years are flying past!
 How much to do! how little done
 I pause to count the ones that passed,
 And dream of those that may not come.
 What have I done to bless those years
 So full of love - so free from care;
 So full of smiles - so free from tears,
 I fain would pause and linger there.

I see them like a golden dream
 Whose every change was but more fair,
 Tho sweeping like a mountain stream Whose banks bore flowers every where.
 They teemed with joy; dear, happy years
 That would not stay. Alas! the care
 The present fret - the future fears
 Are coming silver in my hair.

How swift the years! how many yet
 Are left for duties scarcely begun?
 How have I lived? Can I forget
 The duties I have left undone?
 Forgive my waste of golden hours,
 Inspire my heart with purpose pure,
 Let duty's thorns and duty's flowers
 Crown my life and make it pure.

- Sun. 20. Still quite cool. Spent the day at reading and entertaining patients.
- Mon. 21 Cool. Attended some patients, wrote letters and grazed the cows in yard and worked in shop at my last cane which consists of two ears of corn carved out with a pocket knife for a head and joined at right angles at the butt end. The work grew curious in this way and when "my wolf" bothered me I cut out a cane head of corn design making a part of husk still partially conceal the protruding ear. At the juncture a cuboidal block bears four pearl insertions or sets and in the hollow head is a dedication and our family record &c.

- Sun. 27 Back to W. J. Hudson's in A.M. In P.M. entertained company. The Hudson came with boys from Sunday School and played most of P.M.
- Mon. 28 A dreamy day. The sun was almost wholly eclipsed at 7.43 this A.M. and attracted much interest. I was in no sense dark but a strange weird light spread over everything. I worked in garden and wrote letters and attended the sick.
- Tu. 29 Drizzly. Work about yard and train vines and set out plants.
- Wed 30 Still working in garden and visiting sick. At night Arnie read John Halifax Gentleman to me till 10.30 P.M. and then I retired to listen much of night to the quiet prattle of a gentle rain.
- Th. 31 Visited patients and worked in shop. Rained gently all P.M. I am feeling better thank God.

- Th. 1 I made a horizontal bar for the children & put it in the South yard. Visited Mr. Sixth and at night sat till 11:15 listening to my dear wife reading John Halifax. Lay down and was just falling asleep when I was called out to go to W.L. Scott's. Got back at 1:05 in morning.
- Sat. 2 Showery. I write and work about yard while Annie and L. go to city. In P.M. rained.
- Sun. 3 Showery. I write some and read the papers.
- Mon. 4 Still rainy. Work in shop and about the yard.
- Tu. 5 The same. A letter from Linnie R. Gormley tells of the ruin of their fortunes by her husband's dissipation. Poor woman! Her money was the main of her life.
- Wed. 6 Working with my vines and trees and in shop making a ladder for upper veranda work.
- Th. 7 I went to city and at the Fourth Nat. Bank developed a plan to stop a hundred dollars due me which I claim to collect from R. Gormley and deliver to his wife. It rained very hard. In P.M. I wrote his wife at some length on the situation.
- Fr. 8 I worked in shop and yard in A.M. In P.M. I went to Mr. Joy and paid for trees he had planted for me on his property.
- Sat. 9 I lay for an hour after watering & weeding in the trays from the flowering plants in yard. It was divine. I was calm and thankful and after breakfast I drove with friend to city and

- Sat. 9 Contracted for gas. After a good deal of running about we came home and I fitted violin keys and bridge. Then worked in shop till dinner at 3 P.M. Worked a little in garden in eve.
- Sun. 10 Weather clear. Went to see Mrs. M. L. Hudson in morning. Spent part of day reading the Memoirs of P. P. Bliss. Company in eve kept us all busy.
- Mon. 11 Showery. I work in shop and with vines and write letters.
- Tu. 12 The same.
- Wed. 13 Went to city and wrote letters.
- Th. 14 Attended some sick and worked in yard.
- Fr. 15 Went to city to see about Lillian R. Cronley's affairs and after discussing wrote her a long letter detailing my own plan and the lawyer's plan to try to recover her property. Also attended some sick.
- Sat. 16 Went by car in A.M. to see Hugh 'Hoty' Ross' children and then came home in time to see a very heavy rain that stopped the men from work who were putting in gas pipe and stove.
- Sun. 17 Hot. Went several times to see John D. Shaps' sick child - also to B. L. Foster's. Herded cows in yard for some hours and read a little as I could.
- Mon. 18 Cool and showery. Finished putting in gas and worked about house and visited a few sick folks. I came suffering with a gathering on hand.

Tu 19 Worked in garden and yard. Suffer a good deal. Still I am thankful to God for many blessings.

Wed 20 The same. Attended some patients. Sent boys to mill.

Th. 21 Very cool and breezy. The boys went to S. I. picnic at Hygia Springs and I stayed with Annie and the little girls. It seems so quiet when they are gone. I am growing impatient with myself and feel that I should be doing more good in the world. May God direct me. I often think I ought to try to write something but feel unequal to the task my heart assigns.

Fr. 22 Dull and rainy. Annie & Watson go to city and I write and work in library. I am waiting trustfully for God to direct me in some useful work.

Sat. 23 Still rainy. I attend some patients and work in shop. I am still longing for some useful work that will improve benefit and strengthen me.

Sun. 24 Raining in A. M. A dull listless day in which I seem to accomplish little.

Mon. 25 Showery still. I work in shop and read.

Tu. 26 The same

Wed. 27 The wet weather continues. It has rained every day but two during this whole month. Much complaint is heard about the wet. We are not suffering much altho the weeds &c. getting quite troublesome in places. Still 1900.

June thing is growing so I thank God for the rain. It makes more work for Annie and thus I regret as she is so overtasked all the time. Still she seems to delight in any work that adorns or beautifies our home. God bless her - she is so much more useful than I.

Th. 28 Very sultry. The air is hot and steamy. I work in shop and train my vines. Near night a hard storm gathered and torrents of water drenched the wet earth. The ground about the barn and in the bottom looked like a great river. I never saw the stream so high. It rained far into the night.

Fr. 29 Hot. I help the boys in preparing speeches for their Fourth of July celebration and read and train my vines.

Sat. 30 The same.

June.
Sun. 1 Hot. Read most of day. At night went with Annie to First Pres. Church to hear Mr Hodge lecture on the Holy Land. We walked home enjoying the trip.

Mon. 2 Worked in garden and entertained callers all A.M. Wrote in P.M.

Tu. 3 Attended my calls and spent part of day helping entertain Mrs Gornley & Mabel who are here from Stockport. She looks shockingly bug-eyed.

Weed. 4 The boys are busy preparing for P.M. exercises at Prof. Wilks. I read most of day and at night

God Bless the Fourth.

For "Counsel"

God bless the Fourth! let all the nation shout
 And mingle song and prayer devout Whence our banners float. Still let our theme
 Be Liberty. Let tyrants hear our eagle scream
 Of Liberty. Let soldiers strive and statesmen scheme
 For Liberty. Let orators and poets dream
 Of Liberty. Let all the world look up and see
 The proved old flag that makes men free.

God bless the Fourth with all its olden story
 Of blood-bought triumph and of splendid glory
 Its thrilling martial strains - the deep-toned war
 Of cannon echoing from shore to shore
 Its gay and flaunting flag without a stain Inspires our hearts on every land and main Fair flag of hope! on every land and sea
 May Heaven bless and keep you free.

- July I keep Helen while Annie and the rest with Mrs. Gentry and Mabel attend the exercises.
 They get back near midnight and report an enjoyable occasion and that the boys do well both in declamation and original oration.
- Th. 5 Still at home entertaining our visitors.
 I am getting disgusted at the utter lack of gratitude which my time, labor and money has received. I gave her a check for $50.
 of hard earned money (the same being part of check received two years ago for going twice to Ohio and doing two operations on her cold feet.) She received it in a perfunctory way and never uttered a word of gratitude or thanks.
- Fr. 6 Still keeping entertain. Can do nothing else.
- Sat. 7 The same. Annie is overworking and trying to make her guest have a pleasant time by taking her to Glendale or for drive but the return is followed by some coarse criticism. I am getting deeply disgusted.
- Sun. 8 Mrs. G. wanted
 Annie to go to Catholic Church with her and she did. In P.M. she took her for a drive. I held the fort. I am longing for the old time quiet.
- Mon. 9 Got up early and dug holes and staked trees till breakfast. I wrote a check for the last Fifty Dollars due me on the operation on Mabel's feet and gave it to the mother who said with a satisfied grin
 "I don't like to accept this" She evidently was pleased at the gain. Later I found she had been contemplating it. I grow more and more disgusted. She holds all my work and worry and life in so cheap and expects so much of me without even a sign of gratitude. I surely have not been a load to my friends and when they want money or service for nothing they find me. All day long entertaining.

Tue.

10

Went in A.M. to W. Nashville to see Hugh Notgrass. In P.M. entertaining our guests who grows more selfish. She left at sunset this eve I almost regret that I have tried to help her recover a part of her property. She is so selfish, so silly, so ungrateful.

Wed.

11

We are alone again and resume our old customs and enjoyments. I work about as I see fit among the trees and vines. Annie washes the clothes and then goes away thing lies down and takes a long needed sleep and rest. The boys wash up the dishes and then I play ball with them for an hour.

Th.

12

Worked very hard at digging potatoes. When done I was drenched with sweat and so tired I could sleep but little.

Fri.

13

I work a little. I do not feel well. The boys took Gentie to Mr Volney L. Smiths. He had bought her and when they started with the faithful old cow they all cried. She had been so identified with their lives they could hardly give her up. They took her out more gently than ever before and led her away sorrowfully stopping at each shade tree on the road to let her rest. Dear boys, I hope your hearts will always be as tender. They returned late in P.M. At night when I went down for milking he was sitting violently. When asked the cause he said Oh I miss Gentle so much. He told me they all three bade her good by when they left her.

July

I walked all the way and was too tired to do anything rest of day but kept going.

Wed. 25 Rainy. Write and read.

Th. 26 The same. Some patients demand part of my time.

Wed. 27 Went to see Mrs W. J. Hudson & got back at noon. Worked rest of day in shop.

Sat. 28 Rainy. Work in shop and read and teach the boys.

Sun. 29 I spend the day at writing & reading except that in P.M. Annie and I walked out past Jo's and home past Trinity Church.

Mon. 30 Warm. I work some and read while Annie washes.

Tu. 31 Visit Mary Smith on Trinity, Hight and work about yard.

Aug. 1 We all go to Ellendale and enjoy the day. Before starting, I walked out to Smith and back. It was an ideal day and while the children rode the flying jenny or ran about Annie dear patients, Annie read to me out of Other Things being Equal. We had a fine breezy ride homeward at sunset.

Th. 2 Annie and I went to City in A.M. and tried to get a suit of clothes for me. It was a hard task and the two suits she had to return one in the P.M. owing to the salesman's blunder. I drove to see Mrs Smith. I am suffering with an acute pleuritic pain that resists my will.

- Fr. 3 Writing letters and reading my journals.
My pain is very persistent. Prof. Turner was here for several hours having now given him is examining a paper he is writing.
- Sat. 4 I took a long trip on foot before breakfast to see Mr. Roper. After breakfast went to Smith Hills to see Miss Maria Smith. In P.M. to see Mrs Roper and worked about yard.
- Sun. 5 Nearly all day at Ropers or going and coming. It is very hot. I also visited Mrs Summers and waited on some patients at home.
- Mon. 6 Visited Mrs Roper and worked about home. Hot.
- Tu. 7 Very hot. Work and read.
- Wed. 8 Went to see Miss Smith in A.M.
Later wrote letters.
- Th. 9 Went to city in A.M. In P.M. went to see Wm. Barry on Reed St. Very hot.
- Fri. 10 Finished haying and cleaning up and was thoroughly drenched with sweat. It is exceedingly hot - the leaves are dying on the trees and many of those recently planted are dying. The corn is rapidly assuming the appearance of autumn.
- Sat. 11 Went in morning to see Mary Sandling.
While there called on Mrs. Roper. Returning we put the entire family into the old cannon the top of which the boys had removed and replaced and drove home.

the boiling sun to White's Creek. It was a trying trip for the tenderfooted men and we reached our old picnicing ground only to find it occupied by some parties with a tent.

After some delay and search we found a place farther down in the field below the iron bridge. This did not please the children as well as the old ground though it was more private and had the advantage of better water. The children were soon into the creek and Annie and I crossed on the stepping stones and securing seats high above the water on the busily twisted roots of a sycamore and elm which had locked themselves together in a most fantastic manner she read ^{from} the book "Other things being Equal" while I fished in the water below. The noise and splashing of dogs, donkeys, darkies, horses and children was sufficient to disturb the notions of the most accommodating fish.

After wading in the stream for an hour Helen waded across and I got down among the roots and lifted her out of the water and handed her up to Annie where I placed her in a comfortable seat among the roots and resumed my fishing. Finally drawing up two fish to her great delight. Waterwood caught another little catfish about three inches long and these three little fishes constituted our catch. At ~~three~~ o'clock Annie spread the table cloth on the pebbly beach and carried it with enough victuals to supply a hearty dinner for ten men. We made a bucket full of lemonade and there beside the babbling stream we devoured many things but the implements. While eating we were joined by a stalwart old man in his 86th year by the name of Stallcup who relished a piece of cake with us and told his stories about before the war. After dinner to please the children I went with them into a large pool just below and spent an hour trying to teach them to swim. We then returned to the vehicle and found ²Anna Anne had taken fright and started home-ward. The boys pursued and soon found her grazing on the right of our last year's camp ground.

We hitched her up and returned by way of the big bridge and through the city. A few clouds obscured the sun and mitigated the fierce heat so that our drive was rather pleasant and we reached home a little before sunset. The three little fish were put in the fountain the evening work finished and the tired children went to bed while Annie and I repeated our custom of sitting a long while on the moonlit veranda in conversation where nothing was liable to interrupt us. Altogether it was a pleasant day to us all and I hope Heaven bless these outings with happy memories and permanent good to each. They possess something not found in the most elaborate entertainment when shared by others. It is pleasant looking back to think of them in this way as something sacred to ourselves so sacred that the footsteps of another heaven welcome seem almost profane. It is a year

- Aug. since we were there but all the little details of that trip seem fresh and dear in the memories of the children. We can scarcely regret affording these occasional enjoyments so innocent in their nature and so fraught with sweet possibilities. Yes, they are dear days to the dear children and dear days to us. How thankful we should be that we enjoy these outings together. May God bless their memories and return.
- Sun. 12. Spent the forenoon in reading and writing. The weather is still quite hot and a South wind is licking out the remaining moisture. In P.M. I lay under the awning near the gate and listened while Annie read "Other Things Bring Equal".
- Mon. 13. Hot and dry with a few drops of rain. Read and worked in shop.
- Tue. 14. Busy with patients at home in A.M. In P.M. I worked in shop.
- Wed. 15. Hot. I am greatly oppressed in some vague way and feel like I would wither down like a poor weed. I do little all day.
- Th. 16. Went to city with G. and felt the heat most keenly. I feel like I would sink and a vague awful weakness pervades my frame. I try to shake it off but it clings like the shirt of Nessus. In P.M. write to Maud.
- Fri. 17. Still hot. I go about aimlessly a good part of day. Spent 2 hrs with Prof. Turner and worked a little in shop.
- Sat. 18. Very hot. I go to city with Annie and we buy pears to can and get suit of clothes at Ellis.

 Home at 11 A.M. nearly melted. Spent rest of day easily as exertion seemed nearly impossible. Sorted up the ripe tomatoes and sent them to different neighbors as we had more than we could use and did not wish to see them waste.
- Sun. 19 Very hot.
 Sit and read or talk or write.
- Mon 20 The same. A shower.
- Tu. 21 Intensely hot 97° F. The boys and I cut corn &
 I attend some patients.
- Wed. 22 The same. Went to city. Helped Annie at the pears and wrote some letters.
- Th. 23 Writing and doing small turns & reading.
 Went to city and got more pears.
- Fr. 24 Writing letters
 Boys getting ready for another trip to White Creek.
- Sat. 25 The morning was breezy and at 8:20 we started for White Creek going through the city. We reached the lower bridge shortly after ten and having secured the mare we carried our dinner and fishing tackle down to the big cotton-wood and in a few minutes the children were in the stream. I tried fishing but as the day was windy I was not very successful. The boys caught some in their seines. At noon we spread our dinner beside the fishing stream and ate like pioneers.

1900.

Sat. 26. I went in swimming with the boys to prevent their getting beyond their depth as Gatewood alone could swim. They enjoyed my participation immensely ^{and} would have stayed till a late hour but the gentle pattering of rain with distant thunder induced me to start back at 3 P.M. A fine breeze attended us all the way home. We stopped a little while in the city to get my glasses and some candy for the children, and reached home in good time having had a very pleasant trip. These trips signify so much to the children and are so fraught with pleasant memories that we perhaps would not err in multiplying their frequency. Gatewood has already learned to swim and Corral and Wesley have become familiar with deep water which is altogether a positive gain. Besides they have enjoyed the recreation and built pleasant memories. We all enjoy these trips though I lack the enthusiasm of boyhood. It sprinkled only enough to prevent dust and the breeze was delightful.

Sun. 26 Most of the hot day was spent at reading. In the P.M. Annie kindly read to me twenty-two chapters of Job and then we took a walk. As my eyes trouble me and grow weary so quickly she is a treasure indeed to read for me as I have been such an inveterate reader all my life.

Mon. 27 Very dry and oppressive. I do not like and feel so dull that a few letters seemed a great treat. I long for rain.

Sept.

5. The water below. I caught but little. The boys bathed and splashed immediately below, Nettie joining in, while Helen climbed over the big log and played in the sand occasionally dipping her little feet in the shallow water and all enjoying the play most keenly. At one o'clock all were ready to devour in the most cannibalistic fashion. After eating an immense dinner and a pound of candy they were ready for the stream again. We reached home before sunset and all were happy as usual.

6. The wolf gives me no rest. All forenoon Annie and I sat under the maple shade by the summer-house and planned and talked. In the afternoon I went with Walter Cundall to the abattoir, a disgusting nauseous trip.

7. Very hot. Spent the day at writing, reading, waiting on patients and feeding after the seeding of the meadow. Boys all off to school.

8. Very hot and dry. The day is spent at reading and waiting on patients.

9. Still hot but clouds threaten rain. I spend most of day in reading. In the afternoon enter much company.

A Dream.

I dreamed the dawn crept in with gentle light -
 Which I had never seen. My infant-sense Had yet to learn of sound. The quiet-might -
 Of touch, with master of all sense was here
 To teach the rest. First lessons dear, gentle touch,
 First friend of Love. "True teacher and true guide
 The first to lead - the last to leave. So much
 We owe to thee! Dear, patient touch, abide.

I dreamed the world was but a sheet of white
 And Life, the unit of a lesser time
 Whose greater is Forever. Here must I write
 My unit. Fair page! Fair theme, sublime!
 My stainless page revolved - I knew it not.
 My evening came but I dreamed idly on Above a page all stained with sin and blot,
 And scarce knew when or where my day had gone.

But, as I dreamed, an angel touched my hair
 And softly said, "Give me your sheet of Time"
 That I may add your unit." In deep despair
 I saw him scan that sin-stained page of mine
 On which I slept. Then sighed and wrote a naught.
 I dreamed again and now my page was bright
 And clean. Where are my sins and stains, I thought.
 A Savior's tear and blood had washed them white.

Content.

Unseparated King, I walk in every shrine
 With silent step; nor sound nor larger battle noise Proclaims my coming. My quiet reign employs No herald. My law is simple and sublime.
 To every mind alike - to serf and lord -
 It marks the road to bliss. It never bends Nor breaks; is not displaced, nor ends.
 No right and let all evil be abhorred.
 This is my lofty law which God has sent
 For your safe guides. My name is but Content.

29 Aug. 1900.

Faith.

Among the trends of Life I am the highest Way
 And lead forever up. Up, up, forever up!
 Through all collocation still, I hold the cup
 Of deepest love and lightest love. In brightest day
 I need no finger-board, in darkest night no torch
 And I am but a way, "a high way and a way
 No ravenous beast may tread". But I am still "away
 Of pleasantness," a quiet Path of Peace. The arch
 Of Hope is Heaven. Bright and for its Promise hath
 The stainless steps of Charity to bless my beaten path.

Waiting

I want to say some sweet thing
 That men will not forget;
 I want to do some neat thing
 And yet - and yet - and yet -

I only keep on waiting
 And it's going time away
 While purpose is abating
 With every precious day.

I want to do some noble thing,
 Before it is too late.
 But, still I keep on waiting,
 And wait, and wait, I wait.

The world is going past me!
 Ah! surely, this - is - Fate,
 And I've enough to last me
 And need no longer wait.

I'll just get up and hustle, -
 In fact, I'll take the lead
 And put my finest hustle
 In every act and deed.

I care but little what men say
 But fear the awful fate
 Of him who throws his chance away
 By waiting till too late.

Of course, I mean to do what's right -
 By all - both small & great;
 But, if I'm forced to make a fight
 I will not stand and prate,

And let any forman get the start—
 While crossing swords with Fate;
 I'll just proceed to do my part—
 And let the fellow wait.

The world is moving fast, my boys,
 And business keen and straight—
 Will never keep in her employ
 The boy who likes to wait.

Be prompt, my boy, it is a time
 Beyond the gift of State.
 You'd better be a minute soon
 Than be a Second—late.

I would rather be.

I would rather be a tear - drop
 With a mission, pure and sweet -
 Than a grandly storm-tossed ocean
 To swallow up a fleet.

I would rather be a sunbeam
 And kiss a falling tear
 Than the thorny splendor of a court -
 In any other sphere.

I would rather be a rose - leaf
 With a surface pure and clean
 Than a doubtful robe of splendor
 Or a sword of brightest - stream.

I would rather be a snow - flake
 Cold, but pure and white
 Than a monument of marble Commemorating might.

I would rather be a quill pen
 To write the a b c
 Than the sword of any soldier
 Or the gun of victory.

I would rather be a widow's mite
 Which the Saviour blessed
 Than all the wealth of all the world
 Were a single heart distressed.

I would rather be my little self Unfettered by another
 And go to God for all my help
 Without a priest or brother.

- Mon. 10. Warm. Assisted Annie with the washing-machine after which we sat under the maple by the summer house and I listened while she read the "Jugger". The boys began attendance at school again this morning. We will now be compelled to change our easy and convenient method of living a little to conform to this change.
- Tu. 11. The day was spent with patients, books, writing and light work.
- Wed. 12. In the forenoon took the family, except Wesley, and went to market while the children went to school. In the afternoon worked about the shop.
- Th. 13. Read and wrote till nearly noon then visited Mr. Elias Gould near the High Bridge taking the car to St. Albans and walking the remainder of way. Got back at 3 o'clock and worked and read by turns till night.
- Two very young children the children presented her with a copy of "Richard Carmel" and I made the following contributions in rhyme.
- I do not have literary merit for it. Rather, it represents some good thoughts in poor rhyme, the faults of which may be more readily excused or overlooked in the future when it may possess more interest than now.

James Carter.

For Annie.

Each home has its center of use and of worth,
Each heart has its idol and shrine;
Each hearth has its brightness, its warmth & its mirth,
But more than all this is in mine.

Its treasures untold are richer than gold.
Its brightness no words can portray,
And we never grow old in the love of the fold.
It made us joyful by night and by day.

Its center, my wife, is the joy of my life;
Its shrine is the hearth where we ^{live} ~~live~~;
Its music, the noise of my girls^{and} my boys,
At table, at books, or at play.

While she is the center no discord can enter
The circle she rules with her love;
For love is the tether that binds us together,
Our home - here, below - and above.

Yes, Love is the tether that binds us together
Thro life. Whatever may come
There is never another to want with the Mother,
She's the center and anchor of home.

13 Sept. 1900.

25-10

Sept.

Thurs 14 Went early in the morning to see Mr. Gould taking Saturday and to much as far as the square in their way to school. Found Mr. Gould better. To come back to city and called upon the city health officer Dr. Arthur Smith. I could not help contrasting in my mind this man and his predecessor. The brightness, alertness, directness and business-like method of the present official contrasted strongly with the dull and apparently careless methods of his predecessor. I was particularly struck with the energy and intelligence for the details of his business which he seemed to combine. Altogether I should regard him as a very capable official with a particular adaptation to this business. In the afternoon worked in the shop and read the papers.

Sat 15 A brilliant autumn day. I worked in the shop and about the yard all day and felt a relief from the depression of the hot weather in the cool atmosphere of an autumn day.

Sun 16 Another day of splendid autumn beauty. The forenoon was spent in reading. While I read Annie wrote & copied some of my pieces of rhyme into the little book where she is collecting my poor efforts of this kind. Incidentally she happened to find a piece of manilla paper on which four years ago I had penciled a little problem in rhyme for the two older boys as it was readily solved by them at that time (their ages being 7 & 9 respectively). They afford some interest & are copied as follows.

A Wilton Problem. 16 to 1.

For the boys.

Says Bertie to Nixon
 "Dear Uncle Sam, fixin'
 A problem to give you some fun,
 About silver and gold
 All traded and sold
 At the ratio of sixteen to one."

I've taken an ounce
 To have you pronounce
 How many gold dollars will take
 Of mine hundred fine
 And eight tenths as you strive.
 Each dollar of gold will take."

Says Nixon to Bertie,
 "My boy, you are jerky;
 Just tell me of silver the same.
 Four twelve and a half ($4\frac{1}{2}$).
 (Excuse if I laugh)
 A dollar of silver will frame."

And how much of each
 I wish you to teach
 Will balance us both on the scale

- Mon 17 Worked about shop a while. Went to city and called on Crisington & Farrar about some property I desired to sell. Late in P.M. a girl brought word that Mr Gould was worse and I took a car and got out there at dark walking a mile beyond the Buena Vista car line. I got home at 8 P.M.
- Tu. 18 Wrote to see Mr Gould and some persons in city in A.M. In P.M. showed some of my houses to some prospective buyers.
- Wed. 19 Again to Goulds. After dinner I walked to see Lilian Bang on Rived St and got back after night. Tired but slept poorly.
- Th. 20 Working about yard, reading and writing. In P.M. went to see Mrs Varley.
- Fri. 21 Walked over to see Miss Bang and came back by Mrs Hudsons. Reached home very much prostrated, in great pain and depression of spirit. I lay down for an hour in hammock and then worked in shop till night.
- Sat. 22 Raining. I work in shop and write by turns. It is a dull gloomy day unfit to be out of doors.
- Sun 23 A beautiful day. I read a while and wait on some patients. Annie reads to me from Richard Barret for two hours. Late in P.M. we all go for a ride and get back at sunset. The children enjoy their rides so much that I grant them cordials. At night Annie and I sit till after 11 o'clock planning a trip north that I am measurably compelled to take. I never contemplated leaving home so reluctantly.

Mon.

24. Went to city in forenoon, making preparations for trip North. The remainder of the day was actively spent in preparation. I dislike this trip more than I can tell, yet vaguely feel a deep conviction that I should make it. If it proves as disagreeable in reality as in contemplation it will be one of the sore spots in my life. But having fully made up my mind to tackle the disagreeable problem I shall go forward as usual with a faith which surmounts misgivings. At twilight while gathered by the fountain we said our evening prayers and after talking to the children Annie and Catherine and I started with my baggage for the depot, leaving the other four crying bitterly, and shouting "good bye". At 7:55 I started from Lincoln's depot. It was a very hot night and I got no sleep. Though the car is not one fourth full passengers insist on sitting with me and talking with me even though I repeatedly change my seat. At midnight I ate some of Annie's fine lunch.

Tu.

25. Daylight - 70 miles from Cincinnati, clear and bright with a white sky which promises a hot day. I am very sleepy and depressed and scarcely see how I am to endure this disagreeable trip, but suppose as usual I shall display an unexpected endurance and certainly feel that God will be with me. Still I wish it were ended and I back in the "dear old yard". After 50 min. delay at Cincinnati we are off for Columbus. Oh, oh, we speed through the land grass and shrubs and trees and pretty homes. How cozy calm and restful they all look. An indefinable something seems to cling about each place all in their pretty humility. It would not need a very keen observer to note the great difference between the appearance of the homes North and South of the Ohio river. It seems as if one had gone into a different civilization while he slept. An appearance of plenty of quiet seclusion and unobtrusiveness seems to prevail everywhere. The grass and leaves are so green, the streams so clear. Now we are climbing gradually out of the Ohio Valley onto the central uplands and here a vision of plenty spreads like a gorgeous dream on every side. Corn, corn, corn! what wonderful and extensive fields! In amount it far surpasses anything I ever saw in this prolific state. There is only a slight tinge of the leaves which grows more perceptible as we go Northward. The woods look so clean and pure and sweet. The roads running through them look so cool and inviting. Ah! if Annie and I could only drive there! At 11:15 A.M. we reach Columbus. I look in my large lunch, think how kind it was to prepare it for me, thank God for it, eat a little though I am not hungry, and turn to a young man from the mountains of Kentucky, who sits behind me. His name is Higginbotham. He looks hungry. I found he was empty, but I filled him with my lunch which he devoured with canine voracity. So hot! On to Jamesville. At west end of bridge had a collision with a box car and while they were making repairs I took my baggage & walked on to the depot. As I passed the scene of the collision I saw two-inch bolts broken asunder which would account for the violent shock we experienced. Had a tiresome wait at the depot for the O & L. K. train. Reached Stockport at 4 P.M. Met many old acquaintances, shake hands and hurry on to hotel where I secure room No. 5. The 62nd regiment O. V. I. are having a reunion or rather will have tomorrow & next day and a crowd is already on hand. I go about and meet a few friends and look for Hugh Gormley but do not find him. I then go to a little box of a bath room by the barber shop and go back to hotel after getting a hot bath in that hot little room without a window. Just above the hotel is a saloon in which Gormley and Johnson are entertaining the noisy crowd. Beneath the hotel is a poor restaurant of the 3rd or 4th class managed by "Maggie" Shute, who was impressively dirty eight years ago and does not seem to have washed since. Around these two points a constant tumult goes on. Just across the narrow street below is Adrian's saloon. One of my little windows looks immediately down on it while the other looks down on the crowd which bustles around the two points I have previously named. So I am in the midst of a drunken orgy in the very storm center of this infernal tumult. It seems as if about half of the din which sweeps to my ears is malicious blasphemy. I am very much exhausted and try to sleep. All through the night the people are coming and going up and down the stairs, through the little hall on one side of which is my room, pounding on the doors to make each other up, halloving

Sept.

Sept.

Sept.

and giving orders about their oil business, banging doors, &c., &c. Mingled with these sounds in that of frequent vomiting, groaning, moaning, &c. A time or two I was conscious of having been aroused by extraordinary noises which is the only proof I have that I had lasted the hour of sleep.

Nov.

24. While waiting for breakfast I get my things out of the box which I have carried into the cellar of Aug's store. After breakfast I make a few short calls, then take the eight o'clock train to McCombville where I spend some time with Worley with whom I take dinner. I go with him and call on Jas. McSword, whom I find to be a well-preserved wreck. He is blind. His underlip was much puckered by the removal of a cancer. His wife was out calling but came before I left. He was sitting solitary as a prisoner in a cell. Remembering his wild, careless, sensual life and his present condition one can not help feeling more vividly than ever before the classic accuracy of the passage "The way of the transgressor is hard." His nature ever been sensitive, proud or pure he would surely suffer most keenly when he reflected that he had done nothing for the world upon which he is now a charge. His chief support is a pension from the government he served technically and boastfully devoted on pretence of disease - Insipensing Nervosis.

Called at Bank and learned that Stantemy was anxious to see me. Called later but he was still out. Returned to Stockport by evening train and went about making a few calls till dark. The crowd has increased greatly and punning, quarreling, card playing and general carousing is the order. After supper I go to A. P. Aug's for 1900.

Sept.

a short while and then return to this wild riot-in which curses, threats, fists and drawn knives are prominent. Try to write some and then go to bed. Until now the wolf had not gnawed me though on yesterday I twice came near falling in the street at Mc Connelville.

Tonight-I feel his keen teeth gnawing at my heart. If I could only sleep I think it would be better. Super-added to this is the vexatious mission I am attempting to perform with the constant fear that whatever I may accomplish with one is liable to be immediately destroyed by the inadvertence, malice or stupidity of another. It is a very storm center of hell and everyone seems to be infatuated with a delusion or intoxicated with some dawning anticipation or indulgence. It is chaos run mad. About half of the crowd seem to be hardened roundels running amuck. I write awhile to Annie and go to bed out of which the wolf and I come together. I sit and look out of the window and wish I could sleep. I wonder if a drink of water would quiet the wolf. I get my pitcher and take a drink. Its nauseous taste and smell tells me it is from the shrunken, sluggish river. I sit and repeat to myself over and over verses of poetry I learned long ago. I knead my flesh and walk in my little room. Sit-down. Get up; bathe my face. It is impossible to follow any line of thought long no matter how absorbing. The awful din goes on all night. I think of my dear wife and the flock at home and wish I were back. Yet, I must make my impression on this field before I leave it.

Th.

27. Got out very early and went and walked about early. The town is full of 63rd Regiment & others. I had to talk with a great many who were uninteresting and persistently dull and annoying. At 9:30 I went to Mr. Hughes, driving Tom's mare. Back at dinner. Rained hard and I wrote Annie. Sent came to William by Obidiah J. Brookman. As I drove in Dr. Maylor hailed me cordially and kindly. I got out and we had a lively pleasant chat in which he told me of his plan to write a book for children. He also spoke of writing a book in which Stockport would be rather prominent and he wished my consent to use me as a modified character carefully concealed. I consented on condition that he should not give me a prominence amounting to publicity nor make me a character so weak that my children would be ashamed of it. I told him of the few pieces of rhyme I had with me which Annie had copied and which I intended to show to some of her friends and mine. He expressed a desire to see it and I promised to call and bring it. It rained far into the night and got cool. I slept - some though doubtless travels waked me often throughout the night.

Fri.

28. I got up and wrote letters and made visits till sunset. These old soldiers still carry on their exercises and the streets are filled with easy going loafers. I passed Dave several times and he wore a dull apathetic drunken look and seemed desirous of avoiding me. I did not think it a good policy to accost him and preferred to pass quietly by rather than be seen with him in his drunken state. His demented wife was here in her way to the asylum.

Sept.

An hour before night - I passed him at the drug store and though I spoke to all I knew there he did not raise his drunken head and neither of us spoke. He immediately repaired to the saloon where he drank and gambled till the degraded proprietor became anxious for him to leave.

I got in his buggy and in the midst of a drunken crowd just below the hotel he called to me where I was speaking with Robt. James about 50 yds away and thinking he was saying "goodbye" I threw him a salute and called "goodbye". He at once began the most-scurrilous abuse, getting out of his buggy and pretending he wanted to fight. In the presence of many spectators, some of whom were ladies at the hotel he continued his raving abuse for some time until he was induced to get in his buggy and go away. When he had gone I went with James to John Buck's and back in his buggy. I turned and wrote till 11 P.M. What useless turmoil and tumult all night. Swearing, threatening, carousing, vomiting all through the night.

Sat.

29. A leaden sky with rain. Went to Frank Riley's and treated Mrs. Geo. W. Oliver for rupture and Monas Gillespie for epilepsy. The remainder of the day was spent in calls and consultation with patients. Learned this evening from Hugh that he had sent deed for Nashville property (to wife) on yesterday. So my visit seems to have had some effect - and as so often before God was with me. Had a kind letter from Annie tonight.

Sun.

30 Up early. Walked to graveyard and on return was delayed in talking with Henry Hook until I found on reaching the hotel that breakfast was over. Went to Stillas, got my breakfast, dropped a silver quarter in the cream pitcher & hurried back to livery stable, took Tom McHugh's mare and drove to Cory's. As I drove along so many memories of the past thronged upon me.

Sept.

Vivid little scenes seemed snatched out of other drives along this same road years ago and suddenly presented to my mind. The road was smoother and finer for driving. More wildflowers grew along the road side than I had ever seen here before. The trees were slightly tinged with amber and gold, but many were intensely green. The bushes and grass along the river were very luxuriant, the scenery varied and beautiful. Soft mists were clinging around the cliffs, the air was delightful and the sun shone with soft-brilliance. I drove to Mrs. Cory's & she and her daughter were very joyful to see me. The mother seemed to have faded considerably in the last two years and my heart went out to her as she held my hand in both of hers and told me how much they had missed me & recounted many of the incidents of my practice in the family which I had long since forgotten.

I showed her the pictures of my boys which interested her deeply. Taking the picture of Connel in her hand and covering the lower part of the face she turned to her daughter & said "There, Ruth, there is Nettie Gatewood, exactly. Nothing could be more like her." This seemed to me most striking when I remembered that she had never seen my mother but a few times and that more than thirty years ago. What a strong impression that face must then have made upon her. She proceeded in her own way to mention strong characteristics of my mother which I thought most people had overlooked. Again and again she returned meditatively to the picture saying "yes, that is just like her." I recited a piece or two for a grandchild of hers who went to look after the horse for me, and both mother and daughter wept. How they clung about me when I was leaving. I could have spent the day pleasantly with them. At half-past ten I started up the big hill, feeling the impulse of a new life. I thought of the town I had left behind me. My childish repugnance for it - which was based on mere description for I had not seen it then coupled itself with my recent experience there and the long years of bitter experience in it and the latter seemed but the realization and the former an infernal dream. I put it all aside. I scanned the road for the old trees I used to see and love. Many of them were gone but new growths were springing along the way and the foliage blended beautifully and picturesquely. There was an abundance of golden-rod and wild violets in fresh bloom. The iron-weeds were crowned with magnificent purple umbels and the perennials were dressed in bright scarlet. As I climbed the hills the hues seemed to grow brighter. I never saw such an abundance of golden-rod. I drove on to the old school-ground and took the winding way across it by the direction of a young lady, the daughter of an old school-mate. I followed the old beaten, yellow road past the old schoolhouse site (it and its successors are both gone, though my eye could still detect the elevation on which it stood.) The ~~fine~~ forest lying beyond in which we romped and played is nearly all gone and in its place apple trees, berry-bushes, corn, potatoes, etc. are revelling in their own luxuriance. I mentally measured the old topographical relations when I was a little hero there. The hills are left. Some of these landmarks still show me my old proficiency in throwing which frequently drew from my mother even before I was ten years old that strong Scotch exclamatory conclusion "What a little deil to throw." I drove on to Jas. Harding's but finding no one at home I placed one of Emmet's pictures behind the screen left a note fastened in the door drove back past my play ground and on to John Gatewoods. Here I found Jas. Harding delighted over the card I had sent him wondering how I got in the right-length, etc. He seemed to prize it more than any of the other recipients we took dinner together here and then Emmet and I drove down the hill and hitching the horse in bushes above P. Kean's we climbed the hill which had been all woods in my time, gathered some wild grapes which reminded me of my rambles in the woods in this vicinity hunting grapes for my mother. We went on over the big hill, down to the stream at the grotto where I used to go to bathe and study and practice athletic exercises long ago. The dry weather had shrunk the stream till not a drop fell over the rocks, and only a dingy, dirty pool lay where two years ago I had a fine bath in the clear sparkling, babbling stream. We went up the stream some distance. The sturdy trees which grew along its banks are gone and scarcely a stump remains.

Sept.

Sept.

We went on to the old home place which is much dilapidated. Some of the fruit trees I had planted remain, but more are gone. The windows looked so small and the little eight by ten panes reminded me of the windows of a toy house. The weather-boards were still in pretty fair state of preservation though never painted since the house was built forty-four years ago. The little cedars I had planted are big trees and some of them are cut away. The man kindly picked a quart of pines from a tree I had planted thirty years ago. There I prepared to bring home to my children. I visited ^{the spring} which had been filled up by the stream and the slipping of the hillside and the site was all grown over by large bushes and brambles. Cutting a small dogwood stick near the old spring as a souvenir we walked back past Percy Kearie and getting our horse drove to Mr. Olivet and went over the graveyard and through the grove I had given to the church. The graveyard was clean and looked better than at my last visit. We drove on to The Lynes and giving him $5.00 for the church we came back with him to the church where I directed the planting of a few trees next spring and selected a burial plot for my family in case we should desire to use it. I then drove back with Emmet to his home talked a few minutes with the family and then drove back to Stockport at 7 P.M. It was a pleasant moonlit drive and the air was cool and delightful. Went back to Hugh's to get my basket and he soon followed me. I returned and wrote a letter to Annie and retired at 11 P.M.

Oct. Mon. 1. After running about the town and seeing a number of friends and saying goodbye I took the 7:15 train for Waterford and walked thence up to Bozmain and spent rest of day. I am tired and sleepy and lie down for two hours, to rest my aching back. This looks like the head-quarters of drudgery and the evidences are abundant that constant hard work is necessary. Bozmain and wife seem to be failing a good deal in ability to get 'past the drudgery' that piles up with each day. We talked till 9 P.M. and I sleep poorly.

Tu. 2. Coolers. I go to the station at Waterford and wait for train which is an hour late. Then go to Lowell, meet Charlie at depot and go home with him. After dinner we go out in country together. Return from East Side and go up to Nicholas Bazils and look at some fine wood-carving. Back and to see a patient four miles down the river on the east side. This is in a new oil field and the derricks are scattered on the hill-side while the shanties remind one of a mining camp. I am quite weary. While sitting in buggy holding horse I looked up at the fleecy clouds and recalled my wanderings over this country thirty years ago selling fruit trees to earn money to go to college. What endurance I had then. What wind. I felt an old-time desire to inflate my lungs to their fullest capacity. While the horse nibbled the clover I revived my old time habit of bidding my horse by the water. A strange experience followed. As if the elixir of life and vital energy had returned I soon carried this feat to the amazing extent of 3 min. 33 seconds. When I remember that I have but once in several years reached two minutes and thirty-two records and usually go about two minutes and that my best previous record had been 3 minutes 21 seconds I am amazed.

Oct.

A little later Dr. Harris came out and we returned and got our supper. Talked till late and went to bed. A little later he was called out and did not return.

Wed.

3. Slept well. Breakfasted with the two school-teachers who board here and teach in the village school. We had a pleasant conversation which was cut short by my departure for the 6:50 train. At Startport my grip was handed aboard and I found some affectionate admirer had cut my name in glaring white letters all over the stick I had got on the old home place to make a souvenir cane and thus it advertises to some one who I am. At Malta I got to Dr. Hays and had a long talk with him about books and poetry, etc. He gave me two of his books - "Goldenrod" and "Thistle-down" and "Under the American Banner". He told me my verses had revealed to him a side of my nature of which he did not dream. Said I reminded him of a chestnut tree - all without - all sweet and all within. His wife came in and contributed to the pleasure of my visit. He told me his first choice among my pieces was "The Spots upon my Cuff" and "My Hyster" though he liked them all. He read me a few of his unpublished pieces which will be embodied in his forth-coming book for children. They were very pretty. He recognizes that his book in writing up to the level of childhood is the greatest he has yet written. He bade them goodbye and hurried over to Worley's where I took dinner then having just eaten. I enjoyed this meal very much.

Oct.

particularly some crisp ciders which Emmet had brought the day before. After dinner I read them over and my friends which they enjoyed very much. Mr. Tennant came in to see me and spoke of the time I treated him for typhoid fever, walking from Stockport to Mingo Creek day after day. While we were talking E. M. Stanberry drove up and waited for some time till I came out and started off and then called me. I got in and we drove over the town and talked, stopping at times in the shade of the elms. He is determined to go at Hugel Bomber sternly. He returned to his office and I had a long talk in which he told me that Bomber ignored his letters notifying him of his obligations past due and of his intention to press him. He drove me to the train. Near the station we passed Dr. Maytor who greeted me most cordially. When we had passed Stanberry said "That man thinks a world of you. He told me you had been like a father to him". It was pleasant to hear this in the light of both the present and the past.

Took the train and reached Jansenville at 7:10. At 9:10 P.M. reached Columbus. Hunted for Brad a little and then went to Davidson House.

Th.

4. Breakfast at 6:30. Then to Brad's house where I stayed till after dinner and walked with him back to his place of work. Went to the depot. Baggage missing. Got ticket and hunted it up at check room. During this time the train left me, but there are two more to go each of which should reach Cincinnati in time for me to take the L & N south. At 2:15 take the P. C. & St. L. Reach Cincinnati at 7:15 and take L & N five minutes

Fri.

5. Later Reach Nashville at 2:15. And walk over house. Take a bath and a nap before breakfast. After breakfast Annie and I drive back

- Oct. 1. for my baggage and spend the forenoon looking after the vexatious business which took me north. In afternoon read and looked after some professional work.
- Sat. 6. Raining. I look after some work and read the papers. This is the fourteenth anniversary of our wedding and all seem to be permeated with a spirit of happiness. We enjoyed our dinner together and the pleasant rain was mingled with occasional sunshine each of which seemed necessary to the occasion. Our life has run very smoothly and God has blessed us signally all these years. May his love and protection be with us in the year to come. I have sometimes written a little tribute to this occasion in rhyme. Circumstances have been almost prohibitory this time but I went into the yard and prepared a large bouquet for the table to which I appended my card on the back of which I wrote the following lines.
- Today.
- There was a day some years away
With hands and hearts for treasure
We launched our boat; and, still afloat
We seek no greater pleasure Than God's own will to bless us still And keep us close together.
- "Work" 6 Oct. 1900. "Annie"
- Sun 7. 7. Very rainy. We post the journal and read. In the afternoon A. L. Rutherford called and spent two hours during which he proposed to cut his exorbitant fee ^{against} to Mrs. Gurnley from $750. to $500. I could not help noticing his greedy face and unfair disposition.

- Mon. 8. Windy and chilly. Worked most of day in shop.
- Tu. 9. The same.
- Wed. 10. Went to city in forenoon. In afternoon worked some in shop.
- Th. 11. Worked about yard and in shop.
- Fri. 12. Walked to the city and back to get a few things for Helen as it was her birthday. The remainder of the day I spent in working about the place.
- Sat. 13. Went to the city with Cimie to market. After my return the boys and I husked corn till night.
- Sun. 14. Bright and beautiful. Spent day in visiting reading and walking about.
- Mon. 15. Husked corn all day. At eve Wesley and wheeled it all in while the boys put the fodder away. I was very tired and my hands burned all night long.
- Tu. 16. I worked some in shop and wrote letters. It is a day divinely beautiful. My correspondence is neglected and must be brought up.
- Wed. 17. I made some preparations for winter worked some in shop and wrote some besides reading a part of Redburn's novel. After dark Mr Scot brought a message asking me to go out near the high bridge and see Elias Gould. Took Kate and I drove. The same rank disorder and the same things lying where I say them a month ago. Old Plow still in the room and the calf on porch, which 1900

Oct.

few days are scattered about. Poor old man! he seemed happy even here where I should fret till my heart broke. We got back at 9 P.M. passing the beautifully illuminated street fair on the way.

Th. 18 Read and worked in shop. Feel a little better. This is the first day or night since Monday that "the wolf" did not gnaw constantly.

Fr. 19 Walked to city and back in A.M. In P.M. I read and worked by turns after calling on my old friend Mr. Hickerson. All night I sat and read Richard Carvel while A., G., and C., attended C. M. Hawk's lecture on Sun-chine at the Tabernacle.

Sat. 20 A beautiful day. I work in shop and read and walk. My wife still threatens. I read far into the night and finish Richard Carvel. Tho its sale has been phenomenal it is not one of the great books that will live and continue popular. Tho written with much care it is in important respects weak and fulsome.

Sun. 21 Read and walk with the children.

Mon 22 Walk to city in A.M. Write letters and work in shop in P.M.

Tu. 23 A typical autumn day breezy, bright and breezing. Walked to Tabernacle and listened to addresses by Prof. Hadley, President of Yale and Chancellor Kirkland of Vanderbilt. The crowd was a jam but orderly and bright. The addresses were characteristic and Hadley was lofty and scholarly but practical and plain. I enjoyed the entertainment. This is my fifty-fifth anniversary and it is

- Oct. 1 Vanderbilt twenty-fifth. In the P.M. I wrote at the bench and the boys went to see a football game. There has not been a cloud in the sky during all this brilliant day.
- Wed. 24. Another beautiful day. I read and write and work in shop by turns to escape the wolf. I seem to get no good rest.
- Th. 25. The same thing.
- Fri. 26. I am still following my battle but can not see that I am gaining. I exercise my will as so often before but it somehow seems as if a vital something had been subtracted from my existence. I sometimes wonder if the time has come for me to cease fighting the disagreeable and put myself in touch with the pleasant circumstances which only drift one along in life in an almost purposeless manner. Possibly I should soon tire of that. Without knowing what is really best I still pursue the aggressive method with which my life has had most to do and which I understand best. Time will tell whether I have acted wisely.
- Sat. 27. The golden weather continues. The leaves are falling, the air is pure and bracing, the sky free of clouds and the change is striking on the hills like in advanced autumn. How swiftly the Autumn has traveled. In all my life I do not recall one which seems to have progressed so rapidly. It has been touchingly beautiful so quiet, so calm and yet so full of the energy of life. Our home has grown more beautiful and it seems as if every shrub and plant has tried to do its best. There is a hummance of growth which we have not before enjoyed.

In the forenoon went to city and spent the afternoon with my books and at work by turns in the shop.

- Sun. 28. A day of gold and quiet. The children, accompanied by Mr. Powell's little ones have gone to Sunday School while Annie and I sit in the shade by the pattering fountain and talk and read and write.
- Mon. 29. The beautiful weather continues. I work and read by turns.
- Tu. 30. The same.
- Wed. 31. Wrote letters and worked in shop chopped stonewood.
- Nov. Th. 1. Went to town in the forenoon and chopped in the afternoon.
- Fri. 2. Weather is superb. I work in shop and chop stonewood.
- Sat. 3. Bright with a strong North wind. The boys have gone with Prof. Webb and his boys matting on Paradise Ridge. I chop up stonewood at the old forest.
- Sun. 4. Spent the day in reading and walking.
- Mon. 5. Clear. I chop wood most of day, worked some in shop and visited a sick baby at Mr. Mc Lintock's.

Nov.

Tu. 6. Bright and clear. Walked to city and back, went to election, chopped wood.

We d. 7. Cold and disagreeable. I work in shop and read by turns throughout the day.

Th. 8. The same.

Fri. 9. Half an inch of ice in the water tub. I continue my work by turns in the shop and chopping up an old lounet below the house and reading by the fire. Made several trips to see the sick child.

Sat. 10. The same. Packed the cellar windows, fixed a little about the barn and read some by the fire. I have taken a deep cold and my welf shares around my heart in a most tumultuous manner. It is not often painful but as if thoroughly exhausted. It had summoned up its remaining strength for one tremendous effort. A rolling, tossing tumultuous tempest, in which weakness and necessity seem to play the greatest part.

Sun. 11. Cold and cloudy. My cold has apparently deepened and I feel so chilly I want to hug the fire. In the afternoon went to see the sick child and took a short walk. At night Annie and I went to hear Dr. Vane preach. Before going I rocked our little Helen asleep on the cushions. When asleep she started convulsively and drew up her limbs, but soon quieted and I placed her in her little cot with Bettie. On returning Gaterwood told me she had cried and he had taken her up and rocked her asleep again but that she twitted and jerked her limbs. When we had rested she gave a hoarse, rasping cough which alarmed me that fearing she might get uncovered I took her up and placed her between us. She was restless all night. Much of the night she turned her little arms around my neck and often she stole her little fingers into my hand. Sometimes she was patting my cheek.

Nov.

Mon.

12. Helen seemed better and ate fairly and while I worked about the room covering a large tub with loust bark she played with the pieces and seemed to enjoy herself though at times she seemed tired. We kept her in the house all day as she was a little hoarse. As the evening drew on her hoarseness deepened. We made simple applications to her throat and again she slept between us and acted fairly.

Tue.

13. Little Helen is feverish and hoarse. We brought her breakfast in but she would not eat, though later she ate an apple and some soup for dinner. Early in the morning she looked up thoughtfully and said "Dook, I am not going to get well for a long time." I tried to dissipate her fear but she said solemnly "No. Dook, not this time."

She insisted on staying about the room with Hettie and in the forenoon Annie washed and worked some in the shop making frequent visits to the parlor to see how she was getting along. In the afternoon she nursed where and as nursed and worked with her constantly and she grew better and slept fairly between us all night.

14. On being Helen seemed to be worse and grew rapidly so as the day wore on. I nursed her almost constantly while Annie made preparations and looked after the house and took turns with me as she could. She suffered tremendously but made no complaint and often her little smile would almost give promise of certain recovery. On night drew on her difficulty of breathing grew rapidly worse and more alarming. I went to Mr. Foster's and telephoned the Health Officer, Dr. Larkin Smith, asking him to come and employ intubation. He replied stating his inability to do it and referred me to a number of others, among whom were eye and ear throat specialists. I tried there with the same result. At last we were referred to Dr. Buist. As nothing could be done and she seemed to grow a little easier we worked with her till morning the trouble seeming to deepen all the time. She bore her punishment with the most serene composure and tried to take punishment whenever we asked her to though she could swallow with great difficulty. She clung to me with the most earnest solicitude and seemed to try to please me in every way she could. If for any reason she would be placed on her cot or held by Annie while I prepared something she kept repeating "I want Dick, I want Dick," and when I came and asked her what she wanted she ^{would} say simply "I want you" then she ~~would~~ put her little hand in mine and when ever I would place my cheek to her she would place her little arms about my neck, and tell me she was my girl and add "you are Dick, I do not say." She seemed to think I would be proud of her fertility and told her I was. Sometimes she would say thoughtfully "I am Dick's girl" or "my girl" as if she desired to assertion herself in such way as to please. She had for a long time been very fond of stories I told her about a good little girl named Mildred Gray. Then she always insisted on at bedtime though she would have a score of them through the day. I always seated her on the cushion and she would always say "Now, tell me a story about Mildred, and it will go to sleep." Her devotion was simple and touching. She would always kneel at my knee fold her little hands and say her little prayers beginning "Now, I lay me down to sleep" and these times she followed by saying "God bless little Helen, and Nettie and 'Lisley' and Cora and 'Gatie' and God bless Dick and mamma — and Annie."

If by chance she omitted a name and thought of it afterward she would promptly get down again and put it in. When I had told the story of Michael and she had kissed us all "good night" she would ask me to sing for her and I always tried to do so and though I know no music I was always proud to feel there was one dear audience that listened to my poor voice with an appreciation and love and fondness not given by the cultured audience to the concert hall. And when I often sadly think how handicapped I was in putting whatever of sentiment or spirit of song I might feel into utterance I do not so much rekindle as I listen to others and still think that I had an audience dearer than all the world and one that loved to hear me sing. Sometime perchance I may sing again when the little ones are about my neck and the little brown eyes beam with approval.

Many, many times during the day she asked for a story about Michael. Of these she never tired. She would always quit anything for these stories. I gave her some little playthings - a little harp among the rest which she often tried to blow, and would hold in her little fingers when she fell asleep. She was always fond of music and would get up to the piano and try to sing and play.

All day and all night long our efforts were assiduous but entirely fruitless. All day and all night her little strength was failing but she was supremely impatient.

Nov. 10. and fortitude.

Little Helen

still battling for life - still sweet and patient and uncomplaining. Mr. Foster came in to tell us that he had secured Dr. Buist who claimed to be an expert in intubation. In an hour he came and made the attempt. I shall not dwell at length on this shocking and sickening incident which I hope all can forget. His awkwardness and inexperience and roughness were only manifested after he had begun. No words can describe the awful scene which followed it. She silently sank away, smothered by the operation while the family frantically seized around her. I threw water in her face turned her head downward and performed artificial respiration and strong vitality again asserted itself. She breathed and at last spoke and I only know how sweet that sound was to my ear. My Helen! speaking once more. After this she seemed to rally somewhat and for a few hours a new hope was cherished. The Doctor went away to return in two hours. He brought with him his brutal, insolent and dogmatic father, who at once assumed the most supercilious and discourteous though exacting and insensitive attitude toward the case and family. My grief and solicitude compelled me to submit to his dictatorial and unending course. At last I could endure it no longer and gave him to understand that I did not think he possessed the totality of human wisdom nor were his words the last expression of science. He insisted that the man - one which my little Helen had thrown up one day like a stone and that I knew it. I assured him I knew nothing of the kind. He talked irrelevantly but always insulting and unreasonably. Under any other circumstances I would have driven him from my door and made him feel the force of a logic and sense foreign to his ability. They left together. Near sunset the young man returned. Helen seemed to be sitting down but breathing a little shorter. He tried in vain to comfort her and make her back to recovery. As the evening drew on her breathing grew worse. Much of the time she could only speak in a whisper. Sometimes she would be unconscious for a short time and then rally again.

She looked up and said "Look, I feel quite well" through the blinding tears. I placed with her to get well for my sake; she quietly replied "Look, I find." Later she said "I am going to pass". She frequently bade us all "Good bye". While strength enough lasted she was always putting her little hand about our faces, sometimes into my hand and though she spoke with great difficulty repeatedly said "you see I don't cry". I had given her a ball which we had used in the fountain spray. Long as strength remained she would raise it up and shake it, in greeting.

Nov.

She took nourishment whenever offered, though she could swallow but part of a teaspoonful at a time. If asked to take medicine she said "No" with a firmness so characteristic that we knew this was final.

- 16 Just after midnight her condition was so alarming we awakened the children who gathered about her parents with grief. She was breathing very hurriedly. She frequently bade us all good bye and seemed more than ever to be anxious to be held in her arms. She desired to be held by them. She made no complaint though suffering awfully. When asked when she would indicate with her hands, but say nothing. It seemed the end was quite near. She grew weaker - more restless - at times unconscious and seemed to be passing away. Then she would rally and the little brown eyes would open and look lovingly and oh! so fondly at me and then look upwards. They retained their brightness to the end. They never gave fitting expression - the same patient resignation - the same masterful struggle.

At last there was a convulsive movement, a hasty reaching with the hands and Arthur lifted her hastily. I saw that she was now going peacefully home. I took her in the "cradle" where she had so often gone to sleep and then with the heartbroken mother and sister we watched our little darling as she triumphantly went to sleep in peace without a struggle. It was half past six and the gray dawn was already ushered in. Before it had always been in the twilight or the night when a little one had gone to sleep on the cushion.

 Now, it was the coming of the bright-morning. Then it was the sound of song and music which she so loved that fell upon her drowsy ear. Now, it was the mingled note of grief coming from our hearts by the magnitude of our loss. We clung about her till she was gone. Dear, patient, noble Helen! The brightness of our home, the idol of our hearts. Then, with our own hands as if it were a duty too sacred for others to perform we dressed her for the last time. The little eyes still gave light through the long silky lashes.
 The little hands rested as in sleep. The little face bore no trace of the tremendous struggle which demanded life. The sweet smile remained on the lips and I had often seen it in sleep. But our Helen of the joyous voice, the quick step, the affectionate embrace and kiss was gone. And yet she seemed to stay.
 I could hardly think of her as being gone. The children clasped each other and ourselves by turns in frantic grief.
 When the first passionate burst had subsided we sent them to call in the neighbors whom we had until this hour declined to call upon to do all we could ourselves for little Helen. I then went to the city alone with Mr. Cundall to order the casket.

We had desired to bury her beside little Grace in the yard until we could take the whole family with us and take both the little girls to the final resting place at the old church on Olivet ridge in Ohio. The authorities refused to grant us this privilege because an ordinance had been passed by the city council forbidding the burial of little Grace forbidding further interment within the city limits. Mr. Powell made earnest solicitation and careful representation of the matter and while all seemed anxious to grant our request all seemed suddenly to have acquired a respect for the city ordinances so deep and powerful that they could not consider even a technical and harmless and temporary infraction. Mr. Cundall offered me the use of a lot at Spring Hill which kindness for many reasons we declined and as we could get no Sunday train on the C. & L. R. R. R. we were compelled to make hasty arrangements to take the 7:50 P.M. train tonight. The neighbors gathered rapidly and were very kind. We made our preparations as quickly as possible and little Grace was taken up from beneath her iron bed in the yard but at half past five a short service was held by Rev. Mr. Powell and Rev. Mr. Loring the latter of whom is pastor of McFerrin Memorial church where little Helen attended Sunday School. It was now dark and we took leave of our grief-stricken children and started for the depot. In due time we were off though in spite of much effort and questioning we had been routed over the Paducah Railroad which could not get us to Jannville in time to take the afternoon Train on the O & L. R. After discussing the matter with the very courteous conductor, Mr. J. H. Keen it was decided to buy new tickets at Cincinnati over the B & O. Mr. Keen was very kind to me and did all he could to remedy the blunders which this road had made. As he got off at Louisville he laid the matter before the conductor who succeeded him, Mr. Mac Nabb, a pleasant and very kindhearted Scotchman who resides on Beachwood Avenue, Louisville, Ky. He was very kind and attentive. He told me I could call on him at Cincinnati. He superintended the transfers personally and did all in his power to assist me.

Sat.

17. We reached Cincinnati at 7:10 A. M. and at Union Station purchased tickets on the B & O. for Jannville. Though the morning was bright it soon grew cloudy and when we reached Wilmington a gentle rain was falling. This continued until we had nearly reached Jannville. At Jannville we transferred once more to the O & L. R. R. R. and just in the gloaming we reached Stockport and at Station met a great many friends and relations. Lucille & Mary happened to be there. As it had been impossible in our short time to make the necessary arrangements it was decided that I should myself to drive at once to Clinton and locate the site for the little house. I went to Henry's stable and got a team and we started.

Nov. -- just as night was closing in. The air was pleasant and warm and the light rain which had fallen had settled the dust of a protracted drought. The sky was overcast but the roads were excellent and we hurried on without stop till we reached Theo. Lynes where we found Emmet Waterwood waiting to meet us. We proceeded to the graveyard, laid off the plot and hurried back to Stockport and went to Stella King's where we were most kindly entertained and refreshed with an excellent supper. On our trip to the graveyard and back we discussed philosophically and indirectly the situation in its varied bearings. A feeling of resignation which we had scarcely hoped for yet seemed to come sweetly to us like an airy messenger to relieve our sore hearts. Though wearied with long labor and travel we did not sleep much but the kindness of our friends did much to divert our minds from gloomy meditation.

Sun. 18. The morning was bright and clear and pleasant. We rose early and walked to the graveyard in Stockport where we visited the graves of friends and acquaintances and returned before breakfast. After breakfast I was busy for a time making arrangements for the funeral which was to start at twelve. Dr. Harris had come up and stayed all night. As in the days gone by he chatted about us in our grief which I seemed anxious to manage and lighten by every possible little attention. He was compelled to return before noon. He parted in the street.

Her with tearful face and I could not help thinking how kind and faithful he had been. This contrasted strangely with the conduct of some of our immediate relatives.

It took a few minutes to go to Annie Berkeley's passing J. W. Lane's house on the way. When Lane did not make herself visible nor did she come to the train when we arrived nor come to the house to get a glimpse of our little treasure, nor did she say a kindly word, nor send any message of condolence nor token of respect, or thoughtfulness. It seemed like the opportunity for demonstrating the callous coldness of her heart and nature, the calculating characteristic of her life had arrived and was being employed with punctilious care. Backward through the years I range my recollection and recall how often I have tried to think her kind or noble or womanly. When her attentions to us in other gifts were great I would almost forget the icy conclusion which reached upon me at my first sight of her and the awful conviction that ran in my mind between her and her brother whom I had long since learned to love and admire. I have never been able to consider them in the same class. His kindnesses were those of the heart; here were those of the head and scarcely removed from cold calculation.

Today in our grief we do not need her sympathy and we can better afford to feel that those who gathered about us were sincere than to feel that we had received the officious and affected patronage of her or her despised infidel husband. They have no little ones to mourn, nor will the pleasant memories of infant prattle and childish song be theirs. Their natures are fitted for a pleasure based upon appearances and born of rank insincerity. Ours for enjoyment of warm friendship and unparaphable sympathy. After all it was as it should be for the immense silent subject of our tears and grief was, like myself, too proud to accept pretence for friendship. Yes I feel that Helen would not have wished them there. Yet it is hard to see how these narrow natures putting the first place in an empty popular esteem and witnessing the warm and earnest sympathy of even the apparently distant - the cold of other days could feel that in the ethics of commercial society it were more profitable for them to treat the little love waif, borne by the tide of untoward events only once within their reach or sight - with such cold and distant indifference. Possibly having failed with all their other weapons to vanquish or wound - as they thought this little piece of staided acting might produce a momentary sting. Considering their opportunities in life. The treatment they have received from me on divers occasions I can only consider their conduct consistent with the careful cruelty of a cold nature not indifferent to unfairness but persistently seeking it as a weapon. I shudder to think what I should feel if myself and wife were in our grief which like a cross raised us should change place with them in their sufficient self-importance. There is a satisfaction in this thing that they can never feel deeply. About all ^{and} over all and through all runs the dominant motive of their lives our dollars ^{and} ourselves. Many times be kinder to them than they have planned for us. While their cold calculations go on, while they hug the cold, drear things of life and reluctantly draw near to the cold ground which holds their bodies and memories alike we will thank God for the earnest lessons of our grief ^{and} for the earnest love upon which it was built and gave to each a hand and hope looking upward and onward forever ^{and} forever.

We returned to Stella's for dinner.

After dinner the funeral procession started for Mt Olivet. The day was pleasant and the roads exceptionally fine and free from dust. As we proceeded a number of vehicles joined the procession and when we reached Mt. Olivet the church was full and an immense crowd waiting outside. Mr. Kay the pastor of the church, preached from the text, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The people seemed deeply interested in our affliction and manifested their sympathy by their kindness and attention. Let me say a word in closing of our little Helen. She lay with a placid smile upon her face as ever she went to sleep. There was a calm beauty so sweet and touching that it almost seemed the expression of a real life. The lips were very red when she snuggled about my knee and folded her little hands in prayer. Her pretty brown hair lay in a wealth about her cheeks as when she had last left us for Sunday school.

saying "Wark, I will come back soon." The long silver locks draped over the bright-brown eyes which seemed to peer out brightly in little sunbeamed light between the nearly closed lids. A refinement of sweetness and intelligence pervaded the entire face. I can never forget its touching sweetness and its masterful resignation. And this was the last earthly view of the little face which had filled my life with brightness and joy.
 It seemed to me she was speaking a kind lesson of faith and hope and love.
 I felt as if she could still almost put her little arms about my neck and put her little hands in mine and lead me on and on. I thought of her whispered "Goodbye" and again and again through thinking time I said a last "Goodbye" to the Helen of my heart and hope. Ah! Helen, my memory in love and courage and faith, be still my guiding star in life and lead me on and on and on, and up and up and up. God only knows how much I shall miss you and how my true heart will bleed when the memories of our days and hours, our walks and plays and most of all your conquering courage and calm love and unshakable faith rise up before me. Yet God knows best and here and now I give you up but forever & forever you will hold my heart in the bonds of a loftier love, a surer purpose and a better life. Your memory will be to me something superior to the breath of words.
 Something above the examples of life - something sweet and pure and true beyond the reach of separation. I shall walk with you in thought, in work and I trust - in a sweet remembrance. Harkening and listening the faint notes of a voice forever still will fall in memory on my ear instinct with the love and life and perfect labor of my little Helen. Through life, in death, forever, the name of Helen will thrill my heart with fondle and love. Unselfish martyr of love. Clinging the thoughts that come to me in my sweetest rest hours, or in my deepest grief, a bright a perfect image of faith and love beyond the reach of words will ever be the fondest memory and the sweetest Love - my Helen - my little Helen.

See

Through blinding tears we followed them to the grave. It was the way to the church. There, side by side, beneath a spreading vine, and beneath the arch which my boyhood here put - had so often made when I attended the Sunday school in the old log church long since gone we placed our little Helen and our little Grace in one grave. We had selected this place but a short time ago. To us consecrate it with our little dead let us pray that God will make it to us a place of ever increasing sacredness and love. May He bless the spot to us and to all and draw around it a mantle of charity and forgiveness and love tender and everlasting.

We left the churchyard as the sinking sun through level shafts of softened light over the solemn scene. Many old friends awaited about to shake our hands in sympathy and friendship. There was a kindness in every face which was grateful to our sore hearts. We drove from the churchyard to the old home of my brother John. An air of quiet restfulness was about it and while they prepared supper we took a walk in the glen. We passed down through the old fields and on to the little bit of woodland at the northern end of the little place. The stillness of the gathering night was only broken by our footsteps in the fallen leaves. The air was refreshing and we wandered about the little woods till it was almost dark, and then returned to the bright kitchen where a warm supper was served with kindest hospitality. After supper we sat and talked with the family and as I heard them relate their unaffected tales of labor and trial, I could not help feeling how much more grateful we should be for the unclouded blessings which had crowned our years. Our long suspense and fatigue brought us a refreshing sleep which was sorely needed.

Mon. 19. We were up before day and made our preparations to visit the old home place where I was born and reared. At sunrise we started and drove down the old run road passing into the field at the old gate and driving directly up the steep crest down which I had often chased to the old sugar camp. I pointed out the different places and matters of interest connected with the old farm as they came to me while we drove along. Near the corner of the old orchard we dismounted our horse climbed the fence and walked down to the old grotto where I had studied, played, bathed a thousand times and often slept that which I could not change. The long drought had shrunk the streamer until a bare drip survived the pattering waterfall. The panned old maple spread its branches over land. Its leaves filled the muddy pool of dark-colored water which was once a sparkling and clear stream. Most of the surrounding trees were gone. A single small stick of the old spikenard which grew out of the steep bank below the big oak remained.

 I pulled it up and brought it away as a souvenir. We left the gutter and went up to the pretty beach-trees which grew below the brow of the hill. Their trunks still bore the letters my knife had carved there in boyhood. We took our horse and drove on to the old house where Mr. Van Anter kindly gave me permission to recollect about at pleasure. We drew a bucket of water and drank from the old well.

Then passing on to the south along the ridge we turned and descended the slope to the site of the old spring. Many of its landmarks are gone. Boulders and boulders have grown thickly about and large trees occupied the site of the old spring-house. The little road made by my father and myself and at times traveled with the bucket of water is almost undistinguishable. But memory reproduces all. I pointed out the site of the old house where I was born and of the more recent one where I spent my early boyhood.
 Not an ounce of either remains but as if Nature had a kind memory both sites were exceptionally green. It has been fifty years since the former building was torn down and removed. We walked slowly up the old road carrying a little stick I had cut as a souvenir at the site of the old spring. Annie seemed to enjoy the quiet ramble and the pointing out of the scenes of my boyish triumphs.

Nov.

We returned to the old yard where I had hitched the horse and leaving the old timeworn home of my early childhood with its big green oaks and the fruit trees I had planted about - the gathering geese and turkeys and chickens - the dilapidated fences - the old brown garden - the cheerful inmates, and all with kindest feeling and earnest wish for God's blessing we drove on to the school-house where the children were assembled for school. We went in and there upon the wall hung my picture in steel, framed in a piece of the old big school house on the slat seats of which I learned my A B C. The grand-daughter of an old friend and neighbor (John Shindler) and now teaching - her name is Virgie Patterson. We soon left this little flock and drove on to James Harding's where we made a short call and then returned to the churchyard where we gathered some flowers from the little graves of yesterday and drove on to Thos. Lynis where we stopped and settled for the expenses incurred at the church-yard. And thence to Mrs. Mello's where we made a short call. I was painfully struck by the great change apparent in the physical condition of the daughter. I could not think it was time alone. No, I fear disease is laying a foundation for rapid decline. Her face has aமை around it shadowed look but her hand seemed to have lost its form and individuality and almost nothing of physical character remained in it. I prescribed for her and hurried on. We reached Soutport at dinner which we took with Ella. She gave me some advice which imparted me intense relief to her walking.

dinner. After dinner we visited the big willow at the spring in which the owner, Capt. J. N. Hook has picturesquely placed three long board seats. Then we visited Sue Minor and spent an hour staring at her. Part of the evening we spent at Will Hatten's, a part at John Mc Swords' and then talked till midnight at Sillas and then retired.

Tu. 20. We were up with the drill dawn and found a dull, cold rain falling and the little village and big hills were wrapped in a gloomy mist. I hastened through the falling rain to the livery stable where I found the settlement of the bill for which I had for two days pleaded. It seemed Hugh had given orders to Tom McKing that "he would pay half and Tom loan half" because as he said I had done fifty times as much for both and it would be a shame to charge me. At last I compelled the bill made out saying as I did so "Tell Hugh he does not have to loan any money on me." I put two dollars more to the bill and paid it and hurried back to Sillas for breakfast, after which we went to the train. The rain grew harder as the train dashed up the valley. Outside we could see but little. At Ganesville we made a close connection for Columbus arriving at 11:30. We took a street car and visited Mand where we took dinner. The rain continues. Her little dingy quarters seemed smaller than ever. All too small for her large headed Harry. We left in the falling rain for the depot she accompanying us. We sat in the depot and talked till the arrival of our train which was late. We took the Penn. Handle 80 min. late for Cincinnati where we arrived, twenty minutes too late for the South bound L. & N. train. We were compelled to wait till 11 o'clock for a train. During this long wait Anne slept while I wandered about or talked with travelers. At last we were off on the last stretch of our homeward journey. To my gratification I found our constant friend Mr. Mac Hays was conductor. I caught some little naps as we came on.

Wed.

21. When daylight came the rain had ceased but abundant evidences of its extent were to be seen on every hand. We reached Washville at 8:45 A. M. and soon as we could get our baggage took the car for our home, where we arrived at 10 o'clock. The children were all well and of course rejoiced to see us. We at once changed our clothing and joining together all set to work to wash up the clothing and bedding and put things to right. This we deemed better than selfishly sitting down to brood over our loss. The day was bright and pleasant and when night came we had finished our task and though tired were better satisfied than we would have been to have rested all the day. Again we spent our evening as before except that our little Helen was only here an hour. Possibly we are becoming a little more reconciled to our lot.

I feel some stronger than morning though quite weak. My night was filled with tumultuous visions with and for my little Helen. The day was bright. We left Watford to do the morning work and all drove to the city to get some clothes for the children. In the afternoon I worked about the shop trying hard to master the gnawing grief which seemed to grasp me like a thermal vine. Perhaps we are progressing a little.

23.

We spent the forenoon in the library. I dictated, Annie wrote. In the afternoon I tried to work a little. There is always about me the conscious presence of my little loved one and I am always tending to look for her or hear her sweet prattle or the pattering of her little feet. She grows brighter, surer and dearer, and I would not now part her memory made as I could never deny her when she came about me and put her little hand in mine. Something sublime rises above all the grief and I somehow feel our Helen will grow greater, possibly more useful as the days go by. We are just beginning to learn how to give her up while keeping her still. So many times I feel as if she had her hand in mine and were leading me safely. I know not whither. Helen, dearest Helen, on and on let me follow you in your course of devotion and faith and love.

Sat.

I am still dividing the time between the piled up tasks of the past week, a few

- Nov. 11. professional calls and some unusual labor through all of which runs the bright memory and sweet influence of my little Helen.
- Sun. 25. A gloomy, dismal, cold, raw day. It rained and snowed nearly all day. I tried to read some but could accomplish little. Slowly, sadly, the gloomy day dragged away full of blessings, but with so little that we call brightness that when bedtime came it seemed to me it had been the longest day I had known.
- Mon. 26. Wrote and worked and read as I could. It was a dull cold day.
- Tu. 27. It was cool but bright. Annie and I drove to city in the forenoon. In the afternoon I worked in shop. Nothing seems to take the place of labor in diverting my mind from pain or grief.
- Wed. 28. Drove and I drove to the city in the forenoon and after a good deal of running about I returned and wrote some letters and worked some in the shop. I am slowly getting a mastery over my grief but so slowly and I feel that the fight is still to be long and trying. Yet I must not go through the rest of my life as a purposeless heart-broken man. Though my heart is weak too often and is weak - so often I do not think God intended it to break. Annie and I talk together much together and work together and together in love and hope.

and faith we must win, at last. Already we begin to see the gleams of the sunrise on a brighter day.

Th. 29.

Thanksgiving day. A typical, golden mist-tempered Thanksgiving day. We spent it pleasantly together in a variety of pastime, the children played at foot-ball and we took a long walk hunting for pieces of wood for rustic work. Late in the afternoon we had our dinner which we enjoyed very much and very hungry appetite endorsed Annie's careful skill and abundant preparation. I had made my usual mistake, in purchasing a wild goose instead of a tame one - a mistake which always gives satisfaction in our home. We spent the evening pleasantly discussing again and again the relations of our loss to our life.

Fri.

30. Wrote letters and read and worked in shop. With me always was the same sweet silent presence the heroine of my life world, my matchless little Helen. Brighter and brighter she grows, sweeter and nobler her memory.

The evening was calm & beautiful and the world was flooded with silvery moonlight. Annie and I were just preparing to start to the Jewish Temple when I received a professional call to go to 614 Joseph St. I went and returned shortly after eight o'clock and Annie and I sat and talked alone till late in the evening. How much we have enjoyed those fireside chats.

- Sat. 1. Another brilliant day which I divide between patients and correspondents, going by turns to my work for recreation and rest.
- Sun. 2. A sweet golden day with mists on the hill and an air of quietude everywhere. We make use of the opportunity to get our delayed writing done. The afternoon was engrossed with company that we did not get our dinner till sunset. Later in the evening Annie and I walked to the Lutheran church.
- Mon. 3. Raining and gloomy. Did some professional work and worked some in shop.
- Tue. 4. The same. In the evening the rain ceased and Annie, Waterwood and I walked to the tabernacle to hear Geo. R. Clark lecture on "To and fro in London". It was an eloquent and instructive lecture replete with literary incident, biographical sketches and humorous anecdote. His descriptions were realistic and vivid, and at times he was quite eloquent.
- Wed. 5. Walked to city and after a good deal of walking there, walked home again. It was a bright day and I was quite weary but remembering my work in the shop I soon got rested enough to write a letter after which I spent the evening in reading.
- Th. 6. Another gloomy day. I spent quite while with a sick patient, worked awhile in the shop and read till night. At night.

 7 Annie and I walked to the tabernacle to hear the orchestra of Edward Strauss. It was the most artistic music production I have seen. The fine execution of every part made it a remarkable success. No poor or indifferent work was allowed to enter into it. It had great variety and sweetness of conception and execution. We enjoyed it very much. It was a misty night but we walked home as usual.

Tue 18 No more left. I could not spend most of day with Charlie. Company in P.M. At 4:30 took Charlie to depot. He and his wife seemed pleased with their visit and with my diagnosis and advice. I saw him on the car. Annie and I then drove home. Thinking it impossible that we should see him again.

The same. The day was ideal. We put pianos in N. parlor and all the divans and chairs in S. parlor. At night a good crowd gathered and the entertainment went off smoothly and we were much enjoyed by all. Wesley led in attracting applause with his song "Daddy, Bless the bottle." He noted it well but as it was a laborious he refused to repeat it. The children all did well and I was pleased to find my own do as well or better than any others. Mrs Johns then played and Prof. Warden followed with a speech thanking all concerned. It was a creditable entertainment.

Spent the day at writing letters and reading and walking. At night we walked to the Kindee Church where Christmas services were held by the Rev. John Mathews. An interesting feature of the service was the solo "The Holy City" by Mr. Colony, a vocalist of considerable excellence. I was very much pleased.

Dec. with his graceful and powerful condition. As a soloist I would place him above every male performer in the city. Annie however was not so favorably impressed though she was pleased with his singing. Perhaps the difference in our judgments depends largely on my total ignorance of music.

Mon. 24 In the forenoon drove to the city and got the regulation goose which was a venerable gander though fat, made a few purchases and came home at noon. Spent the afternoon at work in the shop.

Tu. 25 The day was bright and crisp and while the children played at football and Annie prepared dinner I took the car and rambled in the country. Following the stream and often pausing to listen to the babble of its sparkling waters. A deep loneliness had crept over me and though I tried to think of something that would be bright or cheerful I stopped often to study the curious forms of the trees and look for specimens for rustic work I could not put aside the memory of the sweet little form that seemed to be about me always and I could fancy I heard her little pattering step and mellow voice and felt again her little hand in mine and often I paused and gazed into the stream as if it would point out its beauties to the companion of my heart. When the ground was uneven, I would find myself stopping as if to pick her up.

Dec. On, as I went with my sweet silent companion feeling no desire to return to the hum and noise of the city behind me. The sun grew warm and pleasant and there was a smell of freshness in the air. The walk was being very good.
 The quiet near me was unbroken except by the birds and water and I almost forgot the distant continuous roar of firecrackers in the distance. At last I found a small orange with its threefold branches spread in a triangular manner which I cut and carried home and upon which I hope to spend some pleasant time in my endeavor to drive from me the wolf which gnaws at my heart. I reached home at 10 o'clock and worked on my stick until dinner was announced when we all joined in the enjoyment of an excellent dinner after which I returned to my work which seems to me like a kind of worship inasmuch as it brings me back the memories of the joyous in which I delighted in working with tools and it also drives from me a little of care and sadness while the exercise is healthy and salutary.
 When evening arrived the children assembled with some of their friends and a few neighbors and celebrated their Annual meeting with song and recitation and music on the piano. The evening was spent pleasantly, the exercises went off smoothly and all seemed happy. Still in the midst of all there would mingle with a strange sweet tenderness the memory of my little Helen. When in influ-

Dec. was in reaching the deepest depths of my heart while living seems to return with comfort and force and I am often compelled in the midst of a conversation as well as when alone to turn suddenly with my mightiest effort to stay the flood of tears over the memory of my Helen, my friend, my darling Helen who said "you are stout, I do not cry," Helen, Helen! God bless you, you are always with me, though your memory is slowly leading me into the conviction of indifference to duty in staying and deepening daily the desire to go to you. Yes Helen, whatever way will carry so you are leading my heart.

After the day with its conflicting emotions I slept better than usual.

Dec. 26. I return to my work in the shop which is attractive to me both from its kind, and its association. Here always the sound of my hammer would bring my Helen, and here beside me she seems to sit while I work. Hence I like to be here even were the labor difficult. Here beside me on the bench or on the box beneath the window she sat and played with the blocks I made & there I was never homesick.

Th. 27. A light rain was falling in the morning when I started to town. I walked both ways and enjoyed the drudgery that drove away the wolf. I came back at noon & returned to my work in the shop.

I begin the new century much as I end the old, dividing my time between work in shop, which is necessary to me as the most forcible defense against my loneliness and my books and papers, changing from the one to the other much as a physician changes his line of study to have to hand. So far I have been unable to formulate any new plans, but am trying to trust God more than ever before - and with reserved faith submit His disposition.

through the woods hunting for pieces of fantastic shape for a rustic stone. After long search we secured two which I carried while she carried home the saw and a piece for a canoe. The land was heavy but by taking repeated short cuts we reached home at noon. It had grown quite muddy and disagreeable under foot. On the way I convinced her with stories and she related some of her arithmetic to me. Perhaps our trip was not altogether profitable. I have a fondness for these rambles which seem to do me good. I spent the afternoon at work on the pieces I brought home.

Sat. Having enjoyed our walk very much.

Sun. 20. Bright and warm. Went to see some patients in the morning, then wrote and dictated letters while the children were at Sunday school. After dinner took a long walk returning at night-fall.

Mon. 21. Stormy and disagreeable. I spent most of the day in the shop.

Tu. 22. Cold and disagreeable. I have caught a deep cold but divide my time between reading and rustic work.

Wed. 23. Very rainy. Made some toys and got wet. Worked part of day at mending a rustic table.

Th. 24. Worked in the shop in the forenoon. In afternoon went with Mr. Bennett to the corner of 6th & Main to see a Mr. Coleman in regard to a loan. From there walked to the Chamber of Commerce and after making many visits to different business houses walked home after night.

Fri. 25. Wrote some letters and resumed my rustic work which seems to engage my mind better than anything else.

Wed. 6. I took a long, long walk through the woods and fields and brought home a fine foot-piece for a rustic stand. It had one hundred and thirty limbs. When these are cut a little way from the main stem leaving a short projection they impart a flexible nature to the whole in every part of it. I worked some of the piece in the afternoon between frequent interruptions. Late in P.M. I walked to Mrs. Bangs on Russell St. and walked back after night.

Sat. 9. The same.

Sun. 10. Warm and bright. Visited patients and read.

Mon. 11. Reading and working in shop.

Tu. 12. The same, & am so homesick for Helen if I could only see you beside me again. I always keep off as that on the road of my tent box when I go to work at beach as I did when she was here. Many times each day I say it as if she would come. God keep you Helen till I come. It is a pleasant delusion to think of her sweet face looking up with its bright brown eyes into mine as I work. Off early for a stroll in woods. I rode with Helen to Happs' place beyond joys and then with my saw in hand I walked in direction of Whipple.

which I carried home. Altogether it had been a vigorous exercise from early morning till nearly one o'clock. But I then regretted it and proceeded to my shop work as usual until it was too dark for me to see. It was an eventful day with abundant memories well preserved in which there was much present. I often stopped in the thick mist among the big cedars and vines that seemed to come in along the roadside very pressure in their passages.

Sat. 16. Another bright day which I spent with my shop work and stand - thinking.

Sun. 17. Went in the morning to see Ben in Cato's room where they wrote awhile and read till the children came from Sunday school. Afternoon took a long walk and came home so weary that we did not go to church at night.

Mon 18. Visited Charlie Scott in the morning and came home very much exhausted. Spent the remainder of day at shop work and reading.

Tue. 19. I spent most of day in shop returning occasionally to the fire where I read till I got warm and then immediately went to my cold work again which has something of a fascination for me.

Wed. 20. The same.

Th. 21. Quite cold. The same. At night Annie, Nellie and I walked to the tobacco shop to have the Imperial Tyrolean Concert Co. They were attired in their native garb and sang & played with great spirit and vigor. A light dry snow sifted in our faces as we went and this had increased to a brisk fall by the time we returned and the ground was white. We hurried along enjoying the trip in the snow and none more than Hettie. I had grown very hungry by the time I reached home and by the warm fire we enjoyed a late lunch.

Fri. 22. As this is Washington's birthday all business is either suspended or bent to fit it. I pursued my work in the shop until ten o'clock when Fannie & Hettie who desired to go to the Caldwell school and witness the exercises there devised different plans for sending me to the High School and like a good boy I submitted and took my departure. I walked to the city and walked about attending to some business till eleven o'clock, when I went to the High school and Mr. Sewell told me the exercises would not begin for an hour and I went to the home of Mr. & Mrs. H. H. H. thence to the custom house until 12:10 when I returned to the High School and remained during the exercises, after which I visited a number of business places and walked home before my boys. I worked in the shop until night.

Sat. 23. The coldest day of the winter. I spent the day working in the shop and home and a

Feb. till eleven P.M.

Sun. 24. Spent the forenoon at reading and writing.
In the afternoon went for a walk. -

Mon. 25. I resume my work in the shop which furnishes me the best diversion and most pleasant occupation. Something of a boyhood zeal and pleasure comes back when I am working at the bench and though my work may not be profitable in a financial sense it dulls the edge of physical pain and blunts the humors of mental anguish. It does not destroy my pain nor wholly relieve the awful gnawing about my heart, but it mitigates both and is the argument for its apparently incessant continuance. I would not have it take away the memory of my Helen, which clings always about my heart and grows dearer with the days. One day when again while I work I take up the bench broom and sweep off the top lid under the window by my side where she sat to watch me work just as if she were to come in and I wished to have her seat ready. Again and again I pause in my work and look down and think of the dear brown eyes which always gazed so lovingly up at me. Then I pick up the pretty shavings she admired and lay them on the end of the bench as was my wont when I watched the clasped fingers reaching for those little tributes from labor to love. Often I feel like I am very near to her and would soon be nearer. God knows best, but whether I go or stay in my heart of hearts the memory of my Helen will be a treasure I must keep sacred. Yes, my Helen, I sometimes feel that your little hand, sublime faith was leading me on ^{and} above all the treasures of life to your matchless memory. I can not tell how you have taken my heart away with you nor how I long and long & long for the touch of your little fingers and the music of your voice. And so I must strive to go faithfully on remembering when my eyes find him the little voice which whispered, "You are weak, I do not cry. Goodbye."

Feb.

26. Edward Pennet has returned for another operation on his feet. I go to the city to procure some things I need. Met Mr. Pennet who told me Mr. Pickett would preach at Eden St. church that night on the Second coming of Christ. I walked home and noted myself by waiting in the shop. At night the evening was so pleasant and crisp that Annie and I went to the Eden St. church and enjoyed an excellent sermon by Mr. Pickett after which we walked home enjoying the walk and sermon very much.

Wed. 27

In the forenoon I operated upon Edwards not getting along very nicely. Assisted by Annie and the mother. As usual God was with me in fact and was successful and the operation was almost entirely bloodless and without-hindering incident. After the operation I carried him over to Mrs. Perin's and came away as promptly as possible. At night we walked again to Elm St. church to hear Mr. Pickett and then walked home in the bright moonlight chatting all the way and thus enjoying the journey we could not have on the car. There would seem to be a means of drawing us closer together in thought and life. We plan together build our airy castles together and lay the foundation for pleasant memories when we can no longer walk side by side.

Feb.

Mar.

28. I spent the day as usual at my work stopping reluctantly to wait upon some patients. At night we again walked to Elm St. church and home. We were disappointed both in the sermon & in the result of the walk. The evening was warm with a slight occasional sprinkle, the air was depressing and Mrs. Irvine preached instead of Mr. Pickett. When we got home Buttrick and Wesley were still up waiting for us. Wesley had been writing his essay on Longfellow and his eyes glistened like great dew-drops in the snow.

latter half. After breakfast I went with Annie and Nettie to the city and after petting worked awhile in shop and was there hindered by patients until five o'clock, after which I worked in shop long as I could see.

Sun.

3.

Bright but very windy. The children went to Sunday school in the forenoon and in the quiet of our home Annie wrote while I dictated. I feel so restless that nothing seems to relieve me and as if something bad were impending. My wolf has allowed me no rest for many hours. I often wonder how long I am to endure this perpetual gnawing. During the last twenty years it has been accompanied by an almost insupportable sore throat. I think if I could take a sleep I should feel better, but when I fall asleep I am roused by a sensation of awful suffocation which I can not even partially shake off for some time.

Mon.

I worked in shop, wrote letters and attended patients. Late in the day cut and planted some potatoes.

Tu.

5.

Quite cold, with piercing wind. I divide my time between shop work and reading by the fire. At night Annie and Nettie and I went to tabernacle to hear the Alma Heywood Concert Co., which they enjoyed immensely as it was mostly humorous. The air was very crisp and we walked both ways and Nettie surprised with her clarity and alertness. She enjoyed the musical part very much and danced along the pavement with more spirit and enterprise than any of the other children have shown on these trips. She seemed to delight in the walk.

Mar.

Wed.

6. Very cold and disagreeable but I worked some wrote letters and read, beside attending patients. In afternoon we went to the Vendome to see Klatton in the Sign of the Cross. Watson and Correll came down from the High School and joined us. Watson played his part with exquisite effect though his support was merely far from first class. He started to walk home but a nighter overtaking us Charlie got in his buggy and rode home while I went on to see a patient and reached home about dark.

7. Visited patients and worked in the forenoon and as it was Wesley's birthday "Annie" and I took him to the Grand Theater to see the Little Minister in the afternoon. We all enjoyed it very much and all walked home together. Wesley seems to be perfectly happy tonight with his presents and his trip.

drove us from the garden but I immediately resumed my shop work and this is a great advantage to me as it enables me to quickly change my occupation.

At night I stayed with Nettie while the remainder of the family went to hear a lecture at the Tabernacle on liquid air. Nettie soon retired and I spent the time till their arrival at 11 P.M. between visiting my little sick patient who is better and reading by my cozy fire.

Sun.

10. Bright but very windy. After the children started to Sunday school I dictated while Annie wrote. Giving occasional attention sick patients and reading a little by turn as the opportunity presented.

Mon.

11. In the morning having a call to go to see Mrs. Bang I took the saw in my hand and after prescribing for my patient I walked far out into the neighborhood looking for a place for a rustic stand. I rambled along hedges, climbed fences and followed streams for hours. On my return I crossed the Gallatin pike at the toll-gate and continued on south of the Warner place down the stream in the direction of home and found two pieces which though unsatisfactory I placed together on my shoulder with my overcoat and saw my way home. After dinner I worked about the place and read.

14. Went to the city in the morning and returning at three till noon. In the afternoon worked some in shop and later in day Annie and I walked over to see Mrs. Bang. It was snowing a little in the night and the air was crisp we enjoyed the walk. As we came back we faced the wind which bore a mixture of rain and snow which was very disagreeable, but the warm cozy room with the books and papers, the stories and music and final chat soon overcame the memory of the storm.

16. The day was broken up with little jobs, patients and correspondence.

We received a card in today's mail (announcing the death of our friend, C. E. Mayers,) from Mrs. Mayers at Albionville, Ky. He died at a quarter past seven, yesterday morning and was buried today. He had seemed to improve for awhile after visiting us but was taken with La grippe and relapsed.

A card received a week ago announced his condition as very critical, so we were prepared to hear of his death. He was a boyhood friend and later a pupil in my school. He had spent many hours together and for many years were intimate friends and associates. Though circumstances had temporarily drifted us apart our old relations had latterly been resumed. His life like mine has been somewhat checkered with adversity. I know not whether his had more sunshine or shadow than mine. When I think of the many hours we have spent together I recall the lines

Mar.

"When I remember all
The friends so linked together,
I have seen around me fall
Like leaves in wintry weather
I feel like one

Who treads alone
Some banquet hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled Whose garlands dead
And all but he departed."

For some inscrutable reason I have been left. I must not forget his kindness of heart and his longtime earnest friendship for me. I must try to profit by his spirit of forgiveness and charity and cherish as memory so noble the good things, so simple and sweet things and so kind in all.

One by one the friends of my boyhood have left for ever. They are many of all grow brighter and clearer and may we all be gathered safely into the Hands of the great School-master at last.

Here I got out and carried the stand to her door and then hastened away unobserved. We then drove to The Grand theater to witness "Trilby". It was fairly staged, but most of the playing was very ordinary. The make-up of the individual players lacked elaboration and accuracy. A part of the play is coarse and none of it could be ranked as very high. Taken all in all it was a very ordinary production with one or two fairly good parts. More skill had been shown in the staging than in the play, though neither were elaborate.

We discussed our possible and probable future in connection with the family, the education and welfare of the children and the best methods of securing the desired ends. We determined to be more trustful in God more careful in our relations with the children and while humbly asking guidance from above to await with whatever patience we could command the developments of the future. At night took Washy and Nettie and went to church at the Presbyterian Church on Woodland Street.

I work in shop, wait on some patients and at night walk with Annie to Christ Church on Broad St. to see the representation of the Passion Play with the characters as given at Oberammergau. A large crowd thronged the church to witness the production which was shown on a screen behind the altar. We walked home and I felt a deep painful weariness creeping over me which had been present for several days, but now seemed to lay on my existence.

Fri.

5. I was engaged in a confinement case at Yergey's on First St. most of day. When I returned I was compelled to go to six fourteen Joseph St. to see a Mrs. Haves. I was very tired when I returned at dark.

and work and letter writing. A deep gloom and inexpressible loneliness clings about me and I can not shake it off. Whatever I may do the patter of little feet seems to echo in my heart and the longing for a little voice from hushed quarters stronger than in the days gone by. I wake from a many troubled sleep often so vague I can recall but little yet in that little there is much, so much of little Helen. I seem to be hunting, hunting, hunting for her. Sometimes she is peeping out at me from behind my chair - always she is clinging about me and I see again in her deep brown eyes the old love more deeper and fonder. When daylight comes I seem to have dreamed of her all night long. I listen to my bench and from force of pleasant habit I again take up the broom and sweep off her seat on the box beneath the window where she left everything to sit and talk with Dick. I walk away but find myself stopping often to look down into the brown eyes which are gone.

Sun.

7.

This is Easter Sunday. The children go to Sunday school and Annie to the Catholic Cathedral to see their ceremonies which she has never witnessed. I sit down alone and write until Wesley returns from Sunday school. He plays a number of marches for me and I in turn tell him a number of stories about Wolfgang & Christian. The remainder of day was spent with patients and writing.

Mon.

8. Rained most of day. Warm and sunny. I started early and walked to J. Williams beyond the end of the Fetherland St. car line. It was a long tiresome walk. I spent two hours there and then returning to the corner of 9th and Main got the saw I had left and started on a long walk through the country looking for a foot piece for a rustic table. I walked far in the direction of Maplewood and then after many meanderings bearing away to the westward I reached home about half past one very tired and as empty-handed as I started. After dinner I worked hard till nightfall and after nightfall Wesley and I went out near Ligon's Lane and I climbed up into a hick-berry we had often admired and sawed out the top to get the piece I had hunted for throughout the day.

This act met with some remonstrance on Wesley's part who was a warm admirer of the tree.

Tue.

9. Waited on patients and pursued my rustic work. At night Annie and I walked to the tabernacle to hear John Temple Graves lecture on "The Reign of the Demagogues." His address was very incisive, impassioned and scholarly. He is never at a loss for words and his words are always well chosen. I enjoyed this entertainment as much as any we have had during the course.

Journal and in the afternoon went with Wesley and Kittie for a stroll in the woods and brought back a raggy piece of orange for a stand foot.

Fri.

12.

Very rainy. I worked in the shop. Late in P.M. took the boys to city and bought shoes and went to the Vendome where we waited in line till six o'clock to procure tickets for Rip Van Winkle. Mary Kelly accompanied us. It was a long, long wait, but we were rewarded by a most excellent performance followed by an address by Joe Jefferson in which he referred to having played the same piece here in 1868. It rained nearly all night.

Sat.

13.

Attended patients and worked about shop and house.

Sun.

14.

Bright and pleasant. After the children had started to Sunday school we took the car and went to West End Methodist church to hear Chancellor Kirkland of Vanderbilt University lecture on the Book of Job. It was a very scholarly and interesting lecture and received the most rapt attention from beginning to end. After the lecture we walked home as we have often done before chatting about whatever afforded most interest and taking an hour to complete the trip. After dinner we posted up the Journal together and made preparations to return to the evening lecture in the same place on the same subject. In the evening we returned to the West End Church and heard the concluding lecture, after which we walked home enjoying as so often before this opportunity for communion of thought.

Mon. 15. I worked in the shop and wrote letters by turn.

Tu. 16. Worked in the garden nearly all day. At night we went to the lecture-room of the First Presbyterian Church to hear the Rev. Richard Tjader's lecture. His fine personality, his magnificent physique, his prime and vigorous young manhood, were refreshing to look upon. As a missionary he had traveled around the world and his exuberant vigor had found vent in his strong athleticism in the jungles of India where for three months he supplied a starving mission by shooting antelope. He had also killed three elephants in self-defence. He formerly belonged to the Swedish Army where he was noted as the strongest man among its 8000 soldiers. His frank open countenance, bright eyes and clear complexion were striking evidences of a pure life. He discussed subjects from a very lofty standpoint and with beautiful simplicity and earnestness. We enjoyed his lecture very much and after it was over together with the appreciative audience we went up and shook hands with this splendid man. I shall not forget the beautiful earnestness, the frank sincerity and the beautiful simplicity of his expression as he looked directly into my eyes and said "Pray for me, brother." I have been a long time since I saw one whose strong physical personality and intellect quality of life impressed me as much as Richard Tjader. We both enjoyed the lecture very much and walked home discussing it.

Apr.

Wed.

17.

It rained all day and I divided my time between correspondence and reading & phono work. I am suffering with a heavy cold which added to my other ills and the frequent attack of "the wolf" render me quite irritable and unfit for physical work by myself where I shall not come in contact with and violate the rights of others.

Th.

18.

It rained all day and in nearly all things this was an exact reproduction of yesterday.

Fri.

19.

A cold rain mingled with wet stripes of snow and accompanied by a keen wind rendered the day very disagreeable. Mr. Walter Penrock who stayed all night with me went with me this morning to the city where I procured material for legging for his son Cedar and which on my return I cut and moulded into form and prepared for the crippled leg who is improving rapidly. It ceased raining toward night and Charlie and I went to the First United and Presbyterian church to a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. which was addressed by the Rev. Frank Strong; subject, "The Coming Revival." He was earnest, scholarly and finished in his presentation of this polemical subject. He walked home as before enjoying the crisp atmosphere.

Apr.

- Sat. 20 employment, as soon as our visitors had gone I proceeded to the workshop which by association with little Helen and a favorite kind of work has become kind of a shrine to me where I can retire when unfit for other tasks or when rendered too disagreeable for pleasant association with others. Here I spent the greater part of the day at inlaying a small piece of East India Mahogany in which I inserted thirteen sets. At night I sat and read till nearly midnight.
- Sun. 21. Cold, dandy and disagreeable. Spent the day in reading and writing. Evening, Maria and I went to the Woodlawn St. Christian Church to hear Mr. Lord, editor of the Christian Standard.
- Mon. 22. Working in shop.
- Tu. 23. Put in the entire day at inlaying. At night Maria and Wesley and I went to the Tabernacle to hear the musical entertainment - the Six Smith girls. It rained all the time.
- Wed. 24. I worked in the shop and wrote letters.
- Th. 25. I worked in the shop till nine o'clock and then wandered for many miles through the woods looking for a rustic piece to finish up my last stand. I enjoyed wandering among the tangled vines and trees though my trip was very disappointing and I came home empty-handed after wandering many miles. I was hot, thirsty and tired and a great feeling of gloominess pervaded my thoughts. I wore out the evening yet my dinner and wrote some letters while the boys went away on a visionary trip nearly to Maplewood to get a piece I had cut in the morning. They stayed so long that at dusk I went to Dr. Davis's crossing to meet them, but they had got home, coming another way when I returned. They had brought the wrong piece and had a hard heavy load to carry a long way which was only fit for firewood when they got it home. Such lessons will be necessary to teach them better attention to direction.

Apr.

Fri.

26. I spent the forenoon with patients and a little work and in the afternoon took Wesley & Lancel and went to the woods again and brought home two pieces of hack-berry.

Sat.

27. I am tired and sleepy, visited a patient before breakfast and afterward began the task of making my rustic work. It was hot and I was lame and, not in a good mood for the patient work necessary to get the best effects. Yet my anxiety to get it done made me hasten on though the flowing sap made the bark feel and rendered the work quite difficult. After dinner Annie helped me till sunset. I had secured two pieces. I was very weary and the assistance she gave me was very timely and agreeable. Though weary and sleepy we enjoyed our long pleasant evening as usual.

Sun.

28. Sunday morning, an ideal spring day. The air is laden with perfume and song of bird and the distant hum of bees. The children go to Sunday school carrying wisteria plumes for their Teachers. The cows graze in the yard and Annie and I sit on the old log seat and talk of the past and the future. It is the old, old story, the easy planning, the difficult performing. Yet it must be so with life always and we must get our pleasures from the planning mainly, though God has been very good in granting us pleasure in the fulfilment of many of our plans. Possibly out of them too many grow some good to others, which would be a large recompense for whatever of failure and disappointment we sustained. Our yard is like a dream of beauty. The birds are building, bees humming and a refreshing breeze from the North makes conditions for enjoyment perfect beyond comparison. Everything seems to be happy or satisfied. The cattle lie lazily in the shade, the horses take about selecting the daintiest grasses and our head in the trees by the fountain the orioles are making thorough search for their dinner of insects passing occasionally to fill the air with a tone of thankfulness and joy. Year after year these birds have come and reared their brood within a few yards of our summer house and seem to enjoy our company just as we do theirs. How very much we have to be thankful for. We can not "count our blessings" as the song directs. O, if our lives could only be as useful and as prolific of good as the opportunities warrant.

At night we took Wesley and walked to the Philip St. church. We had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Thatcher and William Phelps in solos. The evening

Apr. was very pleasant and we enjoyed the walk home in the moonlight.

Mon. 27. I put the day in at work on the rustie stand I was trying to complete for Setta.

Tu 30. Fixed the water pipes and worked about the yard.

May

Wed. 1. Very warm. I put the day in at different jobs and occasional reading.

Thurs. 2. The same. At night went with (Linn) to the first entertainment of the May Festival. The night was warm, the ventilation poor and we were badly treated. We could neither see well nor hear well and the accompaniments of the laboratory under the gallery are abominable. The orchestra was fine and Theodore Thomas was there. Yes, he was there and knew it. He seemed stiff, formal and lacking in the earnestness his great theme would seem to inspire. He has long ranked as the greatest musical director on the continent. His numbers were all classic, long and elaborate. The effects were complicated and multiform and required a sustained attention which under the circumstances to me was tiresome. I came home greatly wearied and though I had enjoyed a good deal I had suffered more and my entertainment ledger did not balance in such manner as to encourage me to repeat the evening's experience. Besides I had a clear conviction that much greater benefit would result from sending the remainder of the family and remaining at home. I was tired in train and home and my self was always in leash. . . .

May.

Fri.

3. I turn my attention to a little impromptuous work of a more congenial nature to me than my experience of last night. I had long meditated on the propriety of writing something for publication. Yesterday I began it. Today I addressed myself to it more persistently. In fact I spent most of day in seclusion-house jotting down material for a rude cast of my prospective book. I do not know whether I shall think best or whether God will think it wise for me to continue it. I have asked Him to direct me unselfishly but usefully in its production. . . .

Sat.

4. Wrote in the forenoon. In the afternoon took Wesley and went to hear Thomas's orchestra. We got good seats in the gallery and were very much pleased with the entertainment. His rendition of the Funeral March was exquisite, but what was most pleasing to me was his powerful rendition of the Kaiser's Military March. It had all the pomp and pageantry of an successful war. The sturdy Teutonic tramp, the salvo of artillery the defiant roll of the drum were shadowed with great clearness and effect. We enjoyed it together discussing it as it progressed. We walked home together Wesley remarking that under such music he could not to be sleep at night". It is his usual custom to go to sleep in prolonged entertainments. In this he was very much weak. As night came and Hattie went and I remained at home and wrote.

May

Sun.

5. I read in the forenoon and in the afternoon. Annie and I went to Fitis Music Hall to hear Mr. Shinn of Boston preach on Universalism. His sermon was very clear comprehensive and to me sound.

Mon.

6. Worked some in garden and wrote remainder of day.

Tue.

7. Waiting on patients and writing by turns throughout the day. I am beginning to write a little story which may ever see any other light than that which falls upon the manuscript. Unless I live of it - the labor will be one of unselfish devotion.

11. Worked all day. At night went to the Lyceum to hear Prof. R. S. Moulton of Chicago lecture on the "Romance of the Bible". The lecturer is an elderly man with gray hair and distinguished head of fine presence and excellent delivery. His knowledge of his subject is wonderful. His memory prodigious. He could quote whole chapters without break.

- May. of reference or error. We enjoyed his lecture very much.
- Sun. 12. We put in the day and evening at a library feast. We attended three lectures by Prof. Moulton, the first at the First Presbyterian Church at 11 o'clock on "Eternity, or Is Life Worth Living?" It was a very scholarly and masterly presentation of the subject.
At three thirty o'clock we attended his lecture on "Job; the World's Greatest Poem." The audience was large and appreciative. He handled the subject in a scholarly and highly dramatic manner which we trasted strongly with the presentation of Chancellor Kirkland. At night we attended his lecture on "The Book of Revelations; Psychology in Symbol," at Christ Church.
- Mon. 13. In the forenoon went to the First Cumberland Presbyterian Church and heard Prof. Moulton's lecture on "The Literary Study of the Bible as Illustrated from Theology and Criticism." It was a light pleasant morning and we walked home. In the afternoon at four o'clock we went to the First Presbyterian Church to hear the last lecture of the course, "Deuteronomy, or the Farewell Address of Moses." After the lecture we did a little shopping and walked home.
- Tu. 14. Resumed my visiting and wait on patients and do a little work between times. At night went to Ward's Seminary to hear Prof. Leon H. Vincent lecture on "Samuel Johnson and his friends."

WORKS BY PROFESSOR R. G. MOULTON

The books and pamphlets of Professor Moulton, though produced from time to time to meet particular exigencies, are designed as installments of a life work devoted to the investigation and exposition of literary study. They are based upon the belief that the study of literature, in any worthy and adequate sense, has yet to begin; and that the work of the present generation is to differentiate literary study from other studies with which it has been entangled, and to proceed tentatively towards the true field and method of the study of literature. Two classes of readers are kept in view: the general reader and the special student of literature. Hence, as far as practicable, the aim in each case is at once to expound particular pieces of literature and to formulate or illustrate methods of study.

 The books here mentioned may be obtained in the ordinary way through bookstores, the publishers and prices being given in each case. Or they may be ordered by mail addressed to "University Press, University of Chicago, Chicago;" prices quoted include postage; checks, etc., payable to "University of Chicago."*

I

The foremost necessity of literary study is the application to it of the INDUCTIVE method of Criticism, distinct from (though not opposed to) the "judicial criticism" which has prevailed hitherto. The exposition of this criticism is combined with a study of the branch of literature most desired by an English reader, the plays of Shakespeare.

Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist: A Popular Illustration of the Principles of Scientific Criticism.—Third Edition.

Oxford University Press: England (price 7s 6d)—American Branch, 91 Fifth Avenue, New York (price $2.00).

A somewhat fuller exposition of the method is outlined in Syllabus No. 30 (see below). The Syllabi numbered 7, 29, 62 belong to this side of the study.

2

Another foundation principle is to connect literary study with the great modern conception of EVOLUTION. This is illustrated in application to a field of dramatic literature most important intrinsically and for its bearing upon Shakespeare—the Greek and Roman drama. The works are treated in translation, no knowledge of the original languages being assumed.

The Ancient Classical Drama: A Study in Literary Evolution. Intended for English Readers.—Second Edition.

Oxford University Press: England (price 8s 6d)—American Branch, 91 Fifth Avenue, New York (price $2.35).

With this goes the Syllabus numbered 39, and its accompanying Book of Illustrations, specially intended for those who have not access to the best translations.

3

A most important side of the study is Literary MORPHOLOGY: the true conception of such forms as lyric, epic, drama, and the like, and the bearing of this on the interpretation of literature. The natural field in which to apply morphology is the ancient Hebrew literature called the Bible, both because of its intrinsic importance, and because ordinary versions present it in a manner which entirely obscures the literary form.

The Literary Study of the Bible: An Account of the leading Forms of Literature represented in the Sacred Writings.

London: Isbister & Co. (price 10s 6d)—Boston, etc.: D. C. Heath & Co. (price $1.75).

Biblical Literature is in another work treated less technically, with a view to the general reader, and the matter of the sacred books.

A Short Introduction to the Literary Study of the Bible

In preparation: Boston, etc.: D. C. Heath & Co.

4

The three books last named have touched another side of the study: recognition of the Unity of all Literature. Quite apart from the consideration of Greek, German, English works in connection with Greek, German, English language and history, there is a study of Literature as a thing in

5

One important aspect of literary study is that which regards Literature as the Philosophy of Life, and Fiction as the experimental side of that philosophy. This is indirectly reflected in all the works named; to which may be added the following:

Four Years of Novel Reading: An Account of an Experiment in popularising the Study of Fiction. Edited, with an Introduction by Professor Moulton.

Boston, etc.: D. C. Heath & Co. (price 45 cents); London: Isbister & Co.

With this may be placed Syllabus No. 10.

The LORD'S Controversy before the Mountains

Hear ye now what the LORD saith :

THE LORD

Arise, contend thou before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice. Hear, O ye mountains, the LORD'S controversy, and ye enduring foundations of the earth : for the LORD hath a controversy with his people, and he will plead with Israel.

O my people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me. For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of bondage ; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. O my people, remember now what Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him ; remember from Shittim unto Gilgal, that ye may know the righteous acts of the LORD.

THE PEOPLE

Wherewith shall I come before the LORD, and how myself before the high God? shall I come before him with burnt offerings, with calves of a year old? Will the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams or with ten thousands Shall I give my firstborn for my transgres-

And thee, O man, what is good; and what require of thee, but to do justly, and to love the Lord thy God humbly with thy God?

THE LORD

And, and who hath appointed it. Are there of wickedness in the house of the wicked, treasure that is abominable? Shall I be pure inances, and with a bag of deceitful weights?
When thereof are full of violence, and the thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is

The Modern Reader's Bible.

The Sacred Scriptures, presented in Modern Literary Form.

By RICHARD G. MOULTON,

M.A. (Camb.), Ph.D. (Penn.),

Professor of Literature in English in the University of Chicago.

COMMENTS QUOTED BY PERMISSION.

"'The Modern Reader's Bible' is altogether admirable and of special value,"

HENRY C. POTTER,
Bishop of the Protestant Epis. Church.

"To the student, and to all persons who relish truth in its finest form of expression, it is a positive boon."

JOHN F. HURST,
Bishop of the Methodist Epis. Church.

From a letter written of the Gospel of Matthew :

"I have examined it with great interest. It is a valuable addition to the helps now available for Sunday School workers and all teachers and students of Holy Scripture. It will give me great pleasure to commend it to my Sunday School teachers at their next teachers' meeting."

R. S. MACARTHUR,
Pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, New York.

"I look for a large increase of interest in the Bible, for a much better understanding of its general spirit and teaching, and especially for an increased appreciation of its inspirational power, from the publication of 'The Modern Reader's Bible.'"

LYMAN ABBOTT.

"It must be that this natural and rational arrangement of the different styles of literature in the Bible will commend the book itself to people who have hitherto neglected it, and give to those who have read it and studied it with the greatest diligence, new satisfaction and delight. I sincerely wish for the enterprise a constantly increasing success."

JOHN H. VINCENT,
Chancellor of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle.

I continue my writing. I very much fear that the only purpose which would induce me to write is merely probable of fulfillment. Yet, I feel as though I should write and possibly some hidden good will come out of it like many other things which I have discarded or been dissatisfied with. I am quite lame again and this time with more pain than usual.

Sat.

16.

Went to Ward's Seminary to hear the last of Prof. Vincent's lectures on American humor, i.e., from Artemus Ward to Mark Twain. This lecture was not so scholarly as the one on H. S. Johnson, nor did the application of the term humor to that quality in the representative American appear to me accurate. However it pleased Annie immensely whose idea of humor is somewhat different from mine. After the lecture we went to the Rooms of the Old University Club to see the art exhibit this is being made there by local artists. After studying the pictures awhile we walked home and I wrote while Annie got dinner. After dinner I planted corn till night. At night we went to the Vine-street Methodist Church to hear G. T. Sweeney.

- Mon. 20. Spent the day with patients and in writing a story.
- Tu. 21. The same. At night attend recitation at Ward's Seminary.
- Wed. 22. I write and do a little work by turns. I suffer so much physically that I am too wretched for work and too uncomfortable for rest. Mr. Lyman Skinner & wife spent the evening.
- Th. 23. Divided my time between odd jobs and writing. Walter Pennock and Edward came this evening.
- Fri. 24. Went to town in the forenoon and then spent rest of day in fixing shoes and operating for Edward's feet. A storm in the afternoon destroyed a number of my trees.
- Sat. 25. Tried to work some in garden but was compelled to lie down. It has grown very cool rendering a fire in the grate necessary. I spent part of day in writing and in evening went to see

May Mrs. Hudson.

Sun. 26. Cold, windy and disagreeable, I suffer so I am unfit for any duty.

Mon 27. Spent the day with patients and at writing.

Tu. 28. Working and doing a little medicinal work.

Wed. 29. Wrote in the forenoon. In the afternoon worked in the garden. In the night called to see Mrs. W. D. Hudson. Annie went with me. While there Mr. Williams of East Nashville made a similar demand on my services. Of course I had to refuse her.

Th. 30. We got home about six o'clock in the morning. I felt very much exhausted but was soon called to relieve a child at Mrs. Rhoady's that had taken a lethal dose of a strong medicine. Dr. Frost, the younger Dr. Leach and myself worked with it for two or three hours and saved it at last. As usual in such places the hard work falls to my lot. As I was already very lame this made my task very hard. In the afternoon and evening Mrs. Hudson and I did some writing.

Fri. 31. I am quite lame and suffer a good deal. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner of Chicago spent part of the day with us and I did some little jobs and read.

June.

Sat. 1. Went to the city in the forenoon with Annie. We called on Mr. Hudson on our way home. In the afternoon packed my box for my trip North and worked with my vines. I retired with more pain than I have felt at any time this winter.

- Sun. 2. Kept busy with patients and company. In the evening we walked to Tabernacle to hear Rev. D. T. Sweeney preach on 'Why I am not an agnostic'. It was an elegant and powerful sermon.
- Mon. 3. He went to city and got some things to take north with me on Wednesday night. I am getting books and presents for my friends but I do not think they always appreciate them. In P.M. looked after patients.
- Tu. 4. Warming up. Helped her potatoes in A.M. In P.M. packed box for departure. I dread this trip more than I can tell. Yet it must be done. I worked all P.M. and wrote in my story book. At night Mr. Reyer broke up my rest and I did not sleep an hour.
- Wed. 5. Warm. Went to city in morning and got some more books to distribute. Took the boys over to get their reports. Both are promoted. Came home and worked hard at packing and getting ready. I am much exhausted and much annoyed. I never hated to leave home so badly. Everything is so fresh and green and I feel like I needed rest. I do not know if I shall get back to the dear ones but trust all in God's hands. After packing we got ready with the box strapped on behind the old bonnet and all got in and drove to Union depot where I parted with my dear ones and took a seat in the crowded car. It was a hot night and the car was full. I suffered all night and slept little.

I am so lame I dread any little sway of the car. The morning air is fresh and sweet from the heavy rains of last night. Nearly all night my mind kept running on home and my writing which somehow interests me pleasantly.

(At 8:20 we started Cincinnati and left in two minutes. Till now I had not the courage to attack my lunch. I eat in hopes of feeling stronger. At 1:00 we reached Blanchester and find it raining and the people plowing the road. Water on the ground. Reached Newark at 1:15 in a hard rain with a dull heavy sky. Pools of water are everywhere. After five minutes stop we are off for Ganesville. Reached Ganesville at 1:30. It was not raining here though it had rained here last night. Got to Starkport at 4:15 and went to Miss Walker's. Stella soon called up and asked me to go to down to store after I got down writing. I promised and she left. I went later and found the ideal Mrs. Glass there but she did not recognize me. I did not go close to her lest she knew. Mr. Albert Pirsch was there, and we all talked books except Mrs. Glass who stood during this half hour just behind a pile of books like a piece of statuary of whom the lower half was visible. I could not get with the idea we must have seen her. Stella was the only one who could see me. I kept of commercialism and commercialism mercial standard seemed to be applied to all their mental processes and an indifferent, general abandon had become a matter of course. At 4:10 took train to Chicago. Weather not so. By 6:00. The evening was very cool and I again slept well.

A vibrant day and a pleasant day. I walked out to the hills with Rozman and saw the condition of his flock. Everything seemed to be going to wreck and both Sarah and B. are aging rapidly. I grew deeply lonesome in looking at all this and thinking how it must increase with continued force and how utterly wretched and cheerless not to say helpless this condition must soon become. I tried to entertain them but a deep gravity of gloom seemed to hang both like over their faces and thoughts. It made me homesick and I had difficulty in repressing a selfish wish for the morning that I might go over. I so much desire to get placed back to my flock. However I did my best and spent the day in talking loud roaming in the fields. True it is very discouraging to look over the wreck of things here and again and again I thank God for the blessings we enjoy.

June

very sad and walked across the little foot-bridge and down the road lightly without looking back though I knew Sarah was standing there and gazing sadly after me. Used keep them both and lighten the great load that is resting upon them.

Reaching the station I got my ticket and walked to where my youngest brother was. I met him and he was very busy and cheerfully but could help seeing in him a reserve and coolness that was peculiar.

In answer to my questioning he told me that William and Sarah were married and left me and went to his work asking me to come and see him. I returned to the station and sat by the window writing while he painted in front of the window in plain view of me at 15¢ per hour. It seemed strange he could not spare 15¢ of time to talk to me, especially as it was possibly the only hour I might ever be able to see for that purpose. He was brown and sturdy looking though aged a good deal since I had seen him. I could not help feeling sad in thinking of his narrow lot and life which seemed to grow narrower and more unpromising as I looked forward. At 9:40 took the train to Lowell. Spent the day with Dr. Harris and his brother George. Slept poorly at night.

11. Took train to Swifts where I talked with old acquaintances, patients and friends till 9:30 when I crossed the river. Mrs. Baldwin crossed with me and we walked slowly to where the road leads up the high hill. There we chatted for 15 or 20 min.

Sun.

He told me he felt like he was surrounded with men from hearing Blackmer's say 20 words about me. ^{7th} He took him to work - he going back to the factory and I following the bridge with the water. I left the road and stopped a few minutes at the clear babbling stream in the thick shade of the ravine. It was so cool and inviting that I felt impelled to wander up its rocky bed but I knew what I had to do and left the shade and song of birds for the steep hot road and was soon at top of the high hill. I went to the house where we talked quite a little bit and then he and I went on to Mt. Arint church where I visited some more and then returned with him to his barn where I again spent some time in directing work and started a man in Stoughton. On the steep hill above the Geo. McVeigh place I sat down on a large rock in the shade and wrote a page in my memorandum book and then walked to Stockport - against 11:30 A.M. The thermometer marked 92°F. Had dinner at Harris and talked awhile to Jas. Mc Swords. Wrote a letter to Carrie and spent remainder of evening in writing.

Wed.

Very warm and depressing. Had spent all the forenoon here and took dinner with me. I visited a few people, went with Mr. Lyne to see Mr. Edwards and spent some time in working here. I had wanted to write that the father had written for me and found me within half an hour of my first arrival and insisted on my going to see him. They considered her case hopeless and had sent for her friends to see her die. She seemed to take new heart on my coming and was very determined to get well. She grew up and stronger. It is rather a hard task for me to put in an hour here in this narrow, hot sick-room but it seems to accomplish so much that I am doing it. I am very lame again and very dull and low-spirited. I wish I were ready to start home. At 4 P.M. I came in much exhausted, went to my stuffy room opened the windows and in spite of the noise of the street and a disagreeable odor of the remaining slope I slept for an hour. Then I felt brighter, and when I came down for supper they handed me a letter from home. All were well and after supper I wrote a long letter home addressing something to each of the family.

13. All day waiting for Tom to get down with the horse. They arrived down and came back for tackle. Got another team and at 2:30 got started. It began to rain in an hour. Jas. B. Keam and I drove as far as Elmer Sheets's and took refuge in the barn where we remained till sunset as the rain was continuing. Then we turned back and passed Tom's deserted wagon about half way up the mill-race hill. Got to Clara's at 8:30 and was not asked about supper or trip. It seemed to be agreed that I stay away. I gave Mrs. Walker a letter this morning as she would not loose on me and thought it prudent.

Jan

that I was not asked how far one had got on the road nor who furnished us something to eat in the rain. I hope this condition will never be repeated by a more decent community. Whenever I return to my room after going over the river its appearance indicates that I am not expected back. I have regretted a dozen times that I did not go to hotel. The hostess seems to have plenty of time for her diversions, her visits, trip to the Laramie Hotel, the best one tells her her boarders. She has asked me to talk to her wayward son. I must do this more thoroughly than she has looked after my comfort.

Feb 14.

Rainy morning. I talked to Belmont Walker for an hour, depending to his interest in his mother and in his improved condition. He seems kind and intelligent, He has become pale, thin and intensely nervous. His circumstance is that of a hardened and inveterate transgressor. After dinner J.B. Kean and I went to Mr. Christ and set the laundry men stone and soon back. When I went to where he worked and helped him. I gave him a suit of clothes and was going to look him up and he seemed gratified. On our way back we stopped at his house and ate cherries. Got to Stockport after dark and went to see Lda Mc Dermott. Talked a good while to cheer her up. Then went to my room. Early I had not been expected to get back and was very glad for some reason. I wish I was ready to go home. The man seems to want me when I pay. The commercial air is everywhere. Country seems to have a price on it.

June

Sat.

15. Up at day and walked till breakfast. Met A. F. King on the street. He is very strange. He assured me my friends could not be glad to see me. "No, no" she said gravely and emphatically, "they can't, they are not joyous-hearted." I returned to the house and got my breakfast. An air of coolness and dissatisfaction seemed to be native. I walked out wisely. I did not need to come back. I went to see Ida McDermott and to Tom McKing. He & then left the town and went on to Mrs. McKing's, thence to O. P. Prokav's where I was very strangely entertained for not many minutes, thence to Mellor's where I was kindly greeted and entertained. For the first time since I got here I feel somewhat at home. They set me a nice cold dinner and then we talked till supper when a big rain came on. I sat in the door and look out on the rain. It is so pleasant to see it coming down in torrents and feel one is almost at home. The oil does not seem to tincture these old friends. Talked till late with Annie and her mother and then was sent to an upper room with a bed where I slept sweetly. God bless this room and these people forever.

Sun.

16. Up and enjoyed a nice breakfast over which we talked and enjoyed God's blessings as if all at home. It is cloudy and looks like rain. At 11 A.M. it began to rain hard. Parley and wife went to church and left his mother and Annie and myself all alone all forenoon. We chatted about people and other things. In the afternoon I intended to go down the Bottom but it rained hard and I stayed all night. Again I stayed in my room. Tomorrow being my wife's birthday, neither asked me to come in and see her.

Sun.

Mon.

17. Walked down to Blackmore and spent the forenoon with Tier and family. They were very kind and very glad to see me. After dinner walked to Miller's got a package and lingered for an hour talking. I walked on to Starkport and saw Mr. Atkinson on the bridge. He had waited long to see me and now his train was almost here. We talked a little bit and he was off. I got a letter from Brange Co. saying my work had been shipped on 13th. Now, I must wait. I am disappointed as this keeps me so much longer than I expected. I must again to see poor Ida. She is worse. Talked till late with Andy Walker who told me of the town and its people. He seemed very conversant with most things pertaining to the place. We stood in front of Ang's store. He looked up and sent home, saying as he started off "will you come up and look a little while this evening. In a little while he came back and when I went in, he showed a side bit without a light came out with something in his hand which I took to be a money-drawer and returned as silent as a "ghost". Had a letter from home this evening saying all was well and this makes me feel better.

Tue.

18. Cloudy and cool in the morning but soon grew quite hot. Called on Mrs. Langley and dinner Sunday and Ida McDaniel. She is still I am growing so homesick or rather I might say so tired of staying in Starkport. No one here to be very glad to see me among these citizens except those who desire something from me. Near sunset Tom Mottugh told me the snow had arrived. Now, I will get off sooner and this thought gives me new heart. I walked with Dr. Lyne to see Ida who seems better. Then we walked to the Bald Eagle bridge to see the ravages of the storm and flood on the levee. It was what I predicted and is very formidable. It was a clear demonstration of the argument I have repeatedly made with the owners and advocates of this dike. It has taken fifteen years to convince them of what I pointed out at that time. Among these students of experience is the venerable Capt. J. M. Hook whose work in this direction was ruined. At 83 years of age he admits to me the soundness of my suggestions fifteen years ago and says it is the only thing that is available. At night I wrote letters and slept but little. My wolf had returned

Mon. 19. Up at dawn and made bed, washed & I walked half an hour. Returned to find the Town sleeping. After breakfast loaded monument and went to Mount Clinton by way of Lunker Chute. It was a long hard trip. The roads were washed and it was necessary to have men on each side cling to ropes to hold it from slipping. It could only be a few rods at a time and I think we might have one of the wind-broken boxes brailing for a mile. Jas. B. Kean and I kept just ahead in a buggy examining the road and returning to see them over the worst places. It was a fearful trip and it was a great relief when we got up that awful hill. Kean and I stopped at Anna Shute's chertone and were welcomed heartily.

and at their earnest solicitation took dinner. Then we drove on and got to Flint before the moon set. Then we all joined hands and got it unloaded and set up by the F.M. and drove home. Not home but back to She-henung. It is well done. I am glad it is over. The Lyne agrees to clean up around it and now when I get all paid I will be satisfied. On reaching the town I went with John to see John who is better. I have written to Annie and the men, women, &c.

Th.

20. Spent a little time with Ida Mc Dermott, stopped a few minutes at Mrs. Danglebury's then took train for Mc Connelville, stopped a few minutes at Franklin hotel to see a patient - then to Democrat office and on to Wesley's where I took dinner. After dinner visited Jas. Mc Swood and talked awhile, spent an hour with Stenberry and an hour with Dr. Naylor who seemed greatly pleased with his last literary mission and then took train for Stockport. Supper at Walker then to see Ida then to John Mc Swood's where we sat and discussed the situation at Stockport as they understood it. I learned a great deal about Add and his increasing and disagreeable peculiarities.

I had omitted to state that Carrie Gillespie and Monas were waiting for me when I returned from Mc Connelville. He is looking much better and both were very grateful and glad. It was a shock when I came in but I kept little. I am most anxious to get away.

Fri.

21. Went to see a few patients in the forenoon. In the afternoon went to see the Democrat and gave him some from the little tract into which John who had rejoined them. He was much pleased. I was quite tired of the

June reading long before I heard but it pleased her and brightened her and so was continued. After I had ceased reading I hunted Kean and settled with him. This place is growing more trying all the time. I get nothing out of it but every one seems to want something out of me. I ate my supper, walked down past Stella's rapped sharply on the door and though I could hear them in the kitchen they did not seem to hear me. The sun was almost down but I turned quickly away walked across the bridge took off my coat and climbed the hill and crossed the fields as I had so often done before. It was cloudy all over now, the lightning was dancing around the sky and rain seemed imminent. I strode on rapidly and reached Mr. Surro's half an hour after dark. I called and his wife came out. I asked if Mr. Surro lived there. She said he did but had just gone to put his horses out and pointed where he went. I asked if I could stay all night. She said slowly and very dubiously. "I don't know about that." Then I told her I would sit down out there in the road and wait for him. She did not ask me inside the gate. I sat down and waited some time but he did not come and I grew chilly and got up and walked a bit and then felt that it was ridiculous to sit in the road and wait for a chance to get invited to go in when I had only three days ago been importuned to come in he said his wife wanted to see me. It was threatening rain and the wind was cold and disagreeable, I was wet with sweat from walking and did not care to prolong this cool entertainment. It is a strange and shallow hospitality that refuses shelter from the Sun. storm at night unless credentials are presented. I turned my back on the place gladly and soon drove away my chilliness by long strides over the road I had just traveled. I went on to see John Galt woods folks and they took me in. I was wet with sweat and too tired to sleep but spent the night in tanning. I got here just as it began to rain. Mrs. Bob McEwold would have left me to take my chance in it at night unless I gave her my gun and basket by telling her my name and how I was always. This reminds me of my trip through Kansas in 1864. I shall not go there ever again.

Sat. 22. Ate breakfast and walked with Ernest a little while and then I read some and lay down and took a nap. I was awoken and found it quite warm but a good breeze blowing. Walked over the hills to the old grove where as a boy I hunted so often. The pool was there and I hunted with a gun across my steps. The raspberries were beginning to ripen and the fence was I stopped to pick a few. It reminded me of the days when I used to gather them on these same hills and carry them to my mother. When I returned the sky was overcast and the rain just beginning to fall. Dinner was waiting and beside my plate was some of the cider that Ernest had saved for me, from his last years labor. I enjoyed my dinner very much and sat in the porch to wait till the rain was over. At 2:30 the sun came out and I started on my trip to Abinet carrying the remains of an old violin that belonged to my ^{oldest} brother when I was a boy. A strong breeze made it pleasant walking. At 3 P.M. I am sitting on the east side of base of monument beside the grave of my Helen. I have just weeded out the two little graves and now I sit alone. I long for my flock again and wish they could now sit by me and so near our two little sleepers. What memories troop through my mind as I sit here and think of the house I spent with Helen. No words can tell how much I miss her nor how I yet love her. She grows purer and dearer as time flies. Her example grows more precious to me each day. Her courage should inspire me to greater sacrifice and devotion to usefulness. Though I often would stay I must go on. I feel that I want to stay here - yes here by little Helen - though my love and duty to my dear wife and children call me homeward. I wonder if I shall visit her grave again before I come to lie down and rest beside her dear friends and I trust mine. Helen, my dear, dear Helen forgive the tears that blind me. I can't be brave like you, dear child, but I must not forget your dying words of courage and love. "You are dear, I don't cry, Goodbye". Goodbye my little darling, till I come again though I leave you my heart if I leave.

I walked on to the Lyne's and was sorely disappointed to find The. was gone. I left a message for him and five dollars with his wife and walked on to Stockport - often stopping to gaze again at the far distant - amphitheatrical hills that were so beautiful and green and sweet and all seemed to my woe. I reached Olaris about sunset hunted up some old friends and got some business off. This work took till midnight and when I came in strange lightnings were dancing over the whole sky. I lay down and tossed feverish.

Sun. 22. Thinking of the strange discoveries of the day. At last I fell asleep but was awakened at 10 o'clock by a mighty storm accompanied by continuous awful roar of thunder, and one of the grandest displays of lightning ever seen. The blaze was nearly continuous. In the midst of this awful grandeur I again fell asleep.

Sun. 23. Breezy and cloudy. I went to see some patients in the forenoon and spent most of the afternoon with Tom McDough and wife. I had taken dinner there in company with John Ryan. From Tom I learned that Hugh is steadily moving more and more and his condition more hopeless. Late in eve Chas McDermott came down to Tom Harwood and back at dark. It is hot and sultry. In the night we had another tremendous storm and I slept but little.

Mon. 24. Very hot. Took a team and went on Big Bottom with a petition to the Com. for Commissioners. Learning that the fund assessed and collected to pay the old Starkport-Bridge claims be disbursed. I had a good team, fresh air and a pleasant ride. All seemed glad to see me and all signed the petition. W. H. Stark was very grateful for my work in getting up his daughter, Ida. Offered to sell me twenty acres of his farm at my own price. Mrs. Tim B. Watkins would to build a house for me. I saw Wm. Gatewood at a short distance, but he did not seem inclined to draw near. Got to Starkport and met Charlie McDermott who was to go with me to present petitions to Starkport and others. He walked vigorously down making vigorous remarks and I was left alone. I determined to take the bull by the horns. I knew Stanberry was playing a double part and determined to go after him with a Saxon hammer. These people would talk but when it became necessary to work I must do it myself. And I am determined to do it. I will compel Stanberry to sign this petition or confront him with his duplicity and denounce him to his teeth. I am determined to put the fox into the trap. I will not leave this work to an other - I will go myself. I have determined to humiliate him or denounce him. Whichever way it may end I am victorious and he is defeated. Yes, I am longing to reach him and bring the battle on.

At last I am ready to leave the place. Clara suggested that I call on Stella and say "good bye". I called. She was engaged. I told her daughter not to disturb her and started away. She appeared at the door and called me back. I returned and talked to her a few minutes during which I gave her my reasons for not visiting her. She seemed very sad but I brightened her up a little and bade her "good bye" and walked quickly to the station. Took train at 4:14 for Mc Combville. Called on editor of Democrat and several others and procured signatures to my petition. No one refused. Called on Worley and though they insisted on my staying with them I did not remain as they had a sick babe which was quite cross. I went down to the shop to excuse myself from staying and there met Bob Mc Sword who talked very insultingly regarding to their action a few nights ago. This ended in a bitter quarrel.

June

in which he told me he did not care what he had ever treated me right or not. We agreed to pursue different courses and I am quite sure I would never want a favor at his hand. I was sorely tempted to knock him down. After he had quitted I followed him into the shop and remained quite a bit to give him opportunity to resume. He however waited until after I had gone and then set up his blather. I hope I am done with the contemptible puppy. I stopped in at F. M. Buckles to get his signature and was just going out when he introduced his wife who had just come in. I was just going to step out when she said "this is the Dr. Woodward of whom I have heard so much." I suddenly recalled that my nephew had once shared an office here. This sent a flood of thought through my mind and I turned to walk to the window and an hour conversation followed in which we discussed literature and particularly Hall's ^{The American People} ~~Constitution~~. She expressed herself as very glad to have met me. Both she and I had enjoyed this little talk. We both were apparently brightened. I went to the Hotel Franklin after having called on Wesley again and slept in rather quiet. The night was a great deal of lightening, thunder and rain.

Up early and proceeded to get the signatures of business men. Went to Whitaker's house and met him before he had any opportunities for consultation as to the policy of his proceedings. I am sorry had gone to the state convention at Providence. He must be seen. Would I visit him or go there. Staying here would be easier.

Managing him there would be much more difficult yet I would be one day farther on my way. I determined to go there. The heavy rains of last night had washed the railroad badly. My train was half an hour late. It was probable I would miss my train at Knoxville. Got conductor to telegraph to hold train. In this way made immediate connection. It is very hot. Reached Columbus at noon went to Neal House and tried to find Strawberry. Thence to Republican convention at the Auditorium - telephoned several times but failed. At last learned the delegation would go home by 6:10 B & O. train. I took up my position between depot and street and watched for the fox to come. His old time alertness and craft were not impaired. I promptly engaged him in a conversation which interested him but he soon grew restless and wanted to get on the train to get home. He knew that the gate man's duty was to stop every person who had no ticket. I asked him him if he would sign a petition to Commissioners asking for the disbursement of that bridge grant. He said impatiently "yes". He was then near the gate. I put my hand right on his pocket and quickly thrust it in his face. He was surprised and appalled. He was caught at last. He now tried to avoid me in preference of getting on the train. He drew nearer the gate. He asked me to go down to the train feeling sure that I could not get through the gate. Soon as he presented his ticket to the gateman and suddenly stepped behind him and just as the man was punching his ticket I darted through the opening ahead of the fox. The gateman attempted to call June me back but I had previously crowded in such a manner as to throw three other men in the gap all of whom were anxious to get through. He must look after them. I was through and no policeman to stop me. Strawberry followed through looking disgusted. I walked beside him to the steps and down the steps to the car. Then he tried again to get in the car. Thinking that there would again be trouble. At the car steps I insisted on his signing. He placed it against the side of the car, signed it, pushed it backward to me without turning his head and without a word and putting myself up the steps like a great gopher and disappeared in the doorway. It was clearly a deep humiliation which he had long desired. Move on, Strawberry, move on.

I returned to the Davidson Hotel, wrote to Charlie McDermott and to Tom Harmer enclosing to the latter the petition with Strawberry's signature. I threw my windows all open, stretched myself on my bed, weary in limb but content in mind over my days work. I slept but little. I remember nothing with a laugh at the mental picture I had seen at the car-steps. Whether I get my money or not I have at least put the fox into a trap. Though he may not see he will catch me. Move on, Strawberry, move on.

Wed. 26. I am up at 4 A.M. and go for a walk. I saw something of Washington from an old man on street and decide to go there after breakfast. Went up by electric car having a very pleasant ride. On car I saw for the first time the notorious Ellen C. Meyers - known me following

Mr. Lewis' political handman. He was one of John's managers two years ago when he was thrown good and hard. He has a bad face, but is undoubtedly smart. He has coffee from the way to Worthington. Further on we passed "Chaseland" with its old square-looking house and big trees. This was the home of Sal.
 P. Chase. It is now owned and preserved by a wealthy citizen of Columbus. Reached Worthington about 8 A. M. The car line passes through the principal street whose sides are adorned with large shade trees from one end to the other. It has ten stories three black-south shops one bank and one drug store and about 800 people scattered over a wide space.
 There are probably 600 people within the station and the rest are scattered

It is all fairly swarmed very good many were seen and in its shady sidewalks it was so still I wondered if a special official were necessary there to awaken the birds.

I walked over most of it and in the afternoon Mr. Seere took me two miles beyond to see his place. I went all over it but did not like it. I suffered much and the heat was very depressing. I ate no dinner and on returning I left him and walked five miles inquiring as I went for small places to buy. None to be got at reasonable prices. Worn and weak and sick I took car to Neal house near which I stopped at a restaurant to get something to eat because I needed it. I do not know whether I am most home sick or stomach sick. After eating I walked over to the state-house where I sat and watched the squirrels at play under the trees for a little while and then returned to the Davidson hotel and retired early. I was weary in brain and limbs and so depressed by heat and bad air that I could not feel like I had interest in anything. I took room No. 10 again at the top in the corner and put all the three windows open. I took a sponge bath and went to bed. I could look directly into the depot and see the moving trains, hear the screaming engines clanging bells and rattling vehicles but I slept from sheer exhaustion.

- Th. 27. Breakfast at 6:30. Car at 7:42 for Brown City. It is hot and close. I dread this day's work. The ride to Brown City was delightful. The country is flat and rather uninteresting. The lots in Brown City are small and the houses rather uninviting. I walked over to Beulah Park which is poorly kept. The usual number of swings and seats were distributed promiscuously. A large cage held two inferior fillety coyotes. Had a pleasant ride back to the city where I stopped at No. 112 N. High and saw Mr. Wiper, real estate agent and made inquiry about ground north of Columbus (1) to a restaurant and got dinner. Then got baggage and left on a B & O train 30 minutes late. Got to Cincinnati too late to catch the L & N and had to wait five hours. It was a wretched five hours. It is very hot and I can only go in and out and wait. I drew my own smoke and sweat plus insect everything and the water is very muddy, nasty and warm and unfit to wash in. I am sleepy and wet with sweat. Oh! if I could only be in the bath-tub at home. At 11:20 we start for Mill Dale where we transfer to the L & M. and are off once more for home. Mr. Keene was courteous as usual and seemed glad to see me. We reached Nashville at 8:40 in the morning.

Fri.

28. Went to Keene's got the rebate on my ticket and took a car home. I was very much exhausted and though I tried to rest I seemed so worn out that I rose weary. Spent most of day in talking over the trip and trying to rest.

Sat.

29. We tried to get matters straightened up and Annie and I made a short trip to the city. We sit and talk and talk and talk as in the olden time. It is too hot to accomplish much.

Sun.

30. We spend the day at reading and writing and entertaining visitors. The pending heat continues.

Mon.

1. Called in the morning to meet Dr. Miller at 614 Joseph St. I quit my writing which was a pleasurable occupation to go after the professional duty. I found the case practically moribund. Met Dr. Miller again at 6 o'clock. Patient looking a little brighter.

Tue.

2. Met Dr. Miller again this morning at 6 o'clock at the same place. Dr. Miller looks spoke with unfairness and bitterness of tone to me of the treatment and its results and said she wanted no more Doctor's treatment.

I promptly withdrew after assuring her that I had given no treatment nor been in charge of the patient. Why she attacks me instead of Dr. Miller is curious. I was glad to be relieved and return to my other duties. Dr. Miller seeming glad to continue in the case. It is so hot and close that I can accomplish but little.

W. 1.

2. Helped direct the cleaning of spring & fire pump and went to see Mr. Sanderson child.

24.

7. This is the Columbus Fourth and I spend the time at writing while the remainder of the family make preparations for the mighty event of the evening which is to take place at Pop. Hall at 8 o'clock. The day was hot and the committee work heavy. In the evening I had enough of the mighty event and thought it most prudent to lie in the hammock while the remainder of family helped devour the viands, shoot the fireworks, dish out the ice-cream, make speeches, furnish patriotism of a loud type and faddminate till toward midnight. They came home heated, intoxicated and mad. I suppose they saw somewhere an excellent article of patriotism with a Southern stamp on it.

Sat.

5. Helped repair the coal house and superintended the getting in of the hay. It is very hot and by night I am very lame.

Sat.

1. It is still very hot and dry. The pasture is burned up and the ground bare. I spend the day at writing while the remainder attempt to recover from their committee work.

Sun.

7. Hot and dusty. I write letters and read and wait on patients.

Mon.

8. Still hot and dry. Look after some patients and write some on my little stamp.

Tue.

9. The same thing. The fields are dusty, the grass gone, most of the weeds are dead. When one walks in the pasture his steps produce a dry crackling sound. The sky is white and the sun shines with burning fierceness.

Wed.

10. The same.

Th.

11. A veritable hot wave sweeps from the Northwest. When it strikes the face it produces a dry burning sensation as if it came direct from a furnace. It licks up any possible moisture and scorches the leaves and corn-Hedges. Many of the trees are dying. The temperature is 102° - sky clear and no prospect of rain. Work of any kind is almost impracticable.

Fri.

12. We started early for an outing at White Creek. Though hot, it was not nearly as torrid as yesterday. The hot wind which the weather bureau had predicted for us proved to be a refreshing breeze. We reached the creek about - some distant road in a few minutes.

July

The children were in the water. Annie and I took our old place on the elm roots, she with the book "High-lights" and I with my book and lines. One thing swept through my mind all the time and I could not put it away if I tried. Little Helen was not sitting between us now to catch the fish in her dimpled hands. I did not catch the fish either and for that purpose the little hands were not needed. We ate our dinner on the pebbly shore in the brook shade. All were hungry and all ate voraciously. After dinner I went in the stream with the boys simply to please them as I did not feel much like going in the water. The breeze was cool enough to make the day pleasant here by the stream and we remained till five o'clock. As we drove home I could not help recalling how little Helen slept on my lap as we came over the summer road the last time. But here her - now she is sleeping as safely in my heart. The moon seemed anxious to come home and hurried along in the face of the retreating breeze which made the trip homeward not unpleasant.

Sat. 13 Hot and disagreeable. Try to write but accomplish really little. A few clouds in the sky but the prospect for rain seems very poor.

Sun. 14. Some clouds with a breeze from the North. Some writing, some reading, some

Fr. 26. Visited some patients and wrote as I could. I do not accomplish much on account of interruptions and heat, but I believe it is generally the case that rapid work on this line is poor. I can easily see that mine which is poor at best would easily suffer by haste.

Sat. 27. Another hot day. We take the children and go with Mrs. Webb and her children for an outing to White's Creek. I went in once with the boys who enjoy these excursions immensely. I do not think that either Annie or myself enjoy them so much as when we go with our own children alone. We reached home just at dark and the children were happy and tired.

Sun. 28. Still sultry with little prospect of rain. The fields are brown and almost as bare as in winter. The streams are dried up. Trees are dying and a general air of distress prevails. The drought and the heat are the chief topics of conversation.

I spent the day in reading and late in afternoon Annie and I went to call on Mr. Pickerson of Hancock St. and thence to Mr. Hudson's on Troutland St.

Mon. 29. Went to the city in the forenoon and in the afternoon wrote some upon my story.

My Creed.

I think that many a soul has God within,
Yet knows no church nor creed, no
word of power,
No law of life, save that which seems most fair
And true and just, and helpful to its care
And kind, and bold, that set alone as free
That lays upon another soul its share
Of human pain, of sorrow, or of care,
Or places a doubt where faith has ever been.
The more that souls with longing joy
the best
To keep other heart it moves, the more,
The freer to make its own condition blessed.
To love God is to strive through life's most day
To comfort grief, to give the weary rest,
To hope and love—that, surely, is to pray.

The difficulty was finally settled agreeing that in the future the first of the cooking should take the cook's when it catches the eye of the Ten glass is shattered through in the forehead. Left Nashville at 7:50. Had trouble with ticket and bought another. Crowded car and a hard trip.

Nov 28. At Cincinnati. Very wrong and pained. Train for Columbus at 8:15 A.M. Reached Columbus at 10 A.M. Ran to ticket broker and back barely in time. Reached Zanesville at 1:30 P.M. Met Mrs. McDermott in the depot and had a long talk. She denounced Dr. Maylong bitterly for his freedom with his characters in Ralph Marlowe. I took the 4:15 train to Malta. It was a dirty, dark, and smoky train. Reached Malta at sunset. Went to Worley & Gatewood's for supper. He kept me till 9 P.M. Carrie Gatewood then came. I went at ten to hunt hotel. Both full. Went over river to the Morgan Hotel. It was a hard place, filthy and uncaring. But one room available and such a room. Nothing in it but a forbidding bed and an unrightly old stand. The window door would not close but could be sprung far enough to get in with a big wooden block which served as a button. No water, no towel, no washbowl. Got the stupid man to hunt up one of each. From the time it took to get each separately and the different directions of his steps he must have gone many places. At last he brought all but the towel and wanted to know if that would do. I told him "No". He went and after a long time brought a dirty, stinking, wet towel which I supposed belonged to a laundry near by. I said if it was the devil's dishrag. He used the dirty rag on a fire and I never touched it. I washed and dried my face and my gown.

Up at day. Paid and waited to Walsley at 5:10. They were not up. Walked to Franklin hotel and got breakfast. Then to courthouse and got data from clerk Mr. Conagle. Saw Auditor Whipple who agreed to look up the records for the information I wished, and write me at Stockport in the evening. Went to Stockport and called on C. H. McDermott. He had done nothing and seemed only to be interested in himself. Spent the day about Stockport waiting for report from Auditor. I suffered great pain and was very sick and weak from loss of blood. The report did not come and I went to John McSworde and took a bath and then to Central Hotel. A what a terrible night! I suffered terribly and slept little. All night the most shocking obscenity and blasphemy and loud ribaldry poured through my little window and robbed me of the little rest I might have got.

Fri.

30.

Weak and sick. Went to Chesterhill to see Mary. It was hot and the roads were very rough. This aggravated my pain and sickness. Put the time till train arrived at arranging for our meeting with the Commissioners. Took train for Watford. Waited at B. Z. Harris, suffering great pain and sickness with terrific aching. Found Carl and Lucilla and Emmet and Paul all there. Put in a night of pained and broken hours up

Aug. and down, my affliction growing worse.

Sat 31. Still worse. Hard pain in the morning. I gathered my strength and made tea and drank freely. Lost sixteen pounds in three or four days. The great loss of blood makes me weak and the deadly sickness keeps me in deep distress. Added to this tremendous rigors shake me like an aspen leaf. I do not rouse the people, but creep softly out and back shivering like a frozen waif. These chills are hard to bear and soon as they pass a scorching fever swept through me. But last was good and I slept some. I am so worn and exhausted that I feel like falling asleep all the time. The discharges are now pure blood. I will stay till evening and do my best to get better.

Evening - Have had a hard day lost a great deal of blood and am so weak and sick. At times I grow very cold and faint till I feel as if I could not stand up. I spend the long, awful night alone.

Sept
Sun

1. I am up and down all day. The great loss of blood continues and I am so sick I feel in danger of fainting quite often. In the afternoon the blood checked for a little bit and I tried to walk on the hill in the good air. Walked a mile and got back very weak and lay down. At 7:30 P.M. I awoke and at 11:30 got up very sick and stayed up an hour. So weak that I lay down but soon got up and came near fainting. I did my best to ward it off. Got water. Then got down on a block as I would not take and vomited a great while. Then hunted all through the kitchen and pantry and got some soda. Vomited awhile longer - too weak to stand I sat and vomited and suffered excruciating pain for another hour. Then the pain abated some and from weakness I slept about two hours.

Mon.

2. Up at day, sick and deeply pained. Still losing a good deal of blood. I eat ice and eat nothing else on my stomach. Have not had a chance to write to Anne and in this book is good. Some having long hard fight and the end is not sight but I will fight to it. I have avoided putting the folks to some trouble - one trip to get ice. I am not in the least despondent though my sisters are alarmed and I avoid showing distress. God is with me still. At six thirty left for station eating ice and feeling weak. At 6:50 reached station. I had left my sisters with the assurance that I was a tough fighter and not in the least inclined to give up and telling them I hoped they would remember I was putting up a good fight and hoped they would do so. Saw Schob at Waterford. Told about Deenie. Got to Stockport. Saw Miles Hopkins & ∞. Called on Jane Wootton and Sue. So very, very weak. Bought a package of crackers from Dr. Lyne, got a lump of ice and went by myself and munched a few of the crackers - only a few. Called for a few minutes on Linnie R. Bonney but did not go in house. Stopped about five place to place, to place but no rest although very weary. It seemed something was always in the

I went to the beach and tried to find a place to rest among the willows but could not find a place where the water was sweet enough. My waterclothes are almost dripping. I went through the night till sunset - then went with Mr. Fouts to the hotel. They were very kind and in the same old room with its wide open windows I slept some and suffered much.

Up at five A.M., breakfast at six and went to Stockport with Mr. Fouts. Took train to the Cornhill. Arrived at nine. Met commissioners at ten. So weak and so sick. All forenoon spent in discussing and going about and getting things fixed. Dinner at the Cornhill Hotel. All afternoon in a struggle with the conceited weak little Fouts and the contemptible Lightthizer.

The fight is long and bitter and ends only with the close of the session. We seem to have an apparent advantage. I can see they are growing uncomfortable under my stinging arraignments. All go to Malta to take train for S. I reconsider and go back to commit Fouts to the bond which I have him write. Spent the evening at Worley's and retired at 11:30. Slept but little. Up and down.

4.

I immediately plunge into the contest. All forenoon we are ignored and treated shamefully. Every little pretext is made use of to shove us aside with the evident purpose of passing us out and working us. I finally ask an hour of leave. Lightthizer comes 1 P.M. I go to Worley's and while eating a cup of broth Carrie Waterman comes in and I retreat. Dinner at Cornhill Hotel. Lightthizer does not keep appointment. After long waiting me send and fetch him. We have complied with all he asked. He now begins to quibble. Finds some fault with the bond which has been written by their attorney, Fouts. Suggests senseless changes. I promptly interpolate them. Now he has no excuse. I have driven him to the wall. He asks me to retire until they hold a discussion, after which he promised to make me a proposition. We retired I was disgusted and indignant. Strawberry, the little, now appeared upon the scene. He told us of the proposition they would make which was to pay half and he advised us to take it. The others were all willing but I indignantly refused. We were called in at last and the proposition presented to us. A long and bitter wrangle followed. Though scarcely able to stand I poured a bitter flood of sarcasm and denunciation, telling them I was not for sale at any price. I asked them if the honor of Morgan Co. demanded that the hard-earned debt of a woman of eighty-four should be feloniously cut down in half that it might numerically match the price for which Judas Iscariot sold Christ. I could see that my stinging speech was very hard for them to bear. The other claimants drove me from the room but argued in various ways with me in vain. They urged me to accept the offer "on their account". Some of them were angry, and in the end all attacked me bitterly because I would not yield. I finally walked before the Commissioners and demanded that they should be set for hearing me tomorrow. Lightbizer named nine o'clock. I told him I wanted it to mean nine o'clock there and referred to his previous appointment by the manner in which he violated it. I let the mad crowd go home to Stockport and remained to plan the battle for the morrow. I called on Ed. Alderman and he promised me to talk with Lighthizer. I picked up some information and arranged for a heroic fight. I was now so exhausted I felt that I must rest. It was nearly sunset. I had talked till I was very hoarse. I went to the three hotels but as the fair was on they were all crowded. I went to Jas. Belchis; they were very kind and I got some supper and sleep, thought up and down a good deal. Between these maps I planned a hot and formidable attack for the morrow.

Sept.

Sept.

5.

5. Hot day. I did not wait for the afternoon to get up from Stockport but began a spicy skirmish soon as I reached the town. Met Stanberry on the street and denounced him for his duplicity. Later he came to me in courthouse yard and began a bitter quarrel. I specifically stated facts which proved his iniquity. He suggested that we part company but seemed desirous of further argument as if he hoped for a concession on my part. I promptly rebuffed him which seemed to enrage him almost to the point of insanity. I referred to his convenient and inaccurate memory and finally ended by ordering him off like a dog. He got in his buggy, drove very slowly a few yards watching me closely, then he got out and hitched and came back and began to threaten to expose the actions of the Commissioners. He asked to have his name taken off the band. This being the act of a baby I directed him to go to the Commissioners and go

Sept.

it off. He still seemed to wish to influence me by his threats. Finally ordered him off like a dog. He went up to the Commissioners room shaking with anger and disappointment, but he did not do what he threatened. He may do so later. He will do whatever his interest, duplicity and spite demand. Later I took the bond containing his name and A. P. Littaker's and with a pen erased it with heavy cross-hatch lines and sent it to him by special messenger while I sat a few rods away.

When he went into the Commissioners room he said he didn't intend to be bull-dozed and wanted to withdraw all advice he had given them if they went out with the air of a disappointed scoundrel who had been put in a tight place. The other claimants immediately began to charge me with having ruined the chance to get anything by making Stansberry mad. I retorted that if they were ready to worship Stansberry they might begin now. That I was glad of the opportunity to force him into it. When he had gone I set J. A. Love at Lightizer and a bitter quarrel ensued in which Lightizer was made acquainted with the danger that lay in his attempt to cut down our claims and the almost-certain exposure of official misfeasance which would follow his attempt. Then the Commissioners came to their senses. I had already alarmed the conceited and ineffectual little Fouts through another messenger.

It became well known. I then went down to see Frank Dickey near the Fair Ground. I had scarcely reached there when Seymour Beswick and C. H. McDermott came asking me to go back and make some kind of conciliatory statement to the Commissioners.

Sept.

saying that to be sure they this was all that was necessary to secure the payment of the claims. I told them I was willing to do my own talking to the commissioners, that I had no apologies and would go up and do and explain statements as I could. I drove to town and drove over there. Reaching the room they closed the door and without waiting for them I began by demanding specific statement. I was answered that they desired an apology. I had none to make. I told them at once that I could not dishonor the respect I held for a mother of Highland. Such a suggestion was when one of them used the term bull-dozing I remarked that I did not have a tittle of respect for a bull-dog - that I never stooped to such methods - that they were cowardly and detestable and that I did not propose to submit to even the least of it. I was growing warmer now. They saw their mistake and delicately suggested my making friends with Stanberry. I declined and denounced Stanberry vigorously. Then they said that was all and agreed to pay at the next meeting and we went to dinner. When I was seated at the dinner table C. L. Alderman, who came to Stanberry and took a seat beside me. In a few minutes two of the commissioners, Highberger and Vilhepse came in and sat opposite us. I had no conversation with either though Alderman and myself did and talked long after they had gone out. I observed they watched me narrowly. After dinner I went to see Ben R. Kelley and from there to the depot where I took train for Stockport. A deep melancholy pervaded my entire being. At Stockport I found the claim and satisfied with the results of my stubborn fight but still dissatisfied with my method, which alone had won their victory. The unfairness and ingratitude of this people is stinging my heart against them. I am growing to hate the place more heartily than ever. It would be a stupid person who could not see the magnitude of my work - its difficulty - the heartless lack of support - nay, even the bitter opposition I was compelled to overcome to win this fight, and this opposition, bitter, unreasonable and absurd coming from those whose interests were common with mine. I won their fight for them in spite of them. Without me there would have been no fight - and with me, sick, weak, almost fainting but victorious there was no sense of gratitude. These people are fit for pirates provided their combined courage were millions multiplied.

I went to John Mc Swords's, got a basin of water, took a bath and started quietly for Mellor's where I again hoped to rest. At the depot I met Tom Mc Hugh, good-hearted Tom, whose kindness seemed so refreshing among the ungrateful crowd. He enquired where I was going and would not consent that I walk. He went himself, brought a team and drove me to Mellor's. There I met with the old-time kindness - a light but tasteful repast was brought in and here among my friends I ate and rested and felt almost at home. At ten I retired and got some refreshing sleep. Of course it was broken, but it was free from the noise, and fume and disagreeable atmosphere of Stockport. I od these these people for their kindness to me under trying circumstances.

5. 3 p.

6. I got some good sleep last night - though it was broken. This morning we had a good breakfast, pretty breakfast and I enjoyed it after which he talked till ten o'clock. Then we went to see Marie Townsend and cheered her up all I could. - Came back to Mellor's for dinner. Then went to Henry Blackmer's where we talked for two hours and then to C.A. Buck's where I met and examined Ida and prescribed and then to Tim Blackmer's where I remained till sunset. The news of the Assassination of McKinley has just reached the people here and fills them with consternation and grief. I returned to Mellor's and stayed all night. Mrs. Mellor is as kind to me as if I were one of her family.

5. 7. I started to Mt. Olin. Climbed the long hill to Cabinville. It seemed so big and so long and I was so weary. The sun was hot and I sweat profusely. I went across the hills climbing the fences and reaching the road at the old Marmory place. Then I walked down to the church and sat down on the base of the monument by the graves of my little ones. I rested a long time. Then I got up and weeded out the little graves. It was pleasant to see the flowers some were hard pressed and some had grown up and were in full bloom. The ones I planted were young, mostly and the ones were still green though having a hard struggle for their lives. It was refreshing to think the little graves had been cared for in my absence. God bless the hand that plants and waters flowers there. I sat and wrote in my note book and weeded and then went on to Mary's at 11 A. M. I was so weak I lay down on the floor and rested. Spent nearly all the afternoon on the floor. In the eve near sunset the pain subsided somewhat though it never left me. I took this opportunity to write to Annie. At night I had some good naps but much pain.

Sun.

Very smoky with mist over all the hills. Set off to Stockport but it did not help me. I stopped at Mr. Spicer's but did not go in. He lives in the old school-house which I last attended. He has moved it into the middle of the grove where we played ball. The great oak which served as one of the bases has been recently cut down. The fence looked remarkably small and looking back I am more surprised than ever before how I managed so cleverly to avoid being struck by the ball in that small place. Once I recall there were fifty throws at me in succession not one of which touched me though often only a few feet from the thrower. I recognized many of the old trees and walked slowly away through them with a feeling of regret like I was parting from old friends. I walked on stopping occasionally to rest. The peach trees along my way were bristling with beautiful luscious peaches which I dare not eat. To assuage my thirst I sucked the juice from one as I walked on. On the hill near Stockport I met Levi Galbreath who told me Mr. Kinley still lived.

Sept.

I went on to town and rested and wrote letters. Went to Central Hotel and tried to eat. It seems to do little good. After dinner I went to the graveyard which is sadly neglected. Then down through the thicket of briars and bushes to the stream and up to the place where years ago I had planted willow slips to save the bank. They are great trees now and though it no longer concerns me financially it was a pleasure to see the marked victory which attested the soundness of my plan which I was assured could not succeed. I rested in the shade on a great rock which had been turned over by the raging torrent - and then went down to call on Sue. She and Rose were together. Stopped at Linnies and at John Mc Swords's. How strange and chill and distant and reserved they all seem. I go to Central Hotel and sleep. Have a better room and get better rest.

Mon.

9. Up early, hurry around and give power of attorney to C. H. McDermott to act in my place at the next meeting of County Commissioners. Went to John Mc Swords's and asked him if were willing to go on my bond as the Commissioners desired. He talked indifferently though he consented. I told him to let it rest until I notified him determining in my own heart that he should not feel that I were under any obligation to him for such a favor though I had done him many greater. I left him, walked to his house a few steps away got my sachel and as I had two bowls of water and the use of the garret to bathe in I gave them twenty-five cents against his wife's protest and hurried on to the station where I took train at 7:52 A.M. I never left Stortefort with such satisfaction. It seemed to me to be growing smaller and smaller, nearer and nearer all the time. Reached Jansenville and took train in thirty minutes to Columbus. Thank God I was out of the dear old valley.

At Columbus at 11:50 Got dinner and hunted up Brad. Then went to his home at 251 Park Avenue. The weather is very fine. Myriads of furious mosquitoes keep up a constant attack. I stayed all night. Suffered a good deal. I like this new home which fronts on a narrow park.

Tue.

10. The rain last night gives us a good atmosphere. I got up early and took a long walk before breakfast. Then came with Brad over to High St. and went on to Worthington Boro and cloudy. I spent the day looking over Worthington and talking to the people. Took dinner at the Central Hotel. In the afternoon walked toward Columbus looking at property and making inquiries. Walked nearly to Clintonville and took car to city. Got supper and went to Brad's. I am very weary. I have walked so much today.

Wed.

11. My hard walking yesterday made me sleep better last night. Started to Westerville and changed my notion. Took car to the end of line on High St. near Almantangy Park and walked on to Clintonville examining and inquiring about property. Then walked back to city and got dinner and then took car to Worthington. There I talked with Mr. Lewis the merchant who gave me much needed information. Mr. Bryan, a kind old French man took much pains to show me about and get information for me. Then returned to Columbus and got supper and at 5:40 started for Cincinnati, where we arrived at 9:40 P.M. At 11 P.M. got a ten cent lunch and fifteen minutes later got off for Nashville. It was raining steadily and rained all night. The car was crowded, smoky and disagreeable. The trip was very tiresome.

Sept.

Th.

12. The sun was shining brightly when I reached Nashville. Took the street car and reached home at half past nine. I was very weary and tried to rest. At last I am home from my terrible trip and free from the annoyances, frets and cares of the worst trip I have ever endured. I want to rest and get strong enough for active duty as soon as possible. Later in day I went see Mr. Johns.

Fri.

13. I spend the day at reading and writing and resting with some attention to patients.

Sat

14. I resume my writing. The tolling of the bells at 2:30 this morning announced the death of President McKinley. The day is dull and lowering and I work into my old harness which have lain idle since my departure.

Sun.

15. The day is spent in reading. Late in afternoon

Sept. visit some patients.

Mon. 16. I continue my writing, still suffering but growing some stronger. The children all away at school today.

Tu. 17. The same. Went to city and walked a good deal and then walked home which exhausted me very much. I can scarcely wait to get strong and it is little wonder that I am weak. My will walks in advance of my power.

Wed. 18. Spent the day at writing and doing a few little things.

Th. 19. The same.

Fri. 20. Cool and brilliant with some clouds. I write and write and read.

Sat. 21. I worked in shop most of day. Wrote two pages.

Sun. 22. Brilliant day. Read and visit patients. In the evening Annie and I took a walk.

Mon. 23. Attended some patients and wrote and worked in shop.

Tu. 24. The same.

Wed. 25. Went to city in the forenoon. Worked and wrote in the afternoon.

Th. 26. Writing and entertaining callers.

- Fri. 27. The same.
- Sat. 28. Rainy. Worked in shop and wrote and read.
- Sun. 29. Bright and clear. Read in forenoon. In P.M. Anne and I called on Mr. Kelly and family.
- Mon. 30. Worked in shop, wrote and late in P.M. went with Mrs. Hart to see her sick husband.
- Oct.
Tue. 1. Went to city to try to save some money for Mrs. Leavely. It was too late. In P.M. Anne and I drove to Mr. Hart's.
- Wed. 2. Put in bridge at barn and wrapped water pails. Fine. Tonight.
- Th. 3. Trimmed trees attended patient, wrote letters.
- Fri. 4. The same.
- Sat. 5. Worked in shop most of day. Clouds sad and do not know why. A heavy gloom hangs over and cannot dispel.
- Sun. 6. A very beautiful day. It is our wedding anniversary. While Anne prepared a good dinner I wrote a few lines commemorative of the day which I entitled "Together". After dinner we walked out to see Mr. Dawson's house which is building, but were soon called home by a patient.

Together.

6 Oct. 1901

How fast the years have flown
 How strong their loves have grown Since you and I beneath a sky
 Of golden autumn weather
 Stood on the strand and hand in hand
 Pledged life and love together.

How fast the years have flown
 But their memories are ~~gone~~
 With pictures fair and rich and rare
 Of work and word and token -
 Of sunny talks and pleasant walks
 With life and love unbroken.

How fast the years have flown
 While you and I have grown
 To know and prove a deeper love
 Than life nor death can sever.
 So hand in hand we take our hand
 And worship God together.

How fast the years have flown!
 How quickly come and gone!
 Each had its share of blessings rare
 Each had its golden afternoon.
 And keep our fold with love untold -
 He keeps us still together.

How fast the years have flown!
 When other years have come
 And Autumn days have brought the light
 O'er stream and hill and heather,
 We take hand and hand in hand
 And worship God together.

Oct.

Mon. 7. Worked in shop and attended patients. Wrote a little.

Tu. 8. The same.

We. 9. The same.

Th. 10. Wrote most of day.

Fri. 11. Worked in shop in forenoon and in afternoon wrote some ^{and} entertained callers.

Sat. 12. Very rainy. Went to city in forenoon to see Mr. Glenn. After an annoying conference and accomplishing nothing I came home and worked in shop till night.

Sun. 13. Wrote in forenoon. In the afternoon we took our usual walk. In the night called to attend Mrs. Estes close by.

Mon. 14. Worked in the shop. Also went to city.

Tu. 15. Went to city to see Mrs. Varley. Worked in shop in afternoon.

Wed. 16. Called out at day to go to Varley's on Sunday. Walked back at noon and resumed my work at the bench in the afternoon. I am much better pleased with the quiet work at the bench than in any professional labor. In fact it annoys me to call me from it.

Th. 17. Wrote and worked in the shop all day. At night Annie & Wesley and I walked

Oct. to tabernacle and back to hear the John Thomas concert Co. The violin performance was very fine. When returned we took a piece of bread and butter each and sat and talked and ate and enjoyed our quiet evening alone together. Surely God is very good to us both in the quality and number of our blessings.

Fri. 18. Worked in shop and about the place. The weather is perfect. In the night called to Varley's and got home near morning.

Sat. 19. Worked in shop a while in the morning, wrote a while and played with Hettie for a little while to her great delight. I do not play with her very often as I used to do with Helen. Now I dream of Helen night after night. I expect I should play more with the little girl who remains and must often be lonesome. One trouble is I grow impatient to accomplish a good deal when I begin and cling too long to my work taking too little time for enjoyment. I enjoy my walks and evening talks with Annie and ought to enjoy more plays with the children perhaps.

Sun. 20. Another perfect day. Such days are unanswerable arguments in favor of a Divine Creator. The children go to Sunday school while I read the morning paper or dictate while Annie posts my daily journal.

Oct.

- Mon. 21. Went to the city in the forenoon to see Dr. Matthews. Walked back calling on Mrs. Kirkwood. In the afternoon worked on enlarging a table top.
- Tu. 22. A beautiful day and I continue my enlarging with frequent interruptions.
- Wed. 23. Waited on patients, worked in shop and took a long stroll late in the evening, looking for a rustic foot piece for one of my tables. I found one and saved it down by me which but it was too heavy to carry home. The fine weather and crisp air seem to invigorate me and I walked home with a feeling that I was possibly stronger than last year. This is my fifty-sixth birth-day.
- Th. 24. The day has been ideal and I hope this is a good omen of my future. I do not know that I am accomplishing much. I have little ambition except to be useful to my family and the world. I think I am more trustful than ever before. Together with my own dear wife we plan a future little knowing what it may have or hold. With God's blessing we will go on planning, waiting and trusting as before.
- Fri. 25. I go on with my work which is quite an enjoyment to me and when I stop I resume my writing on my story. Only a Christian.
- Fri. 26. The same. The glorious weather continues. The leaves are beautiful. To me the yard was never so pretty before.

Oct.

After dinner I took another long walk, cut an elm foot-piece for one of my tables put it on my shoulder and carried it a mile without resting. I again enjoyed the walk. I always enjoy autumn weather. I think I enjoy as keenly as at any period of my life. The smell of the woods is almost intoxicating to me.

Sat.

26. I worked all day at my rustic table foot, stopping only to mend two pairs of shoes.

Sun.

27. Raining in the morning. Spent most of day in reading. In the afternoon took a long walk.

Mon.

28. I took a long hunt in the forenoon for a rustic foot-piece and secured one out near Maple-wood which I brought home and worked upon till night.

Tue.

29. Again rained the woods till noon. In the afternoon worked up a pretty design from a small scrubby elm.

Wed.

30. Worked in shop and entertained some callers.

Th.

31. Went to town in the forenoon. In the afternoon I worked in shop.

Sun.

3. The ideal weather seems to be breaking up. A strong disagreeable wind from the South and a cloudy sky replace the balmy sunshine of yesterday. Read and walk most of day. Took a long walk in the P.M. I came home just before a dull cold rain set in.

Mon.

4.

Bright and cold.

Did some varnishing and some work in the shop and wrote some on the last chapter of my story.

Tu.

5.

Cool but bright. To drive my wife away I busied myself with odd work and waiting in the forenoon and in the afternoon went with Annie to the Vendome to see Louis James and Madame Molyneux in Shylock. We walk stopping at the Fourth National Bank. Salem and Connel came also from the High School at its close. I was disappointed in the play though I had not expected to see a great Shylock in Mr. James. He is cut out for the heavy drama. He would be in his part with punctilious care, but when he attempts to play Shylock it is a game against nature - a battle against passion and passion remained. As Portia Molyneux utterly fails to reach the high excellence she exhibits in Lady Macbeth. Her voice has materially changed within a year or two and lacks the clear and vibrant quality of old. It is scarcely probable she could attain high excellence as Portia. Her mental make up & conception of the character is at variance with long established & accepted authority.

Nov.

She is remaining too long on the stage or failing to adapt herself to the best place. We walked home against dark.

Wed.

6. Spent most of day at writing. Worked awhile in shop.

Th.

7. Again in battle with the wolf. My night was full of horror. Two or three times I felt as if I could breathe no longer. I spent a good part of day strolling over the hills in the bright sunshine trying to get rid of my enemy. I could not drive it off but drilled its teeth. Wrote a little in the afternoon.

Fri.

8. The weather is still bright. I wrote and write by turns.

Sat.

9. The same.

Sun.

10. Bright and beautiful. Spent the forenoon in reading. It is very warm. Took a walk about noon but did not go as far as usual because it was too warm to be pleasant walking. Late in P.M. we took the old barouche and all went for a drive. At night we walked to the telegraph to hear Jas. S. Vance.

Mon.

11. Still warm and beautiful. Worked in the shop and wrote.

Tue.

12. The beautiful weather continues. I walk in morning and noon. Took a walk in afternoon, walked home and worked in shop till night.

- Wed. 13. Framed "John and Mildred" a picture Helen used to admire, went to see Mrs. Scott and did some varnishing.
- Th. 14. Worked in shop and waited on patients.
- Fri. 15. Cold and disagreeable. Wrote part of day and worked part.
- Sat. 16. Bright cold and crisp. Annie and I drove to town in the forenoon. In afternoon finished my new rustic table with one hundred sets and varnished it. It is quite pretty being inlaid with ten different kinds of wood of different colors.
- Sun. 17. The coldest morning we have had this winter, but bright and beautiful. Spent most of day in reading. Took a long walk to West and East and back through country. At night went to hear Mr. Jacobs at Woodland St. Presbyterian Church.
- Mon. 18. Wrote and worked about the house and read. Some rain.
- Tu. 19. Spent the day entertaining callers and doing some light jobs of work.
- Wed. 20. Went to the city in the forenoon. In the afternoon wrote and worked a little in shop.
- Th. 21. In the forenoon wrote and entertained company. In the afternoon chopped some wood and read.
- Fri. 22. Windy and disagreeable. Mrs. Walter P.

Nov. here. In the afternoon fitted up a pair of shoes for Edward.

Sat. 23. I have a deep cold which quite unfit me for business. My wife grieves away and am quite well. In the afternoon I worked in shop, did some writing and wrote a letter.

Sun. 24. Called out of bed in the morning to go to Thomas Dawson's. Rode out with him in his buggy and walked home. Spent the forenoon in reading the papers.

Mon. 25. Worked in the shop.

Tue. 26. The same. At night Annie & I walked to Tabernacle to hear A. W. Hawks, the laughing philosopher.

Wed. 27. Went to the city in the forenoon and in the afternoon worked and wrote.

Th. 28. Thanksgiving day. A beautiful day, warm and sunny. Took the children and went for a long walk stopping to see the men working at the locks and going on up Page Lock, and a foot-piece for a note which I carried home, where Annie has prepared a fine dinner which we all enjoyed. After dinner Annie and I took a short walk and brought home another foot-piece.

Fri. 29. In the forenoon Annie and I took a long walk into the country. In the afternoon worked in shop.

Sat. 30. Still bright and warm. In the forenoon

- Dec. went with Wesley and Pettie to town. In the afternoon did some rustic work in the yard.
- Sun. 1. The beautiful weather continues. Spent the forenoon in entertaining company and reading.
- Mon. 2. Rainy. Emptied the tank worked some about shop and wrote.
- Tu. 3. Went to see Mrs. Scott, worked in shop & spent part of evening with Mr. Crosby planning our suit with John C. Allen. At night Anne and I walked to Lakeville and heard a fine lecture by William Hawley Smith. His subject was "We, the People" and he treated modern educational methods unflinchingly. We walked back together discussing lecture and the future of our children.
- Wed. 4. Colder and disagreeable. Spent most of day in writing letters and a brief for our law suit.
- Th. 5. It has sifted snow all day. I have spent nearly the whole day in writing.
- Fri. 6. Writing, reading and working in shop.
- Sat. 7. The snow is gone and the city the prettiest I have ever seen it. Went to the city in the forenoon and tried to sell my last house on Litchy Av. at a very low price. Came home disappointed to find the permit came from my long delayed bridge claim in Ohio.

had been sent me by the lawyer who had robbed me of $100. with the most brazen affronting. Yet I thank God this long fight is ended. He has been so good to me I should not complain. This fight has lasted a dozen years yet me in most of my fights he has given me a victory. It was warm in the afternoon and I worked in the shop. At night Annie and I sat and talked and planned for the future till one o'clock. These long evenings seem strange perhaps yet there is a pleasure in feeling they belong to us alone and are unutterably prized. When they are broken they will not come again. They enable us to put the world outside or to our side and live over together what is dear to us. Their tendency is to make home sacred and to renew the memories of the past. We can always look back upon them with pleasure. They also carry a divine blessing whereby God fits us better into each others lives.

Sun.

8. Warm in the forenoon we talked and read and posted up the journal. In the afternoon had some company.

Mon.

9. Rainy and disagreeable. I worked some in shop and went to city.

Tu.

10. Worked in shop and helped Annie begin copy of my story "Only a Christian". The last looks to me precious and un-possessing, yet I am doing it without a selfish motive, neither wishing nor expecting a personal benefit beyond the pleasure of attempting to do or say something to benefit some one else. I began it without ambition and have restrained every thing that would seem to me inconsistent with the proper and proper of a story which would be seen as a humble way of expressing a Christian character. I am not ambitiously solicitous of its fate but feel as if led on to its preparation. I have made no effort at literary display if that were possible but rather to write a plain and simple story which would seem to me consistent with the influence of Christian character and Christian life and influence as displayed under different and difficult circumstances in different persons displaying different characteristics. It has been to me a pleasure to contemplate a mental picture of Christian influence on persons of varied age, condition and character and I cannot expect the companionship of any other person with these creations to be as pleasant and realistic as my own. I felt great reluctance in permitting my wife to assume the labor of transcribing all these pages which might prove only a profitless drudgery and personally should have preferred to accept the task myself but for the assurance of her pleasure in joining with me in this unselfish effort is as a possible good. Whatever be the result if it benefit us or else our pleasant association in its preparation may in some sense, I hope, recompense her for a labor which was not forced by hope of reward. Should I live we will finish it together. Together we will read it as a word of love. Together we will contem-

10. ~~What~~ ~~infatuation~~ we may pursue for its mission. Together we will ask God's blessing upon it as I have done upon every page. In this spirit we will commit it to its mission.

- Wed. 11. Worked in the shop. At night went to hear Rev. Loring at Foster St. Christian Church.
- Th. 12. Worked with the water-pipes in forenoon. Then we resumed our copy work, I dictating and correcting, Annie transcribing.
- Fri. 13. Wrote in the forenoon. In afternoon worked in shop and wrote letter. Very stormy and turning cold.
- Sat. 14. Some snow and quite cold and windy. Did a little out-door work and read.
- Sun. 15. Cold but bright. Read and wrote.
- Mon. 16. Very cold with some snow. We could do little but sit by the fire and read and write. I dictated and Annie wrote for about three hours on the manuscript of my story.
- Tu. 17. Went to see Mrs. Scott in the morning. Later in day in day to see Lucy Stiles. A fine snow is drifting and the thermometer is near zero F. We opened our books at writing as on yesterday.
- Wed. 18. Still very cold and we pursue the beaten path of the last two days - copying and burning coal and writing manuscript.
- Th. 19. The same. It is still colder.

Fri. 20. The coldest day of all - 29° F. We continue our writing. In the afternoon Corwin and I walked to city selected some Christmas goods and came home after night enjoying the walk both ways.

Sat. 21. The cold is abating. The boys go to the brick yard pond to skate. We do some writing with many interruptions. At night the boys return to the pond and skate till ten o'clock.

Sun. 22. Disagreeable south wind. Turning warmer. Read most of day.

Mon. 23. Worked in the shop. Wrote in forenoon.

Tu. 24. Went to the city in the morning and bought the regulation game for Christmas. Came back and worked in shop making a doll-bed for Mattie for the morning. By hard rushing I completed a little piece of my work for each one of the family as a Christmas present. To Mattie, I gave a justice-doll-bed. To Wesley, a ruler made from East India mahogany; to Catherine, a draftsman's triangle, made from black walnut; to Corwin, a small wooden square made from bodock; to Annie, an inlaid rustic table, the top of mahogany, the feet piece of an elm on which the branches were joined about the legs making it all of one piece white the top being inlaid with many kinds of wood was composed of one hundred pieces. I thought it would be appropriate while I could still make a little to give each of them a sample of my work. In the evening the children had an entertainment in which the families of Prof. Webb and Turner joined.

Dec.

It was a simple program consisting of organ, psalter, cantata, songs and prayers. After they had gone Annie and I prepared the things for the children in the morning and talked away till after the midnight-whistles all over the city had announced Christmas.

Wed. 25.

Attended some patients, worked in shop and read and entertained company.

Th.

26. Looking after patients, working in shop, reading and writing.

Fri.

27. Attended some patients and dictated while Annie wrote.

Sat.

28. Boring and cold. Worked most of day in shop.

Sun.

29. Boring and disagreeable. Went to see Mr. Utley on the White Creek pike. Visited some of the patients and listened while Annie read "The Man from Glenarry". At night the reading was resumed and after the children had gone to bed she finished the book though it took till after midnight. We were very well pleased with the book and enjoy the evenings together as few people do.

Mon.

30. Attended some patients and dictated while Annie wrote. Having been up a good part of last night lay down and took a nap in the afternoon. The weather is very disagreeable.

Tue.

31. Warmer. Worked in shop and looked after patients.

Jan.

Wed. 1. Walked to city and back and had a very disappointing trip. On my return I worked a little while, looked after my patients and in afternoon went to matinee and witnessed the pastoral play "Way down East." It was elegantly staged and for the most part finely portrayed. We enjoyed it very much.

Th. 2. Looked after my patients and dictated while Annie wrote.

Fri. 3. The same.

Sat. 4. Windy and disagreeable. Went to see a sick child in morning, then went to Mr. Utley's with his son who brought me back again after which I worked for an hour in shop and then walked with Annie and the two older boys to the Grand to see "Virginians". After it was over did some shopping and walked home and looked after patients till midnight.

Sun. 5. Beautiful weather. Spent the day at reading & writing.

Mon. 6. I am suffering very much and can get little relief by changing from one thing to another. I manage to put in the time at reading, letter writing and a little work in shop.

Tu. 7. Dictated while Annie wrote. Worked some in shop and went to Turner's for a little while in the evening.

Wed. 8. Still dictating and doing a little work between times.

Jan.

Th.

9. Went to see Mrs. Scott in the morning, came back very much exhausted. We continue our writing. Walter Perneck came in the evening and brought Edward, whose feet are improving decidedly.

Fri.

10. Still quite lame. Went to city, paid premium on life assurance, went to several real estate firms and listed property and after a disagreeable and painful walk about the city came home and gladly resumed my place at the workbench.

Sat.

11. Cold, keen wind. Went to see Mr. Utter in forenoon. In afternoon worked in shop.

Sun.

12. Bright but cold and windy. I read nearly all day.

Mon.

13. Cold. Dictated while Annie wrote. Worked a little in shop.

Tu.

14. The same.

Wed.

15. Warmer. Worked in shop and entertained company.

Th.

16. Dictated while Annie wrote. At night took Greenwood and Correll and I started out to hear Prof. Foster lecture at the lecture hall in liquid air.

Fri.

17. Still transcribing our story. Finished another rustic table also.

Sat.

18. Rained hard nearly all day. In the morning went to the country to see Mr. Utter.

Jan.

Came home in the chill driving rain which reminded me of the years in the past when I spent my winters in the paddles and had my chuck to almost every storm. In the afternoon worked in the shop. At night we chatted till midnight. Cannot stand it here after losing four games of chess with which he is infatuated.

Tue.

19. Bright again. The day was spent between patients, calls and the papers.

Mon.

20. Looked after patients and dictated while Annie wrote.

Tu.

21. The same.

Wed.

22. The same.

Th.

23. Worked some in shop, waited on patients.

Fri.

24. Resumed our transcribing but had many interruptions.

Sat.

25. Raining and disagreeable in the morning. Went to Mr. Utley's with his son and returned to find a call to go to J. C. Morrisons to see a Mrs. Wilson seventy years old. In less than twenty minutes I was at her bedside. I walked both ways. Returning visited other patients and worked in shop till dark.

Sun.

26. I was kept busy with patients and spent two hours removing powder from Thomas Hart's face. After dinner Annie and I drove to J. C. Morrisons to see Mrs. Wilson.

- Jan. and returning stopped to see Mrs. Corley. The weather is very disagreeable.
- Mon. 27. Cold this morning and ground white with sleet and snow. In the face of a keen wind from the North I walked to J.C. Morrison's and found Mrs. Wilson much better. On my return we resumed our work on the manuscript of my story but were frequently interrupted.
- Tu. 28. A duplicate of yesterday. I went to Morrison's, stopping on my way back at Strange's and at Prof. Wright's. It began raining before I reached home. Worked awhile on manuscript and visited Mrs. Turner.
- Wed. 29. Dictated and read and worked a little in shop.
- Th. 30. The same. Went to see Mrs. R.L. Wright on Dickerson place before breakfast. After breakfast went to see Mrs. W. J. Hudson. On my return we took up the manuscript-work again till dinner. After dinner worked in shop till night - then walked to see Mrs. Smith on Trinity Heights.
- Fr. 31. We resumed our work in the preparation of manuscript. We have many interruptions but work along a little together steadily wearing away the pile before us. Whether it will have a future use or not is difficult to forecast. Sometimes I go into the shop and work awhile while Annie works off her household duties and then we resume our joint labors. Of course we are no wiser.

and can only expect the service's reward. Yet - God can make that great or small and we will accept His dispensation. If no other person comes out of it we will have the pleasure of feeling that we spent many hours together pleasantly while preparing it.

Sat.

1. A dull disagreeable day with many interruptions. We spent a part of writing and part of entertaining. The boys went to the city to see the Schley parade and late in afternoon I went to Mr. Utley's, returning a little after dark.

Sun.

2. Cold and windy. Spent the day at home with books and papers.

Mon.

3. Cold and disagreeable. We resume our work at transcribing.

Tu.

4. Dictated in the forenoon and in afternoon went out to see Mr. Utley. Also worked a little while in shop.

Wed.

5. Walked to city in the forenoon and on returning worked with manuscript awhile and in shop awhile.

Th.

6. Called out in night to Wm. J. Hitté. Came home for breakfast, then returned and stayed till noon. In afternoon went to city with Ecomest Curtis to release mortgage and surrender notes. In evening played chess with the boys.

Fri.

7. Wrote in the forenoon. In afternoon went to Mr. Utley's.

- Sat. 8. Worked in shop most of day.
- Sun. 9. Cold. Spent most of day at reading and writing.
- Mon. 10. We resumed our revision of a manuscript, Annie doing the writing and I the revising and dictating. When she was called to other duties I worked in the shop.
- Tu. 11. The same. Quite cold.
- Wed. 12. Wrote looked after patients and worked in shop in forenoon. In afternoon Annie and I walked to Maroonic theater to see the Ald Homestead. It is a clean, wholesome representation of rural New England life with its author in the title role. Sixteen years of constant playing in the leading role has made Danvers Thompson, its author, bear the same relation to it that Joe Jefferson does to Rip Van Winkle. He simply lives in it and walks naturally through it. We enjoyed it very much as well as the walk both ways.
- Th. 13. Went to the city in the forenoon. In the afternoon worked in the shop.
- Fri. 14. A heavy snow descended all day. We resumed our writing and with occasional runs to the shop the day was put in chiefly at clerical work in doors. I quit snowing about 9 P.M. having reached a depth of 9½ in.
- Sat. 15. Warmer and melting. Went to see Mr. Holley. On my return worked in shop till night.
- Sun. 16. Reading and writing letters.

Mon. 17. In the forenoon went to the city and called on Col. Champion who is a member of the parks commission to ascertain the conditions upon which they were taking options for parks. I have been thinking of offering my place to be considered among others. I came back and we wrote some and then I worked awhile in the shop.

Tue. 18. The same. I called in addition today on Maj. E. C. Lewis, chairman of the Commission. Had an interesting chat and learned the particulars of the movement. Came home and prepared a plat and description of the property. At night Annie and I walked to the tabernacle and back to hear the Mendelssohn Quartette Co. The walk was pleasant and the performance interesting.

Wed. 19. In the forenoon we resumed work on manuscript, Annie writing, I correcting and dictating. In the afternoon went to Mrs. Adams' at the request of Miss Benson who wished to look at an adjoining house. The rain and snow kept from filling the engagement and I came back disappointed.

Th. 20. Worked at manuscript and in shop.

Fri. 21. Worked in shop and went to see Mr. Utley in the forenoon. In the afternoon wrote and worked in shop.

Sat. 22. A beautiful day and snow melting rapidly. I worked all day in shop except a little while spent with patients. At night, The Boys Twentieth Century Club held its meeting.

- Sat. 22 here, at which they delivered original speeches and discussed the Nicaragua Canal, sang, ate plenty of refreshments, made plenty of noise, had a good time and left before midnight. All the guests seemed to enjoy themselves and many thanked us for the pleasant evening they had passed. After they had gone, Annie and I talked till one o'clock in the morning and then went to bed.
- Sun. 23. Warmer. Went to see Mrs. Hudson in the morning. Returning read till noon. Spent the afternoon with books and papers.
- Mon. 24. Rainy. Went to city in the morning, called on Miss Bancroft and made an appointment to look at house No. 1106 Litchey Av. at 3 P. M. In afternoon showed her the house which he accepted. Late in evening went to city and got blank deed and notes. At night played a few games of chess with Wesley and General.
- Tu. 25. Went to city in forenoon and in afternoon resumed work on manuscript.
- Wed. 26. Annie and I walked to city and back after signing papers transferring the house on Litchey Avenue to Miss Bancroft. On my return I was driven to Thomas Hart's and returned at dark. Got my dinner and driven by Mr. Utley to his home on the 4th St. back pike.
- Th. 27. Rainy. Went to city and prepared papers for Edward Pennock. Returned and worked in shop till night.

Fri. 28. Resumed work on manuscript and in shop after trimming trees on the property sold to Miss Boncarron. Mr. Penick and Edward went home this morning.

Mar.

Sat. 1. Worked most of the day in shop. Bright day.

Sun.

2. Windy and disagreeable. Spent forenoon entertaining callers and reading. In the afternoon visited patients.

Mon.

3. In the forenoon was driven to Utley's on White's Creek pike. In the afternoon worked in shop.

Tue.

4. Attended to a number of small duties, worked awhile at manuscript and awhile in shop.

Wed.

5. Worked on manuscript and in shop.

Th.

6. Drove to J. C. Morrison's and took him with me to visit Mr. Hunt. We drove first to Mr. Tarpley's to meet Dr. Alliston in consultation. Got home a little after noon. Resumed our writing and finished the day in the shop.

Fri.

7. Resumed work on manuscript but had many interruptions. Spent part of day in shop.

Sat.

8. Worked all day in shop except two hours given to professional duties.

Sun.

9. Very bright and beautiful. Spent part of day with patients and a part with books and papers.

Mon.

10. Went to city in forenoon to procure some material.

Mar.

musician papers to match that already used. Had to get it prepared and trimmed. Came home at noon and worked in the shop in the afternoon.

Tue.

11. Did some writing, worked some in shop, and spent some time with callers. At night we went to Tabernacle to hear Ellery's Royal Italian Band. The most interesting feature of this band is its extraordinary director, Giuseppe Crestini, probably the greatest musical enthusiast in the country. He is an ordinary looking Italian of quiet and dreamy appearance until he takes the baton, when he seems immediately to be transformed into a very demon of music. His very soul seems to be wrought up with the most vivid fancy. He rushes about the stage, bends earnestly over his players, gesticulates in their faces, turning suddenly from one section to another, using his entire body as well as his baton to give expression to his intense musical passions. Sometimes he is exquisitely graceful, at others, extremely furious and demonstrative. His players seem to be in sympathy with him and his control of them is marvellous. Some times the sweep of his baton is as graceful and light as that of a thrifte-down in the air. Sometimes, it reminds one of the desperate energy of a victor's swordman in the climax of an encounter. His performers have all been carefully selected from well trained Italian bands. He commands the closest attention and

Mar. comes the deepest enthusiasm. We enjoyed the performance very much and looked forward to discussing it.

Wed. 12. Worked on manuscript a while but spent much of day with patients and callers. Worked a little while in shop.

Th. 13. We finished our labors on the manuscript of the story "Only a Christian", then we sat and discussed our joint labors upon it - its bare possibilities, its purposes and our joint hopes and wishes in regard to it. So far it has been a labor of love. Together we have spent many hours over it discussing its scope, application, persons and possible interest to others. It may never take any other form than it now possesses and if so the time has not been wholly lost for out of it has grown many pleasure and its purpose has been pure and single and unselfish. I have tried to avoid any inequality of thought or sentiment in it and to make it consistent with a simple, central idea, the influence of Christianity. Time alone will tell whether I shall have succeeded in making a single individual better by having written it. In the hand of Him who can develop the largest growths from the smallest seeds I leave it to await His will. If it shall have in the end made one person nobler or better my labor will not be lost.

In the afternoon I resumed my work in the shop. At night we took Nettie and Harley and went to the first service.

entertainment of the Italian band. The audience was packed and intensely sympathetic. The applause was often deafening. The encores were numerous, peculiar and rare. The audience seemed impressed with the desire to please them and exhibited the intelligence of an angel and the energy of a fiend. As the entertainment drew near its close the audience became wild with the passion he had aroused. At the conclusion he gave a medley of patriotic airs which so wrought upon the audience that at times the heavy music of the band was almost drowned by the thunder of applause. Men yelled, stamped, pounded with their canes, waving their hats in the air while women cheered, screaming on seats, waving handkerchiefs and fans and indulging in the wildest enthusiasm. All were delighted. We walked home a little before midnight.

Fri.

14. Spent part of the day in reading and examining manuscript and part of the day at work. At night walked to Coker's and back with the two older boys to hear Prof. De Motte deliver a very eloquent lecture on heredity. As of old I was appointed as story-teller and it was my duty to tell stories all the way there and back.

Sat.

15. Spent part of day with patients and part in shops.

Sun.

16. Bright and sunny. Spent most of day in reading.

Mar.

- Mon. 17. Worked in the shop and waited on patients.
- Tu. 18. Waited on some patients in the forenoon. In the afternoon Annie and I walked to the Masonic to see Lewis Morrison in Faust. Considering his great reputation for Meplisto- phelian acting his production was quite disappointing. It lacked the subtle calculation, the intense sentiment, the insinuation and animus one would naturally expect to find, while some parts were fairly executed it had a styeoptyped and weary quality as if the actor had become tired of it and no longer played with zest and enthusiasm. It was like an ancient matter of course. One or two of his supporters did fairly. Most of the performance I had seen better done. I shall not wish to see it again. I do not care for the play even from a classical standpoint and it was only the reputation of Lewis Morrison that induced me to go.
- Wed. 19. Worked about shop and revised manuscript.
- Th. 20. The same. At night Annie and I walked to Ward's Seminary to a musical entertainment representing selections from different operas. The hall was jammed and we stood throughout the performance. Somehow I took a violent cold.
- Fri. 21. My cold has grown much worse and I am very hoarse. We proceed with our manuscript with many interruptions and I work some in shop.

Sat. 22. I kept busy all day, most of the time in shop where my close application to a pleasant physical labor deadened the punishment and ache that never left me. I stopped long enough to set a broken arm and dress a broken thumb and see two other patients but withal accomplished more work than usual.

Sun. 23. Warmer. I am still very lame and unfit for much else than reading, at which I spent the forenoon.
Took a walk in the afternoon and at night went to the Baptist Church on Meridian St. to hear Mr. Deagle of Jackson, Tenn. give an illustrated lecture on Jerusalem.

Mon. 24. Divided the day between shop work and waiting on patients.

Tu. 25. Went to Mrs. Bang's in the morning and from there over into city to procure seeds. Came back at 10 A.M. Then worked in shop.

Wed. 26. Went to see Mrs. Irvin Hudson, Mrs. Sandling and Mr. Dorris, then to Joe Brown's nursery and to Wesley Shipp's, returning through the rain. It rained most of afternoon and I continued my work in the shop.

Th. 27. Setting out trees, trimming and cleaning up in yard. At night Daterwood and I went to the Commencement exercises of the Medical department of the University of Nashville.

Mar.

Wed. 28. It rained very hard all day. I spent most of time at work in shop.

Sat. 29. A beautiful day. Did some shop work, trimmed vines, &c.

Sun. 30. My deep cold has taken a new lease and makes me feel so wretched I am utterly unfit to do anything than sit by the fire and read. The day is bright but a disagreeable wind prevails.

Mon. 31. Worked in shop, revised manuscript and waited on callers. At night we finished revising the manuscript of the story "Only a Christian".

Apr.

Tu. 1. Finished a table, my last rustic piece and worked some in shop and spent some time with company. Also finished planting some trees.

Wed. 2. Very rainy. Read, wrote and worked in shop by turns. At night walked to the tabernacle to hear Sam Jones but was called out by Mr. Estes to set a broken leg for his son. I came home, got material, went to his house, set the leg and then returned to tabernacle in time to hear all I cared for of Sam's nasty harangue. After services I could not find Annie till I reached the Mexican car. We came home together.

Th. 3. Worked some in shop in forenoon. In afternoon went to election and drug store.

Fri. 4. I continue my work at the bench making a frame for Helen's pictures. My fondness for working with wood and particularly for

- Apr. — artistic work seems to increase as my ability to do it decreases.
- At night we went to hear Leland Powers, the great impersonator in David Garrick. As an impersonator he has few equals.
- Sat. 5. I spent most of day at the work-bench.
- Sun. 6. It still remains cloudy and cold. I spent most of day at reading. In the afternoon took a walk returning near sunset.
- Mon. 7. I spent the cold disagreeable day at little jobs of trimming and cleaning up and reading, working some in shop and some out doors.
- Tue. 8. The same. Went to city in the afternoon.
- Wed. 9. Still doing odd spring jobs and reading and writing letters. It has grown warmer.
- Th. 10. I feel so wretched that I am not capable of any extended effort, but continue my work in the broken and disjointed manner of the past few days.
- Fri. 11. Put the day in at work-bench and with books and papers. Packed manuscript of story to have in readiness to send someplace — don't know where. Have written Woughton, Wiffline & Co of Boston in regard to it.
- Sat. 12. An exasperating unrest seems to possess me. I can not find contentment or rest

Apr.

anywhere. I walked to the city and back in the forenoon and in the afternoon worked in the shop. I do not know why I am so discontented and so restless. I long for something. I don't know what. It somehow seems as if my life and its opportunities were escaping me in a purposeless emptiness of existence. I long to do something of real use and feel as if I was somehow hampered, fettered & environed in such manner that any good work is impracticable. I have tried to be trustful and throughout my life in a general way have been able to carry this purpose further than most men. Why should I be at sea now? The worst of all is I don't know why. I can not account for the gloom and oppression that seems to be about me and resists my efforts to throw it off. Nothing seems to be of much avail except physical exercise to the point of considerable weariness and this in turn depresses me. I suppose I should be thankful for ability to do what I am doing especially when I reflect that I have not yet spent a whole day in bed. Still I feel that little attacks seem to impress me almost unreasonably. In fact I almost hate myself for yielding in any sense to that which does not send me to bed. I find myself unable to interest myself in things which formerly engaged me pleasantly. Still I see nothing better than to trust on, hope on, and struggle on in some sort of unsatisfactory way. It will come out right at last and I need not be particularly concerned how. Somehow I feel like something important is going to transpire which will in some way prove decisive. Whatever it may be I must be philosophical. I must trust and fight and wait.

Apr.

Sun.

13. Bright but windy. Put in most of day at reading. When my eyes pained I walked.

Mon.

14. Feel too badly to do much else than walk about, performing some small items of work, reading, writing, &c.

Tue.

15. Worked in shop in forenoon while Annie washed. In afternoon we went to the Art exhibit on Summer St. and remained there until 7:30. The display was excellent and we enjoyed the study of the pictures together. Thirty-three of the pictures are the work of Canaletto who was here Monday. They are a remarkable illustration of his wonderful genius and versatility. He is the most wonderful colorist and exhibits so many excellent peculiarities and takes such wide range of representation that he occupies a field almost alone in versatility. He is the most luminous painter and carries his brilliant expression into so many fields of representation that I doubt if he has a living equal as an all-around painter. I discovered some inaccuracies in his work but its masterful superiority in so many ways made these seem unimportant. We went from the art exhibit to the tabernacle to an entertainment by the Vanderbilt Glee Club and walked home at eleven P. M.

Apr.

Wed. 16. Finished a frame for the large steel portrait of Washington Irving which I transferred and hung in library.

Th. 17. I resume my favorite enjoyment at the present time, working at the bench. The weather remains very cool, the foliage appears slowly and everything seems more favorable toward enjoyment at indoor work and my boyish fancy for working with tools in wood asserts itself.

Fri. 18. I continue my work in shop till the boys return from school and then we all four walk to the art gallery where I spend the remainder of the time till 8:30 trying to impart instruction and pleasure to the boys in studying the pictures which we take in groups compare, vote upon^d and explain our preferences. Had a long and pleasant conversation with the genial and enthusiastic Superintendent, Mr. Theo. Cooley, a man of rare acquirement in art matters and a delightful conversationalist. Mrs. Poxson, the secretary was also very courteous and obliging. We started home and were suddenly overtaken by a terrific wind-storm followed by a driving rain. The dust was so blinding that Counsel could not see the way and asked me to take him by the hand. At times I feared we would be carried off our feet. We got home safely, but wet.

Sat. 19. I put in the entire day at work in shop.

Sun. 20. Bright but cool. I spent forenoon at reading. Spent the afternoon with patients^d and callers.

Apr.

- Mon. — 21. Worked in shop and about place all day.
- Tu. 22. The same. A disagreeable South wind prevails which is most depressing and disastrous. It affects all vegetation seriously.
- Wed. 23. In the forenoon worked in garden; in afternoon planted trees and opened a prehistoric grave in the edge of the hollow below the house. These graves are usually found on higher grounds. I discovered this one by accident a few years ago when planting trees. They are strangely arranged. They are covered with stone about eight inches wide and of various thicknesses neatly fitted and all standing on edge. The upper surface of the layer of stone is about ten inches below the surface. These graves usually contain pieces of pottery, battle-axes, arrow-heads, &c. We did not complete our digging but so far have found nothing but a thin layer of very black soil.
- Th. 24. In the morning wrote a letter to Dodd, Mead & Co. of New York explaining the purpose and plan of my story "Only a Christian" which they are to examine with a view to publication if accepted. I then took the manuscript to the express office and forwarded it to them returning with the bronze medallion in Washington after the London model. It is very artistic and we contemplate it with a good deal of pleasure.
- (It might Annie and I went to the Taternacle and heard a fine lecture by Stafford of Washington City on "Macbeth".

Apr.

25. In the forenoon I tried to work but felt so badly I lay down for some time. The remainder of the day was spent with patients and visitors. The disagreeable South wind still continues.

26. Got up early and found that a little rain had fallen in the night making it practicable to work in the garden which I did until noon. In the afternoon I visited patients and read.

27. Bright and beautiful but a little cool. Spent the forenoon in reading and walking about the premises.

In the afternoon Annie and I went to the Coliseum to hear a fine concert by Colley's Royal Italian Band. Creators were much pleased as usual. It was a pleasant ride and an excellent entertainment.

28. Raining. Worked in shop and read.

29. Very rainy. The same. In P.M. Wesley & I went to Coliseum - concert postponed.

30. Worked in shop in forenoon fixing shoes for Edward Pennock. In afternoon Annie & I went to the Grand to see Walter Edwards in "David Garrick." The play was very amusing and fairly executed.

May.

1. Rained hard nearly all day though it had stormed all night. I spent the day in at reading and work in shop.

2. Did some little things, tried to read and help entertain company. I am suffering a good deal with neuralgia in eye which May rendered me unfit to do or enjoy.

Sat. 3. Worked in garden in forenoon. In afternoon took Wheeler and Nettie to the tavernacle to hear Elling's Band.

Sun. 4. Read in forenoon. It is warm but breezy and everything is looking fresh. A whole week has gone by since I received notice from Dodd, Mead & Co. that they had received and would examine manuscript of "Only a Christian" and write me concerning it. As I have heard nothing I suppose they are still examining it. While I should be much pleased with their acceptance I shall not be wholly discouraged with their rejection. I have somehow an impression that if examined without predilection or prejudice it will somewhere find a publisher and my deepest desire is that it may do good. Most of P.M. was spent in reading and at night Annie and I went to hear Horace B. James, of Malta, O. preach at Green St. church. After services were over we went up and spoke to Mr. James who was delighted to see us and promised to call during the week. We came home pleased with our evening trip and its pleasant incidents.

Mon. 5. Spent the day with patients and working about the yard. Late in evening a neighbor boy announced that a swarm of bees had settled on a tree in the little grove two hundred yards away to the northeast. For the benefit of the children I saved for two a potato barrel by the light of a

May

Lantern and we went over and found that boys had stoned most of them off the limb and they were lying in bunches on the ground. I sawed off the limb placed the lace over the wound of the bee and left it till the morning.

Tu.

6. Worked in the garden in the morning and at 11:30 Annie and I went to Ward's Seminary and listened to an instructive lecture on Charles Dickens by Leon H. Vincent. In afternoon worked in garden and read. Attended patients late in evening which prevented our hearing Prof. Vincent at night.

Wed.

7. Fair. Worked in shop and read. At night we went again to hear Prof. Vincent lecture on Victor Hugo, walking both ways as the evening was cool and the air bracing.

Th.

8. Cool, brilliant day. The breeze is from the North and carries with it the breath and spirit of enterprise. I worked about the place till ten A.M. when Mr. Don Carlos James of Malta, C. arrived to make us the promised visit. I spent the day pleasantly with him. We talked over things of the past, discussed authors, scriptures, science, biology and many other matters in which we were mutually interested. He was much pleased and promised to come again. At night we went to the tabernacle to hear Fred Emerson Brooks recite his own poems. The entertainment was very enjoyable. His poem on Pickett's Charge at Gettysburg is very ably written and exhibits the genius of the writer to best advantage. He delivered it with fine dramatic effect. His poem on the destruction of the Maine is also an excellent example and illustration of his ability as an epic writer. His rendition of the barney and melody was happy and natural.

May

Fri.

9. Worked in garden and read Thelma. At night we went again to Green St. church and enjoyed a sermon by Mr. D. C. James.

Sat.

10. I worked in the garden and read Thelma to Annie in the forenoon. In the afternoon we were thronged with company. While the boys joined their comrades of the Twentieth Century Club in an enthusiastic game of ball north of the house. Prof. Turner called with a report of their last night's meeting at the house of Prof. Webb in which our three boys had taken part. Three prizes had been awarded one of which was secured by Waterwood for an original oration on the benefits of the anglo-japanese coalition to the United States.

Sun.

11. Warmer. The wind from the south brings the languor and relaxation I so much dread. Near noon the breeze turned to the north and the benign improvement was quickly manifested. The greater part of day was spent in reading and writing. In afternoon finished reading Thelma and at night went to the Green St. Christian church to hear D. C. James. He was very glad to see us.

"STRIVING FOR THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL."

PHIL. 1:27.

May and we enjoyed both his sermon and his greeting.

Mon. 12. Worked some about the yard and garden and read.

Tue. 13. Went to city in forenoon. In afternoon worked and read.

Wed. 14. Attended patients, worked the potatoes and read.

Th. 15. Spent most of day entertaining our friend, R. C. James and Mr. & Mrs. Skinner. Also saw some patients and worked awhile in garden.

Fri. 16. Very rainy. Read, planned and arranged for my trip to Ohio and discussed plans for the future. At night we went to Green St. Christian church to hear Don C. James. After services he greeted us as usual and was very reluctant to part with us. He is very earnest and sincere and we enjoy his sermons.

Sat. 17. I went to the city in the morning and put in most of forenoon there, attending to business preparatory to my trip. In the afternoon we had Mr. & Mrs. Skinner. The evening was pleasant and after the children had retired Annie and I sat on the moonlit veranda and talked of our future and our past. We discussed at some length the probabilities of securing a publisher for our book and decided to risk a small edition at our own expense.

May

in case we did not succeed in finding a publisher otherwise. As usual we chatted on till nearly midnight.

Sun.

18. Warm. Read and visited patients. In evening went to Green St. Christian Church to hear Mr. James. He parted from us with reluctance.

Mon.

19. Working about ground and making preparation for my trip. Went to city in afternoon and brought back manuscript from express office.

Tue.

20. Looking after patients, working garden and getting ready for my trip.

Wed.

21. Still looking after patients and making preparation.

Th.

22. Went to city in the morning. Came home quite tired and worked hard in garden till 10 o'clock. Then finished my arrangements for departing on the evening train. I do not recall a trip which I have contemplated with more reluctance nor a leaving of my home with deeper regret.

In evening Annie and Wealey and I drove to city where I took 7:50 train for Cincinnati. It was a bright moon-lit night and I sat and watched the gliding landscape as I whirled away to the North on a mission enveloped in solitude and doubt. After many mental discussions I adopted my usual resource of trustfulness and patience and concluded to calmly await developments. At midnight I enjoyed a good lunch and then took a little nap.

Fri.

23.

At 2 A.M. the sky was suddenly overcast and a thunder storm ensued. It rained till 6 A.M. and the sky was dull and gloomy. After a short interval a dull heavy rain set in and the air was very chilly. We transferred at Latonia and remained at Cincinnati till 8:35 and then took B+O for Gamersville. By ten A.M. sun came out. Everything looks fresh and sweet and green. The locusts are in bloom and their fragrance is borne into the car. I never saw Ohio look so fresh and sweet. It is a deep delight to gaze on its varied beauties. Everybody seems busy. Reached Gamersville at 1:15 P.M. Took train for Stockport at 2. Gerry Sells rode down with me and told me much about the place. When he sees it, it must be there. I got off at Stockport and saw a few - only a few who greeted me. I met my old friend Tom McHugh and he took me to John's. It rained a little all the time. I saw A. P. Aug in his door opposite to where I stood for about twenty minutes but he did not come out and his daughter Addie, who passed a few rods away did not turn her head nor recognize me. After all how kindly this is. It builds a deeper dislike for the place and makes me pity those who can be content there.

I spent the eve at John's pleasantly though I thought I should much rather be at home. Still God is so good I can not be too thankful. They had kept some cider for me and this helped my kidneys. I ached a good deal but slept pretty well as I was quite weary.

Sat.

24. Cloudy and thundering. Wrote a letter to Annie at 8 A. M., the rain is over and the sun is out and Emmet is off to the post-office. Walked about till 11 A. M. Then got dinner and went with Emmet to Olivet. We drove and took the tools, prepared the beds and planted the flowers and roses putting a rose on the grave of sister and father and mother. Then we went to Thos. Lynne's, where I met Lucilla who seemed to be happy but not deeply interested. We remained only till a shower was over and then drove back. Emmet seemed to attract her attention more than I - possibly he was more communicative. We drove back together and a little later John McSword drove by, going for a girl to keep house while his wife was sick. He asked me to come in the morning and see her but said he couldn't ask me to stay as he had no cook. I told him I would come but did not ask him for a meal. What cold calculation. Thank Heaven, I have the price of a meal in my pocket. It grew colder and rained nearly all night. In evening Emmet told me of Mrs. J. D. Lewis' fanatical flattery. Let her puff. She only fills her own eyes with dust.

Sun.

25. Cold, dismal, and wet. Up early. Emmet takes Allie to Sunday School. I try to read but get little out of the book on account of the sacred right of the homeless to keep up a constant kindly Rackstrawian whine. She is over-attentive. Later in forenoon, some breakers out. After dinner Emmet drove me to John Mc Swords's where I was kept two hours. While there his wife told me that Aug and his wife admitted the receipt of the $20.⁰⁰ and attributed it to me. I am glad they accept the situation. Before I left Bob's wife came. I could hear her voice loud and insistent in the adjoining room and was reminded of its uncharitable tone when it declined to shelter me from a coming storm a year ago. When I was ready to go I walked into that room for my hat, spoke to her, then turned for a minute to talk to the others still holding my hat in my hand. Her face looked as if a candle might be lighted there. I came out and Emmet drove me to Mrs. Morrisons where we took supper. After supper I took Morris for a long walk through the woods and we came in at nightfall. A little later the immense George Oliver came in. He had heard after dark that I had come and promptly put in his appearance. By hard work I talked him to sleep at ten o'clock. Then I talked to the family till midnight.

Mon. 26. Slept but little, up at dawn. Walked to Hopewell church and back before breakfast. After breakfast Morris drove me to Mc Connelville to Worley's. It is quite cool. Called at Es. Wallace's. Dinner at Worley's. After dinner I walked out to see Mrs. James. It was raining when I reached there. She was alone. I

May Told her of her son's work and his visit to us and we talked till the rain was over. She wanted to drive me down to town but I declined and walked back to Worley's. It is very cool and some are wearing over-coats. We talked till midnight.

Tu. 27. I slept little and feel weak. After breakfast I called on Mrs. Felch and Dr. Maylor. Saw a few spits of snow. Many with over-coats. My only consolation was that they shivered most. Took train for Waterford. At Stockport got a letter from Annie enclosing one from F. Leaning H. Revels, Chicago offering to examine manuscript of the story, "Only a Christian". The clouds are dark and wintry-looking. People with over-coats and wraps shiver and shrink about the fires. I am in a suit of thin, gauzy sicilian with a million wind-doves. At Waterford at 10:30^{am} wrote card to Annie and then walked out to Sarah's. The air got so cold fires were made and much alarm expressed lest it freeze. We sat and talked till 9:30. It seemed like a wintry evening and the glow of the wood fire was very pleasant.

Wed. 28. Quite cool - a little frost. Went to station and took train to Lowell. Spent day and night with Dr. Harris.

Th. 29. Took train to Roxbury Off and went with P. L. Pugh in his buggy to Mt. Ararat where we examined the monuments of white bronze he wished to see. At twelve drove on up to Mary Gatewoods. She was alone and sick and I gave her some medicine. Took out pie and bread and butter to Mr. Pugh who ate while I worked with patient till she got better. Then we drove to T. Blackmer's and I walked to Mellor's and stayed all night. In this quiet room I slept well, redeeming the fast.

Fri.

30. Intended to call on the neighbors below but concluded they would all be going to the exercises at Stockport. I wrote letters and talked in the forenoon and in the afternoon walked on the hill back of Mellor's. Perley came back from the Decoration and brought a letter from home containing two others. Answered one.

Sat.

31. Up, bathed, breakfasted and off to Stockport. Rode part way with Ike Naylor. Soon as we drove up to Beswick and Scott's and before we got out saw A. P. Aug. who spoke but turned at right angles and left, as if in a hurry to shun me. I went on to call on Hugh Cornsley but finding him in bed I went on to see Sue and talked till nearly noon. Then went to Parson's Hotel and got dinner. After dinner went up to McDermott's store in front of which I talked for an hour with several old acquaintances then walked across to Mrs. Walters', rapped sharply twice and got no response. I opened the screen door walked through the house and finding no one came out and went across a street.

May

One of the by-standers called my attention to Mrs. Walker sitting by the up-stairs window. I think she must have heard me and how could she help seeing me? I left. Later in day called on Hugh Cornuley. I was shocked at his appearance. He looked like one who had been drunk a week. His whole face was puffed, his eyes red and watery and his speech muffled. He is aging fast and is a striking illustration of the effects of dissipation. His wife came in and talked for two or three minutes. I soon left for post-office where I had a long talk with Henry Geddes, who told me of his son's ruin. Then went to livery stable and talked for an hour with Tom. Then went to hotel and got newspaper. Then to Mc Dermott's grocery. Everything is dead in Stockport but crime. Later called at Tom McHugh's. We talked till 11:30 and then went to bed.

June.

Sun.

1. Up at dawn and took a long walk. Back and wrote a long time before anyone got up. I feel that I must get away from this hated town. Later - called on Mrs. Daugherty - stopped for a little while in street at Mrs. Walker's door and talked with her but declined her invitation to eat roast fish. Called on Mrs. John Mc Dermott and Joe P. Kean. Returned to Tom's, talked till 11:30 and retired.

Mon.

2. Cool and breezy. Up early and rode with Tom McHugh to Mc Connelville stopping for half an hour at Perry Works and on to Morley's. After dinner Allie Pyle called me to go to telephone and answered Tom McHugh. Got in and rode with him to telephone office. Was told a letter awaited me at Stockport. He thought it important and sent Bill James up in buggy to bring it. Tom's kindness over shadows that of his townsmen. I found it was nothing serious - several letters from home forwarded. Spent the evening about town, mostly at Worley. Retired at 11 P.M.

Sun.

3.

Very tired but fresh. Perry Work came and took me out to his house where I had a tedious hard job on my hands. This is a complex situation. The patient has grown so confirmed in grasping greed that it now requires all his strength and diligence to maintain an uncertain fight with the dollar. His palsied hand is still clutching for more, while his heart condemns him for thinking of spending a cent. He asked my charge. I told him whatever he saw fit to give me for the two calls I would give to charity and leave the amount to himself. He replied he would give what he thought it would be worth to his wife - a novel and unpatented idea. On way back I called on Wm. James and spent two hours pleasantly. I took supper with him and his wife and he drove me down to Malta. Went to Worley's and stayed till morning. Played a good deal with little Florence who seemed very fond of me. The night was cool and I slept fairly.

Wed.

Brilliant day. At 9:30 A.M. took North bound train for Columbus. I am

June. very weary. At Gainesville at 11:20. Went to Englander's to try for a cut rate ticket - failed. At Columbus at 2:30 P.M. Went to Maud's and got supper. Slept better than usual.

Th. 5. Started on tramp up around Clintonville and walked till sunset. Got supper at restaurant and took satchel and went to Maud's. Took bath and went to bed later. Slept fairly.

Fri. 6. Up and wrote letter to Arnie. At ten A.M. Took car to North end of line. Walked to Clintonville and saw the blacks. Mr. Bright and Mr. Pegg wished to show me. Passed the home of Mr. Chestnut but did not stop as I did yesterday. Walked far to the east following Oakland Av. and going beyond the Big 4 R.R., stopped for two hours with Prof. Tilly Buck to Smith's coal office. Then took the road toward the Summit Addition. Called at Mr. Roloson's who told me of a vacant piece North of East Broadway. Then walked on down the road and passed over a vacant piece to which I had been referred. Then struck across broken and ugly ground full of deep ravines toward Pentecostal Park. Called on a good many people examined a good many pieces of ground, found nothing to interest me and growing very weary took the car at sunset and reached Maud's after dark. It has been very hot all day. I find this business very exhausting and very disappointing.

June

Sat. 7.

Rained in the night. Cloudy and rainy this morning. Reached Wesley Black at 7:30 in a dull rain. At 8:30 it had ceased to rain and I walked to Clintonville, stopping to talk where I could learn anything. By noon I was very tired but walked to car sheds and took car to restaurant near depot. Then went out beyond Columbus to see Mr. Price's property then by car to Linden, a pretty little place with a nice school-house but little business. Two little stores - no pavements and no great interest evident in anything but its contention for primacy with its twin sister Walden which joins it on the side next to Columbus. I still prefer North Columbus to this section. I have seen nothing I want to buy. I wrote this over to Carrie to come on and though I shall continue looking will wait till she comes before I do any buying. - Possibly not then.

Sun.

8. Very cool and windy. I spend the whole long day at Brads.

Mon.

9. Bright and cool this morning. Off North. Stopped at Wilson's and delayed till one P.M., getting dinner there. Then walked to Clintonville, stopped at Bright's blacksmith shop, then went and examined his two lots. Then walked to Legg's, to inquire about a lot he owned at Clintonville. I had my long walk for nothing as I found no one at home. I went down to his dairy and finding no one took the cattle path down to the river. What a delightful, shady and secluded ed place. The solid, beaten path stole away among the great trees until I almost fancied I stood among the great beaches of my boyhood. I walked on to the Olefentary, then returning part way, sat down upon the fence and listening to the warble of the birds and the melodious hum of the cicada. I wondered why the world abandoned such beauties for position, wealth or fame. To complete the picture a great gray squirrel played unscarred in the great beach beside me. A bobolink thrilled the air with his music. From the cornfield near by came the dull, authoritative command of the driver plowing the corn. I rested and walked back, stopping in the pasture to admire the most beautiful bobolink I had ever seen. It was very sunny and followed me some distance as if guarding a nest. I spent a few minutes with this beauty and then resumed my tiresome tramp. I sat upon a log for a little bit taking leave of the soft melody of bird and bee and insect which was so pleasant to my weary ear which had heard only the hum of streets after I reached North High. I thought of home and all I held dear. God bless and keep them and direct me. I walked up to the street turned toward Worthington and went on almost to that place examining properties and asking questions. When the sun was quite low I turned and walked back to North Columbus, prospecting all the way. Of course I was tired. As it was late I stopped at a restaurant and got my supper. Then took car to Broad where I found a letter from Annie and one from Counsel stating he had passed in Latin and German. I was too tired to sleep well.

Sun.

10. Cool and windy. Took car to Braunn's to inquire about an acre lot he offered for $2000. on East Broadway. Went thence to Mr. Jas. M. Lorin's office. He was not there and I walked some distance to the M. & M. Building where I found him. Then took car to end of line North. Went to see a Mr. Thorpe in Clintonville. Then to see Mr. Loring the carpenter who has an acre near by. Could do nothing. I have grown very weary walking in the hot sun, but start again to find parties on East Broad and after a long wearisome hunt walked down Washington Av. making inquiries. I pass on by the Barracks and walk to Neal Park where I stop to witness a game of baseball between Columbus and Indianapolis. It was partisan to a shameful degree and Columbus deserved the defeat she got. I went home very weary. Found a letter from Annie saying she would come on tomorrow's train.

Wed.

11.

Started off early, called to see Jas. M. Lorin and some others, then went to depot and met Annie. We ate a lunch and took High St. car to North end. Walked to North Broadway and on to Rotorou's where we sat an hour and talked. Then we walked on to the North High car line and took car to Mand's. She was much surprised to find Annie with me. We were weary and retired late. I slept but little.

Th.

car to the University, visited the buildings, rambled over the grounds and drank at the pretty spring by the little lake. Called on President Thompson and made inquiries relative to the matriculation of our two older boys which we contemplated in the future.

Then took the car and went back to Mand's for dinner. In the afternoon we went to the Capitol and Annex and spent several hours pleasantly there going all over the buildings and up into the dome during a thunderstorm. We had a fine view of city and surroundings and late in P.M. we went back to Mand's. I was very tired.
Retired late and slept fairly.

Fri.

13.

Hot. Off early to North Columbus. Walked on to East Broadway and thence to Summit St. Stopping at Mr. Rolozon's. Then walked on around the piece of ground on Catland
Av. we thought of buying then on to Mrs.
Williams's on ^{East} North Broadway then to Hight St. and took car to the north as far as township line. Then we walked back to East Broadway and on to Rolozon's and made offer on the plot we had looked at. Thence to car line and to Mand's.

Sat.

14.

We got up early and I went to cor. of Hight and Broad to meet Mr. Hardy and Mr. Rolozon and arrange for deed to property. Came back and Annie and I went to Camp Chase to attend the dedication of the Confederate monument given by Mr. Harrison of Cincinnati, O. The monument consists of a stone arch surmounted by a statue of a Confederate soldier in grey bronze. The only inscription is the word "Americans" in large letters on the side of the arch. The program was badly managed. The flowers were abundant and fine. The speaking good.

Among the speakers Marcus Torg of Nashville was most entertaining. He wore his entire suit of Confederate grey including his little military cap which he did not remove.

One thing struck me. It was the strong contrast between the enthusiastic earnestness of the Southern speakers and the more formal and quiet methods on the Northern side.

Col. Knowles who had planned and executed this project was the hero of the occasion and deserved the warm recognition he received.

The car service was abominable. We got back weary and wet with sweat.

Sun.

15

Very hot. Maud and Annie went to Children's day service on the avenue close to home. Brad and I were to go to hear Dr. Gladden but his conservative slowness compelled me to abandon the idea. I sat and wrote letters till dinner.

After dinner went to Olentangy "Park" for two hours. Then walked over the "Summit" and back to city stopping at several places to talk and learn all I could of the locality. I got to Brad's near seven P.M. and as the family had not come I went to city and got supper and then to Dr. Gladden's church. I was determined not to be hindered or disappointed this time. Dr. Gladden preached a good, eloquent sermon on clouds. Brad and Annie came over later and joined me after service.

June

Mon. 16. Went to Rolocon and he and I went to the lot and tried to find the stakes. Later I went back to his house going through the woods with him to look for trees to plant. He took me to the car line and I reached Bradi at dinner. After dinner Annie and I went to Rolocon and on to Sager's and then to Luchtenberg's where we looked at his house hastily and then walked to Centangy Park, where we spent two hours pleasantly. Took car and reached home late, got supper and chatted till ten P. M.

Tu.

17. Went to city and called at office of Luchtenberg in Wyandotte Building. Then went on to call on Rolocon and Sager. Made contract with Sager to plow and seed lot. Then came home found door locked. Sat two hours and then went away. I was very weary and sleepy and not having even a chair to sit upon I walked down electric road about one fourth mile climbed the big rail fence and lay down on the clean grass and rested. The day seems so long. I feel like I have accomplished all I expect to do now and want to start homeward. I came back at 6 P. M. and found Annie and Maud had come. After supper I went to a tent service on Broad St. for half an hour then came back and we all talked till 11 P. M.

Wed.

18. Off late to city. Mr. Hardy told me the abstract was not done. Mr. Rolocon and I went to abstract office and they promised it by five P. M. Went back at five P. M. and waited half an hour for Rolocon then took abstract and went to Hardy's office where I found Roloson and we sat on the steps of Deshler's Bank till twilight examining the abstract. Came home in a drizzling rain weary and hoarse. Looked over abstract a little while with Annie. Went to bed late and slept little.

Th.

19. Went to city and saw Mr. Hardy, got deed and gave check. Then went to stores and got a few things for children. Home at noon. After noon I walked on East Brum St. with Annie looking at the fine residences and pretty yards. Then went to store and got a few things for M and ^{2nd} Brad. Came back early to rest. At night went up to the tent again. The services are peculiar. I have gone several evenings but do not stay long. The behavior of the boys and young men is shameful.

Fri.

20. Cloudy and dull. Leave Brad's at 6:10 A.M. Leave depot for home at 7:05 A.M. on Big Four. Have a pleasant trip to Cincinnati which we reach at 10:30. Transfer to L & N. at 11:40 and after an uneventful trip reach Nashville at 8:50 P.M. Got off at Link's Depot took car at transfer station and reached home at 9:30 and in five minutes was called upon to visit a patient. Got to bed near midnight and up no more till morning.

Sat.

21. Spent day in answering the accumulated mail and setting things to rights again.

Sun.

22. Called out of bed to go to Hudson's. Back to breakfast at 10 A.M. Entertained company in afternoon and read. In evening had long talk with Gatewood and Counsel explaining to them our plans and wishes. They seemed to be interested and I thought Counsel was more interested than usual. In the night was called up to visit Mr. Cundall.

June

Mon. 23.

Called early to W. J. Hudson's. Then assisted Annie in putting up our journals till two o'clock. Cut docks in the meadow till night.

Tu. 24.

Helped a little about the washing and wrote letters.

Wed. 25.

Very disagreeable day. The wind blew with incessant fierceness from the South carrying clouds of dust on its hot and suffocating tide. I went to the city and called upon a number of real estate men attempting to interest them in the sale of my home. I found the same listlessness and indolent apathy everywhere. I might as well have been addressing the mummies of Thebes. I came home drenched with sweat and disgusted. Wrote some in afternoon.

Th. 26.

Made a number of calls in the morning, then visited Mr. J. C. Morrison's son Richard riding out with the father and walking back. Read in the afternoon.

Fri. 27.

In the forenoon worked on Edward Pennock's shoes. In the afternoon went to city, got material and prepared leggins for him.

Sat. 28.

Entertaining company and doing odd tasks.

June. ^{885 1/2} throughout day. In the afternoon had some rain with a great deal of wind. As usual the winds sweep from the South and soon as the rain has fallen lick it up like a monster and carry it away.

Sun. 29. Cloudy with a continuous South wind. I read and write.

Mon. 30. I am not well and put in the day at reading and writing.

July

Tu. 1. The same.

Wed. 2. Helped a little with washing and wrote letters.

Th. 3. Read "Wormwood" by Marie Corelli. The abominable book is well written.

Fri. 4. Most people have gone away to the parks. We remain at home and pursue the dull round of usual, everyday life - reading, writing, &c. At night the two older boys attended the Twentieth Century Club meeting at Dawson's.

Sat. 5. Visited patients in the morning and hunted a man to mow meadow. Then helped clean house rest of day with occasional stops to entertain callers. The weather is hot and oppressive.

Sun. 6. Still hot with South wind. Spent the day out entertaining company and reading under the big elm.
